AN AMERICAN ATTACK

When a San Francisco newspaper recently printed a long story to the effect that "this summer" some 1,000 second-generation natives were going to attack the secret order in California, it made an un-American attack on a group of loyal American citizens.

ced a letter recently proved that the whole story was a pure fabrication on the part of the writer. The man who had written the story was delighted over his own bit of intellectual athletics, but the denial did not receive the notice that one would expect. To make the incident even more unfortunate, the "interview" was printed at length in several Eastern newspapers. It was an ominous fact that their press was being used in this manner.

Undeniably, this story did more than its part in distorting the natural and proper impression of these people and in sowing the seeds of racial hatred. The second generation though they are as loyal a group of citizens as any that we can think of to find in America, are satisfactorily harmonious faces of a different hue than those of most of their fellow citizens and in their task in preserving the peace they are made doubly hard by absurd or malicious stories such as the one printed in this city.

The story, no doubt, aroused some finger in the breast of uninformed American citizens. And in that story the seeds of racial hatred were sown, but their germination was delayed. The fostering of such racial hatred is in-American in spirit and in fact. In one instance that we know of in the recent election in the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, is the guarantee, given by the framers of those documents, that it is right and proper that the fantastic tale in the San Francisco paper was promptly shown to be false, but it is even more important that stories be killed before they ever reach the printed page.

FUTILE MEASURES?

In the California legislature are pending several bills which seemed to be more or less directly at the members of the secret order. On the very eve of their very existence are being discussed. Through their effect on the first generation, these laws will thwart the efforts of the second generation.

It would be futile, by the language of the bills would prohibit "aliens ineligible to citizenship- from engaging in certain practices. Because of the fact that the members of this order are, at the time, ineligible to citizenship in California at first generation Japanises, it is easy to see that they would be the ones to be excluded. Because of the fact that they are ineligible at the first generation, they would be futile.

In the first place, the members of the first generation cannot be excluded from engaging in certain activities during any of those activities that they are engaged in. The majority of them cannot engage in any of the activities that they are engaged in.

It would thus seem that such restrictive measures, if passed, would soon become dead letters which would only cut out one of the many existing groups of citizens. By eliminating the activity of the second generation.

The second generation is just as much a part of the constitution and the Declaration of Independence, as the guarantee, given by the framers of those documents, that it is right and proper that the fantastic tale in the San Francisco paper was promptly shown to be false, but it is even more important that stories be killed before they ever reach the printed page.

A HOMECOMING EVENT

To some a year and a half might seem a long time to wait, but to those members of the Seattle chapter making plans for the bicentennial convention of the Japanese-American Citizens League it seems not too long a time to perfect all details for the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the organization.

A homecoming event it will be for the year in 1930 that the first biennial convention of the League was held in Seattle. It was not too long ago that the members of that group were delegates to the convention that year, but they had faith in their organization.

That faith that was misplaced has been amply shown by the two national conventions since then. The number of those present at the last convention, the largest in the West, is a measure of the faith that the organizers have placed in the organization.

With the united support of the district conventions, with the high accomplishment of San Francisco as a large host and with the own enthusiasm to gear on their work, the Seattle chapter is ready to make the fourth biennial convention a homecoming that will be a memorable one.
