Masaoka told of the situation particularly affecting Negro and Mexican racial groups in this country and declared:

"The fight is not yet won for minorities. Although minority groups have made greater gains during the recent war than they did in the first world war, it means that these groups must work even harder now to try to hold those gains."

The ADC legislative director served as guest lecturer and chairman of a discussion group on minorities before the Institute. Other discussion groups held speeches on China, Brazil, Russia and Indonesia by leaders of various fields of the country.

Officially opening the Institute was Pearl W. Buck, Nobel Prize winner and president of the East and West association, who spoke of the entire assemblage on "Where We Live and Work."

The Post noted that President Truman had stated the case for the evacuee claims bill in a message to Congress which he declared:

"It would, in my opinion, be a tragic anomaly if the nation which was the first to acclaim and decorate with honors the brave Nisei troops who fought so valiantly at each sacrifice overseas, while, on the other hand, it ignored and left unredressed the very real and grave losses which some of them, together with their immediate families, have suffered as a result of their confinement in the midst of that same war."

Coast Magazine Notes Nisei Have Man-Sized Task in Reestablishing Selves on Coast

A study of California's Nisei is made by FORTNIGHT, a California magazine, in its civic affairs department of the July 28 issue.

Titled "California Japanese—The Long Road Back," the article discusses the conditions and events that led first to the mass evacuation of 1942 and then to the return.

Nisei Americans still have a "man-sized job" ahead reestablishing themselves, the article states with housing a particularly desperate problem.

"Restrictive covenants force them into segregated, overcrowded and undesirable areas," says FORTNIGHT. The article points out that in Los Angeles, where 32% of the country's whole Japanese American population resides, restrictive covenants are placed upon 75 per cent of the city's residential districts.

In business and industry, the article says, California prejudice is as strong as ever. Although about 80 per cent of the Japanese employed are employed, they are pushed into less desirable occupations and in San Francisco almost 50 per cent of those employed are domestics.

There is less social discrimination now than before the war, the article says. The young Nisei still finds his life constricted by the same unwritten laws governing other minorities.

The San Mateo Sales Realtors' board, whose spokesman, Harry Casakadan, recently declared he would fight to prevent non-white residents from establishing residence on the peninsula, is due to take an official position on the question soon.

The initiation of the Council for Civic Unity's clearing house, which would bring together sellers and buyers," is contingent upon the decision reached by the realtors.

Rep. Judd Introduces Bill To Eliminate Race Restrictions From Nationality Act of U.S.

WASHINGTON—Introduction into the House of Representatives of a bill to eliminate race restrictions from the Nationality Act was disclosed today by the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee.

The bill, H. R. 4418, is a companion measure to the joint McGraith-Green bill for naturalization in the Senate, the ADC office said.

Presented to the House on the session, H. R. 4418 was introduced by Representative Walter H. Wood of Minnesota, Rep., majority member of the influential Foreign Affairs Committee.

The House bill is identical to S. 1650, according to the ADC office, and would provide for the naturalization of persons legally admitted to the United States.

As with its companion bill in the Senate, H. R. 4418 would amend Section 303 of the Nationality Act of 1940 to read as follows:

"There is to become a naturalized citizen under the provisions of this chapter shall not be denied or delayed because of race."

Based on drafts submitted by the Anti-Discrimination Committee, H. R. 4418 is supported by the National Committee for Equality in Naturalization whose active chairman, Edward J. Ennis, has been cooperating closely with the ADC, according to Mike Masako, national ADC legislative director.

"This is the first time that we have had identical bills for naturalization introduced in both the House and Senate," Masako stated.

"Both the sponsors in the House and the Senate are responsible citizens who enjoy considerable respect and prestige among their colleagues. They have assured us of their active interest in these bills."

Introduction of the bills before the congressional recess provides an opportunity during the interim to deal educational work, inasmuch as which we hope the person of Japanese ancestry will join us," the ADC legislative director stated.

The sponsor of the House bill, Congressman Judd, is a physician and surgeon and served as a medical consultant and hospital superintendent in China for many years. One of the most prominent lay churchmen in the United States, Dr. Judd is now serving his third term in Congress.

Yamada has been asked by the Soakly River Legion to serve as a junior counselor for the 1948 meeting.

JACL-ADC Wins Fight Against Exit Permits for Issei Group

WASHINGTON—Exit permits will no longer be required for Japanese resident nationals who desire to return to the Territory of Hawaii, the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee said today.

In a letter from Joseph Savoretti, assistant commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the ADC office was informed that the Justice Department and the State Department have concurred in the acceptance of ADC suggestions to waive the exit permit requirements.

"The restriction of the subject, this Service has recently concurred in a waiver of the exit permit requirements for the Issei Japanese resident nationals who are permanent residents of the United States returning to the Territory of Hawaii, Savoretti said.

Civic Unity Group May Initiate Using Agency for Minorities

WOOD CITY, Calif.—In a fight now against racial discrimination against residents of the Redwood City Council, the group will set up a non-profit organization to help those who are not members of non-white groups get out of the area.

The San Mateo county health officers refuse to sell to less than 100 persons residents. According to Mrs. Isenberg, executive secretary of the Civic Unity council, the group will set up a non-profit organization to help those who are not members of non-white groups get out of the area.

"This will eliminate the great inconvenience and hardship brought about by the Issei in cases of transportation permits for Issei business men," Masako added.

Code of Ethics

It is part of the real estate operator's code of ethics that no home in any area designated as a "desirable" neighborhood can be sold to persons of any but "white" ancestry.

His "code of ethics" is surely strangely named. For in its name are committed many sins of inhumanity against individuals who are, in all but race or religion, Americans of worth and integrity and decency.

It was doubtless in extension of this code of ethics that Harry B. Carskadon, Atherton real estate dealer, last month said that Negroes and Chinese should not be allowed to live in the peninsula area south of San Francisco "because there is no cheap land on the peninsula."

It was probably a remark in which many real estate operators concurred. The tendency today in real estate has been to open up increasing areas for residential purposes, all of which are stringently covered by racially restrictive covenants.

But Carskadon's ill-considered remarks, fortunately, were given the wide publicity deserved by any statements so inherently dangerous. And the racial firework he set off still rumbled throughout the peninsula he tried to save "for whites only."

The indignant replies from persons prompted not only in this but also other papers in California. A few of the replies disagreed with the spirit of Carskadon's statements; most disagreed with the substance of it.

This week the Redwood City Council for Civic Unity came forward with a sound, solid proposal of its own to combat not only Carskadon's suggestions but also to fight the spreading evils of the restrictive covenants.

The council proposed that should the south San Mateo realtors' board, for whom Carskadon is spokesman, continue its position of keeping all persons of minority ancestry in racial ghettos, the council would itself provide a housing bureau to provide rental and purchasing opportunities for them. The bureau would, it was announced, be a nonprofit organization to bring together sellers and buyers.

It may be that the Redwood City council will in this way provide an effective way of combatting the code of ethics which denies decent housing opportunities to a large portion of our population.

The plan might well be put into motion in other parts of the country as a method by which the restrictive covenant can be defeated on the local level.

It is fortunate that on the peninsula, as in every other part of the country, there are thousands of persons who have their own code of ethics based upon humanity and decency, instead of dollars and cents and the price of property. It is persons such as these who will, in the same way, decide whether houses and land are more valuable than human dignity.

The question of the racially restrictive covenant is coming to the fore as one of the major social questions of the day. Its illegality must eventually be settled by the courts in the light of the country's growing awareness of the rights and needs of persons of minority ancestry.

This week in "Among These Rights," a newsletter published by the San Francisco Council for Civic Unity, Edward Howden points out that Carskadon's ill-tempered and hasty outburst has resulted in the kind of "trouble" that he predicted would occur if Negroes and whites were allowed to move into the same neighborhoods.

Says Edward Howden: "... only two days after the Carskadon statement had been aired the first threats of 'trouble' descended upon two peninsula families, and a day later one of these families was pressured out of their place of residence. ... Now ... it is very clear that Harry B. Carskadon's irresponsible fight talk has actually encouraged the kind of ill feeling and coercion predicted by CGU's Stalck Chamberlain, Jr., two days before. Whether the Carskadons of the bay area will call the shots from here on will depend mainly on whether people of good will are going to make themselves heard decisively and unswervingly on this whole sordid issue."

442nd Reactivated

The reactivation of the 442nd Infantry Regiment in Hawaii as an Army reserve unit this week apparently has nothing to do with war scars or international affairs. Apparently the decision to reactivate the regiment, one of the most famous in American military history, is part of the Army's program of keeping alive famous units. It is held that it is easier to maintain discipline in a unit which has a proud and honorable record than in one which has no history at all. The men who belong to a famous combat organization take pride in the unit's colors and develop a self-interest in maintaining the organization's record.

The 442nd, like the Rangers and the Marine Raiders, earned its reputation the hard way. The record of the 442nd and of the 100th Battalion, which is one of its component units in the new reserve organization, was made the hard way in the hills and mountains of Italy. It is the bitter winter of the Vosges in France that the reputation of the 442nd and the 100th Battalion was made at the cost of more than 600 dead and 2600 wounded in battle. It should not be forgotten that these men, who came from the islands of Hawaii and the cities and farms of the mainland United States, fought a two-front war. They fought the enemy in the field and they fought the purveyors of race hatred at home. Their victory over the first foe is a matter of military history and is punctuated with the thousands of decorations awarded to the men of the regiment. Their victory over the second foe has not been as conclusive but the triumph is evident in the everyday lives of the veterans of the 442nd and of all other Japanese Americans.

The reactivation of the 442nd Infantry Regiment at Honolulu this week may be interpreted as a routine Army activity. It is hoped that it never will be more than that. The United Nations organization has been created out of this world conflict as an instrument to insure the peaceful arbitration and settlement of all international disputes. It is to be hoped that the peoples of the world will use this instrument which they have fashioned for the purposes of a permanent peace.

Basic Needs

The New York state supreme court has denied the motion of three Negro war veterans to join Stuyvesant Town, a Metropolitan Life housing project, from practicing racial discrimination in the selection of tenants.

Stuyvesant Town is being built upon land condemned by the city, under a contract let to the city and the Metropolitan Life insurance company. It was because of this that the plaintiffs asked that the project be considered a public undertaking.

In his decision, Justice Felix C. Frankfurter said:

"Clearly, housing accommodation is not a recognized civil right. It is neither a violation of any provision of the federal and state constitutions to refuse such accommodations on the grounds of race, color or religion; nor is it a violation of any statutory provision applicable to Stuyvesant Town."

If housing accommodation is so "clearly" not a "recognized" civil right, perhaps it is time that it should be.

The basic needs needs of the individual citizen should be recognized as civil rights—the right to eat, to make a living, to find housing. And in instances where prejudiced public opinion would deny an individual these rights because of race and religion, it appears to us clearly the right and duty of government and the law to protect the individual so discriminated against.

Rising Wind in British Columbia

It is nearly two years since V-J day but Canadian and Japanese ancestry still are excluded from the home business and farms and fishing villages from which they were evacuated in the spring of 1942. Although there are definite signs of abatement of the hate which helped engender race restrictions in British Columbia, the restrictions are still in effect under an interim policy imposed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King's government.

Just as California politicians dominate America's national policy towards persons of Japanese ancestry, a group of British Columbia white supremacists, led by late Premier Bennett, who was elected in 1936, "No Japs from the Rockies to the sea", continue to wield undue influence in the Dominion government's attitude toward the evacuated Japanese Canadians.

The unreasonable feature of this Dominion policy has been the refusal to permit the evacuees to return to the British Columbia coast although any possible military justification for the exclusion policy evaporated long before V-J day.

There have been indications that Prime Minister King would have been anxious the Japanese Canadians but that political considerations involving the leadership of his Liberal Party have prevented him from forestalling such liberalization. It is the contention of Ian MacKenzie, Minister of the Interior, and the Canadian Veterans Minister in the Mackenzie King cabinet, that the Liberal party campaigned on an election promise that persons of Japanese ancestry would not be permitted to return to the British Columbia coast. King himself threatened to quit his cabinet post if the present ban is lifted. Consequently, Prime Minister King recently announced the government's interim policy toward the Canadian Nisei which rescinded most of the restrictions on travel and residence which had been invoked against the group but maintained the exclusion policy forbidding the return of the evacuees to their former homes.

In contrast to the Liberals and the right-wing Progressive Conservative who have opposed the return of the Canadian evacuees to the coast, the Canadian Federation of Labor Progressives in British Columbia on the question, the Canadian Federation of Education (CFE), a strong third party with social and economic objectives which are in line with the New Deal, has consistently fought for justice for the Japanese Canadian group.

The CFE in British Columbia has not bowed to political advantage or expediency in its stand on the Japanese Canadian question. It remains the only political party which is openly opposed to British Columbia's policy of denying the franchise in Canadian citizenship of Japanese ancestry for reasons of race. As a result the Japanese Canadian group has been able to present a united front against CFE candidates in local British Columbia elections which has resulted in CFE candidates having been successful in many of these elections indicates that the actual force may be closer to the surface. It is the contention of the British Columbia that the uncompromising hatred of Ian MacKenzie and the right-wing Conservatives remains the only political party which is openly opposed to British Columbia's policy of denying the franchise in Canadian citizenship of Japanese ancestry for reasons of race.

It is the contention of the British Columbia that the uncompromising hatred of Ian MacKenzie and the right-wing Conservatives remains the only political party which is openly opposed to British Columbia's policy of denying the franchise in Canadian citizenship of Japanese ancestry for reasons of race.

Behind the racism in British Columbia are economic considerations similar to those which fostered two types of racial opposition against persons of Japanese ancestry in California. In the first, there is the economic consideration of the balance between the Japanese Canadian and California.

The second is the little known but equally important objective of the former White Canada Association in Vancouver and such groups as the Joint Immigration Committee, the Native Sons and the Asiatic Exclusion League in California.

Behind the racial opposition in British Columbia are the individuals and groups who have taken over the fish goods and hotel businesses. Los Angeles, Vancouver, the truck farms in the Fraser Valley and the fishing boats on the coast. The Japanese Canadian of the tangible assets of the Japanese Canadian evacuees through forced sale procedures, as well as the refusal to permit the Nisei to return, are indications that British Columbia is still in the process of reconstruction of the economic structure maintained by the Japanese evacuees in the past. This purpose has been the large extent and amount of the large personal assets from Canadian loss to the Nisei to Japan.

The general program of the government to give the Nisei nearly half of the amount of the assets of the Japanese Canadian and Quebec. In such provinces the evacuees have been able to obtain only marginal employment and the general disapproval of the program has been found persistent which is consistent with the policy of the group.

Four years ago, in 1941, there was a report of violence against persons of Japanese ancestry in British Columbia. In 1942, these persons were evacuated to the interior of the province and maintained a constant vigil against the grating of the right-wing groups of the East Asiatic Association, the fundamental right of the right-wing groups to be heard to Canadian citizenship of Chinese and Japanese origin in British Columbia through a similar restriction.

The leaders in the two committees executed the following officers for their supporters committees: F. La Jara-Alamosa, Nisei and latest meetings were held at the La Jara Budding church.

Meetings from Denver to attend these meetings were Z. Kanegaye, chairman of the Denver supporters group, and Takano.

Nisei Jewelry Firm Files Incorporation Papers in Ohio

CINCINNATI, O. — Incorporation papers for Ken Displays, Inc., manufacturers of jewelry and optical displays in Cincinnati, have been filed in Columbus by Ken Matsunaga, Henry Ishikawa and Masao Igasaki.

Matsunaga, president of the firm which has been operating a partnership since January, operated a similar store in Los Angeles before the war.

Igasaki, vice president, practiced law in Los Angeles and during the war was an instructor in Japanese at Bradley, Ohio, and at Oklahoma A&M. Ishikawa, secretary-treasurer, was a staff sergeant in the army.

Eight of the store's employees are veterans of the 442nd central Postal Directory.

Ken Displays were represented at the National Association of Japanese Jewelers convention in Chicago last week, and at Oklahoma A&M July 28 to 30 with two displays at the Congress hotel.

Nisei Vets Team Wins in Watsonville

WATSONVILLE, Calif. — A three-run rally in the third inning enabled the Nisei Vets to upset the resident, first ball champions of the city softball league, 4-2 in last week's crucial game. The early scoring came on a safety, two walks, and a couple of errors. A pair of bingles accounted for another tally in the sixth frame. C. M. Muraoka, the winning pitcher, struck out eight batters in the seven-inning contest.

The Nisei team's victory, their straight for the Nisei in second half play, strengthened their hold on first place in the B Division. Two more games remain to be played before the end of the circuit.

Hawaii Players

Several members of the All-Hawaii Stars, who won two games in Utah this week on their return from the tour, are considering playing for next season. Soutpape Hieira Hirota who pitched a fourth victory over the Open All-Stars team at the Hotel at John A. Fitch park on July 29 showed himself to be as good as any hurler currently pitching in the pioneer league. Hirota also held San Jose's Southside Market, considered one of California's top semi-pro clubs, to three hits.

Jimmy Waga, smart keystone catcher for the All-Hawaii, is probably one of the few Nisei ball players who are ready for pro ball. Waga proved his merit during the war years in the league when he played against some of the top ball stars and proved he could hit major league pitching. He also was one of the few Hawaiian players to hit consistently against the San Francisco Seals this spring.

Verdugo Higa, power infielder with the All-Hawaii, is currently leading the Hawaii league in batting average. He is being followed by Muramoto, center-fielder who has been hitting the ball solidly in mainland games with the Nisei. Higa is second to Higa in the Hawaii league with a .394 average.

Fredy Ching, the 146-pound Chinese American pitcher, who plays with the All-Hawaii, is one of the two players on the team who has had pro experience. Ching pitched for West Texas-Northern League last year, while Bill Aspegren, left-fielder with the Salt Lake Bees in the Pioneer league.

Broad Jumper

One game of the University of Hawaii, the only Nisei ever to jump 55 in competition in the broad jump, is reportedly considering dropping his efforts from four mainland universities, Kansas State, Ohio State, Illinois and Dayton, Ohio, to the efforts of four mainland universities recently at the National AAU meet in Lincoln, Neb., when he jumped 52 feet 1 inch to take second place in the junior division. Oyeda is conceded a good chance of making the Olympic games next year, along with other athletes, Diego State, the outstanding athlete in the event, and Wright of USC.

Claims Title

Sad San Ichinose, manager of Dado Marino, is expected to lodge a formal claim to the world's flyweight championship for his protégé, following the action of the British board of boxing control on the stripping Jackie Peterson of Scotland of his title. Peterson, scheduled to defend his title against Marino at Glasgow, postponed the bout two times because of illness and finally failed to weigh in on the day of the championship bout, thus giving Ichinose a claim to the title. Peterson was overweight and unable to scale down to 112 pounds. If Marino wins the title, it is possible that one of the several crack Nisei flyweights in Hawaii may get a chance at it.

District Council To Call Meeting

JACL-ADC Requests Cessation Of Deportation Orders Until Congress Acts on Legislation

WASHINGTON—In a move to halt the deportation of Japanese ancestry until final decision of Congress on H. R. 3566, the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee this week asked the chairmen of the Senate and House Immigration committees to request cessation of deportation orders from the Attorney General until 1945.

In letters to Senator Chapman Revercomb, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Immigration, and Congressman Frank Feltus, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization, the ADC requested the intervention of their "good offices" to prevent the deportation of certain aliens.

Pointing out that H. R. 3566 stay of deportation bill, was passed unanimously by the House on July 7, and that "we have high hopes that the Senate will concur" in favoring the legislation, the ADC declared:

"We believe that those who will be benefited by the provisions of this bill should be protected during this interim period between the passage of the 80th Congress."

H. R. 3566 would give the Attorney General discretionary power to stay deportation of aliens inadmissible to citizenship and would affect approximately 2000 persons of Japanese ancestry, according to the ADC office.

The bill is now tabled in the Senate Subcommittee on Immigration pending a sweeping review of the immigration situation of the United States.

"A considerable number of persons of Japanese descent, most of whom had no private life outside of Japan, are subject for deportation if the Attorney General decides to take action against them," the ADC declared.

Adding that most of the people involved are treaty merchants who have American citizen families and who have sons who served in our armed forces during the last war, the ADC pointed out that others are students and temporary visitors, many of whom served in various strategic services to aid the war effort.

"It is the sense of justice and fair play to these people, may we invite your attention to their plight and earnestly request the intervention of your good offices to prevent the deportation of certain aliens until the Senate has an opportunity to make a final determination upon this matter," the ADC concluded.

California Officials Destroy Forty Thousand Gallons of Contaminated Soy Bean Sauce

300 Persons Stricken By Tainted Sauce in Western United States

SAN FRANCISCO—Forty thousand gallons of contaminated soy sauce, comprising a ten-carload shipment from the Staley company of Deatery, Ill., was being destroyed in California and other western states this week. The shipment was valued at $250,000.

Meanwhile, health officials estimated that approximately 300 persons in California, Utah and Oregon had suffered ill effects after partaking of the sauce which had been adulterated with an arsenic compound.

Health authorities supervised the destruction of thousands of gallons of the arsenic-contaminated sauce during the week. One batch of 525 gallons, still in the original 55-gallon drums from the Staley firm, was dumped at a warehouse in San Francisco, while 150 additional drums were being destroyed and awaiting disposition.

The tainted soy sauce was dumped down sewers and drains by health officials in Sacramento, Los Angeles and other California cities.

The tainted soy sauce was dumped down sewers and drains by health officials in Sacramento, Los Angeles and other California cities. The Milton P. Duffy, chief of the state bureau of food and drug inspection, said all but 1500 gallons of the tainted sauce have been accounted for, and that distributors and retailers, from whom the rest was seized, are being reimbursed by the Illinois manufacturer.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, San Francisco city director of public health, earlier disclosed that it had been determined that arsenic in the soy sauce had been traced to a consignment of caustic soda used in the manufacture of the sauce. Dr. Geiger assured that none of the tainted soy sauce was left on the shelves of San Francisco stores.

Just all of it had been covered in destruction. He criticized local health and Federal health officials for being slow to find source of the poison and to halt entire fight was left to local health directors.

Dr. Geiger said he believed it hard-to-get caustic soda, used in fermentation, process, was not engaged without proper health precautions. He said the Franklin, the only major city with an arsenic ordinance designed to prevent the public against illegal drugs.

The State Department of Health this week announced the seizure of 22 barrels of soy sauce believed to have contained arsenic. The barrels were:
