NISEI PREPARES STUDY GUIDE ON READING SKILLS

CHICAGO - Togo W. Tanaka, editor and research technician, is the author of a study guide which is being published by the American Technical Society as a companion volume to a new book on developing reading skills, "How to Read for Self-Improvement."

Both volumes are being published for use in the vocational and industrial arts schools of the nation.

Based on clinical findings and investigations into reading habits, "How to Read for Self-Improvement" has been developed as a teaching aid.

Mr. Tanaka, a Phi Beta Kappa scholar from UCLA, formerly was editor of the Rafu Shimpo of Los Angeles. He now is an editor on the staff of the American Technical Society and co-author of "Easy Pathways in English."

Two Nisei Land In Japan on Trade Mission

TOKYO—Two Japanese Americans and 18 other American businessmen landed at Haneda airfield in a Northwest Airlines plane on Aug. 15 as the vanguard of the first group of international traders permitted into Japan since the occupation.

They were met by the Japanese press and then taken in buses to the Teito and Tokyo hotels which have been reserved for the use of 400 foreign business representatives who have been given permission by General MacArthur's headquarters to come to Japan to reopen trade negotiations. The traders are charged $10 daily for room and board.

The Nisei in the first plane arriving here were Wesley K. Oyama of San Francisco and James Tsugio Ota of Los Angeles. They had left

Government Report Declares Public Acceptance of Nisei Group Better Than Before War

More Than Half of People of Japanese Ancestry On Mainland Now Live on Pacific Coast; 60 Per Cent Of Evacuee Group Have Returned to Evacuated Area

WASHINGTON-Approximately 55 per cent of the total number of persons of Japanese descent in the United States are now located in the three states of Washington, Oregon and California, it was officially reported this week in Washington, D. C.

The statistics were cited in the Interior department study, "People in Motion-The Postwar Adjustment of the Evacuated Japanese Americans," which was received by the Washington office of the JACL Anti-Discrimination Committee.

Complied under the direction of Robert Cullum, chief of the unit set up for final liquidation of the War Relocation Authority, the report describes adjustments made by Issei and Nisei from the beginning of 1946 to the present.

The 55-per cent figure for the present distribution of persons of Japanese descent in the three western states shows a loss of more than 30 per cent over the 1940 figure which showed that 88.5 per cent of the total number of persons of Japanese de-scent in the United States resided there, according to the report.

In the over-all picture of population distribution, the Interior de-partment study estimated that approximately 60 per cent of the Issei and Nisei have returned to their original localities.

"The general level of public acceptance is much better than before the war," the report indicated but added that legal restrictions "reflecting anti-Japanese sentiment of previous years continue to affect the adjustment of the evacuated people.'

Alien land laws of several western states were described as having the "most severe economic effect" upon the evacuated

Predicting that the completion of the process of resettlement will require another five to ten years, the report stated that "the human effects of the evacuation will not e fully evident short of that time.'

Most notable characteristic of the evacuated Japanese Americans, according to the report, is a feeling of unsettledness, of having unan-swered problems concerning loca-tion, economic activity, and social adjustment.

"The future of persons of Japa-nese descent in America lies with the Nisei and Sansei generations," the Interior department study de-

"Two primary factors will condition that future," it added, "the presence or absence of economic discrimination and the beliefs which Americans of Japanese descent come to have about their anese aliens have been and remain ineligible to citizenship has set a standard that has affected alien and citizen alike, both in law and in the attitudes of other Americans, the report further stated:

The five delegates are Richard Mizuta, Tokiji Ono, Terumu Kato, Herbert Yamamoto and Daniel Onouye.

"The manner in which the peo-ple of the United States dispose of this issue will be crucial in determining the place in American life which the Japanese American will come to occupy."

On the economic front, the re-port notes that the people are work-ing excessively hard, especially in the west.

"Everything is secondary to work," it continues. "The people are driven by insecurity and a sense of urgency.

"They must make up their losses, prepare for future uncertainties, and get ready to take advantage of opportunities that may come along. These things must be done along. These things must be done now while jobs are abundant and wages high."

The marked increase in employment of women, both first and sec-ond generation; the decline in the relative economic importance of the first generation men as compared with the Nisei, both in employment, farming and business; and the fact that many more Japanese Americans are now receiving public welfare assistance were also cited in the Interior department study.

The most obvious economic effect of the evacuation order some five years later, as recorded in the report, is the change from dependence for livelihood on an economy within the control of the Japanese American people every-where upon employment found in the general community

Concerning postwar social organization, the report describes the reemergence in west coast states of "Little Tokyo" communities.
"However," the report concluded, "there is evidence that the element of social control so strongly a part of the prewar 'Little Tokyo' has not regained strength in the post-war social situation; that individual dfferences have more weight in de-termining social behavior than the termining social behavior than the fact of common ancestry."

Majority of Marriages Between Nisei Personnel, Japanese Nationals

YOKOHAMA, Japan - Consular authorities here estimated that 550 Japanese girls had been married to American servicemen and veterans since July 22 as the deadline for marriages under the amendment to the GI Brides act expired at midnight on Aug. 21.

Under the amandment "ineligible alien" wives of Ameircan servicemen or veterans may enter the United States despite the Japanese Exclusion Act of 1924.

It was stated that 30 Caucasian American servicemen had received their discharges in Japan and had taken civilian jobs in the decupation so that they could be near their Japanese sweethearts. Most of these couples were married at the consulate during the past week.

Newswriter Finds Nisei Have Won Full Rights as Citizens As Result of War Experiences

Strengthened JACL Is Result of Wartime Lessons of Value of Organization Learned By Japanese Americans, Says Barbara Finch

One of the great lessons the Nisei learned as a result of their wartime experiences was the value of organization, and a strengthened Japanese American Citizens League is the answer, Barbara Finch, Los Angeles newswriter, declares in a syndicated article published in the Oakland Tribune, Chicago Sun and other U. S. newspapers recently.

Miss Finch declared that Californians of Japanese ancestry have won their full rights as Americans and that there has been a change in the "traditional bitterness against all Japanese in Cal-

"Many Caucasians who insisted that every Japanese should be evac-uated from the Pacific coast in the spring of 1942" now declare that the evacuation was carried out for the protection of persons of Japa-nese ancestry, Miss Finch noted.

"I talked with dozens of Nisei in Little Tokyo, the heart of the Los Angeles county colony of 23,000, still the largest in the country," she reported. "This overtry," she reported. "This over-crowded square mile in the shadow of the gleaming Civic Center has become an interracial community. Returned Japanese are living side by side with Negroes from the deep south, who came to work in the war plants and stayed because California meant new freedom for "These Nisei were almost uniformly optimistic about the fu-ture," Miss Finch aded. "John Aiso who served in Army intelligence with the rank of lieutenant colonel, finds the California courts more friendly than before the war.

"Molly Oyama who writes a column for the local Rafu Shimpo, is happy over the reception her eightyear old son was given by his schoolmates 'after they got over the shock of having a Japanese at

"Walter Nakashima who served with the 442nd in Italy and heads the Los Angeles Nisei Veterans Association, finds Nisei encounter less job discrimination today in seeking jobs than they did before Pearl Harbor.

"Nisei girls who came out of the camps into the post-war world are doing well, competently contradicting the old idea that women of Oriental descent cannot fend for themselves. Before the war, when the influence of their foreign-born parents was much stronger, they were almost willing to live within the mental walls of the East First Street ghetto. They never thought of applying for the jobs they are holding today."

Miss Finch described some of the jobs which Nisei girls are filling today in Los Angeles:

"An ex-WAC, Margie Fukuoka works in the Los Angeles County child replacement bureau. Kay Kumai, of UCLA, is the Nisei pioneer in the city schools. She got her teacher's training at the Heart Mountain camp in Wyoming and teaches in the Amelia street grammar school. Mary Kitano is proud to be the first Nisei on a metropolitan daily; she works in the library

American counsular offices in Yokohama and Kobe.

In addition to the highly publicized marriage of Frank K. White, an ex-army officer, and Teru Kurusu, daughter of Japan's special White-Kurusu nuptials, Don Knott, son of P. B. Knott, Dallas, Tex., and Teruko Ito, niece of Saichiro Koshida, former Japanese ambas-her ex-GI brothers, Stanley, is the first Nisei member of the Los Angeles police force." When Japanese Americans began coming back from the relocation camps late in 1945, race riots were predicted in Little Tokyo. Miss Finch observed. But nothing serious happened.

"Instead," she recalled, "vegetable markets, soft-drink parlors and dry-goods stores began to re-place the bars, shoe-shine parkers and juke-box emporiums."

"The Nisei quietly paid substantial sums as bonuses for leases and went as quietly to work to rebuild their lives," she reported. "The most serious difficulties, outside of health problems caused by overcrowding and substandard living accommodations, have been the robberies reported by the Nisei, who hired ex-GIs to ptraol the streets after dark.

"No one but the Japanese Americans could have made the adjust-ment," Miss Finch quoted Dr. Harold M. Kingsley, director of Pil-grim House, in describing this transformation without bloodshed. Pilgrim House under Dr. Kingsley is Little Tokyo's best example of successful cooperation between Americans of Japanese and Negro e and Negro ancestry in the district.

Pilgrim House, formerly the Japanese Union church, is used by the United Protestant group for Sunday services. During the week the building functions as a day nursery, public library and Scout troop headquarters. Children of Negro, Japanese, Mexican and Caucasian ancestry use the center.

Another example of race integ-ration cited by Miss Finch is Magnolia Manor, the girls' club spon-sored by the YWCA in Boyle Heights. Members of the club include Negro, Mexican Caucasian and Nisei girls. Costs are kept at a minimum, $5 a week for domitory and $6.50 for two-bed quarters. An additional $5 covers food.

MINORITY WEEK

Skinning the Cat

There's more than one way to skin a cat, and members of Equity the actors' association, have found a new way to fight racial to crimination and segregation in the theater.

The whole matter of segregated theater audiences was brought forcibly to mind early this year when actress Ingrid Bergman, playing in Washington in "Joan of Lorraine," was shocked to find a Jim Company of the theater.

in Washington in "Joan of Lorraine," was shocked to find a Jim Cro policy in effect in the theater.

While protesting the policy, Miss Bergman went through with her scheduled performances, out of respect for her contract. She make it clear, however, that in the future—she would not allow herself the bebund by a contract which would force her to make appearance in theaters which recognized the color line. She was supported in umerous other members of the theatrical profession.

This week Equity has a new kind of clause in its contract with the League of New York Theaters, an organization of theater owner operators and producers. Under the clause no actor shall be required to play in Washington in Jim Crow theaters. The clause will been effective on August 1, 1948.

effective on August 1, 1948.

If, at that time, Washington theaters do not agree to drop the policy of discrimination, the capital city will face a virtual ban keep the collections. ing out all actors and stage attractions.

People who are tiring of our custom of naming a week for ever product under the sun, may find a little more meaning in a new his of week to be sponsored soon by the California AVC.

That veterans group has approved plans for an anti-discrimination week to be called sometime in November. If this particular week draws no more than lip service from politicians and the public at large it will at least be a relief from the perhaps more typically American "National Dog Biscuit Week," National Plumbers Week," and "I Kind to Animals Week."

Summer Reading

The traditional belief that we Americans take to "light" a "hammock" reading during the summer has been pretty well blast this year, as a look at the national best seller lists will reveal.

Top sellers in the fiction field at the present moment are a books on race relations, "Kingsblood Royal" by Sinclair Lewis a "Gentlemen's Agreement" by Laura Z. Hobson.

"Gentlemen's Agreement" by Laura Z. Hobson.

The old Sinclair Lewis, who blasted away at bigotry and on placency in such books as "Arrowsmith," "It Can't Happen Her and "Main Street," is back again in "Kingsblood Royal," this the hacking away at the inane and insane race prejudices that infect the book of thinking and acting of so many of our citizens. The book, of cour concerns the fate of a "white" American who finds he has a ti fraction of Negro blood in his racial makeup. Born and bred in fraction of Negro blood in his ractal makeup. Born and bred in normal, comfortable and insular community, he learns by first of shocking incident and then another of the horrible practices and en of prejudice. The book brings back the Sinclair Lewis of old, the bits plunging author-crusader who shocks, stuns and educates his ready and the statement of complete the statement of the state by blasting away at complacent acceptance of outmoded beliefs

"Gentlemen's Agreement" deals with a more subtle and set type of prejudice, this time as it is directed against the Jews T type of prejudice, while not necessarily expressed in written are ments or in violent outbreaks, is as deep and cancerous when it practiced by "gentlemen's agreement."

Both books are must reading, whatever the season or weather.

Miss Hodges, a Post staff writer, said that all of the seven Japanese American babies at the state home have "superior backgrounds." She was evacuated from California at the beginning of the

At the time the baby was born, the couple were very much in love, according to Stoddard's case file, but did not wish to keep the child for fear they would be disgraced. They feared also that their religious differences—he is a Buddhist and she is a Protestant-might result in an unhappy marriage. In most instances, one or both of the parents relocated in Colorado after the evacuation.

There are three girls and four boys at the home. The oldest is 4-year old Katie and the youngest is Carol Ann two months.

Stoddard reported that the placement of babies from the state nursery follows this pattern:

Three requests to every white-European available for adoption. One request for every Negro child available.

Two Spanish American babies to each request.

Miss Hodges declared that Stoddard had found that the supply of his little Japanese American charges was seven times the demand.

Revive Harris Legion Post in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO-A Japanese American post of the American Legion, which was suspended by the Legion leadership in Dec., 1941, was reactivated this week and has announced a membership drive among Nisei veterans of World War II.

The Legion unit, the Townsend Harris Post No. 438, was one of the two all-Japanese American posts of the Legion in California at the time of the outbreak of war. The suspension of the Post's charter was lifted by the action of the California department of the American Legion shortly after V-J day.

The San Francisco council of the Legion reissued the charter following a request from a post commit-tee which included Keitaro Tsukamoto, Yonezo Sakai, Yujiro Okamoto and Masao Murata.

Tsukamoto, a veteran of World War I, was named temporary commander with Suzuki as treasurer.

He declared that the reactivation of the post was determined after a period of consideration as to the value of an all-Japanese American

Reformed Church Group Urges Payment Of Evacuee Claims

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed church, at its triennial meeting recently, urged Congress to establish an Evacuation Claims Commission which would hear and pay just claims for losses sustained by Japanese Americans as a result of their forced removal from the Pacific coast in 1942.

The resolution requested I. George Nace, general secretary of the church, to inform Congressional leaders of the action.

Intermountain JACL Leaders Urged to Keep National Headquarters

The Intermountain District Council of the JACL held a special meeting in Salt Lake City August 18 at the Civic Center with Shigeki Ushio, chairman, presiding.

Mas Satow, national secretary, spoke upon the staff conference which concluded August 17.

A report on the Anti-Discrimination Committee was made by Mike Masaoka, legislative director. He discussed trends in Washington on legislation for the benefit of persons of Japanese ancestry. He asked that the IDC support the program and activities of the ADC.

A special report was given by Mari Sabusawa, midwest district council chairman, on the JACL workshop to be held in Chicago Oct. 11 and 12.

IDC delegates voted to sent two representatives to the workshop and voted a $200 appropriation for travel expenses. Yukio Înouye of Idaho Falls reported upon the district convention to be held in that city Nov. 28 and 29. It was announced that a national board meeting would be held in conjunction with the convention.

A special plea for retention of JACL national headquarters in Salt Lake City after 1948 was made by Elmer R. Smith, member of the Salt Lake City chapter and a mem-ber of the University of Utah fac-

Take a map of Chicago, a city of irregular shape and lying roughly in a north-south di-

Now, by way of experiment, darken the areas of slum housing, the areas of decay and dilapidation. Blacken the sections that include the largest number of buildings prior to 1900.

There emerges a section of approximately one-fourth the area of the city and lying almost entirely in the central part of Chicago. This is the oldest part of Chicago, a section of old and decaying homes.

Now let's try marking up the map according to density of population. Blacken the areas in which the density of population per square mile is 50,000 or more. It's a considerable number of inhabitants per square mile. It's far too many for people who want decent living conditions, privacy and security. Next checkerboard those parts in which the density is 40 to 49 thousand per square mile.

Again, roughly, there emerges a section lying in the central part of the city, not exactly paralleling the slum areas but in general showing a close correspondence between high population and slum housing.

So try again, this time testing education. Mark the parts of Chicago in which the average years of schooling per adult is under eight years. Again the same central section of Chicago goes dark, fitting on top of the area of high population and slum conditions.

So now you try again, testing juvenile delinquency, and it's not so surprising now to find that here, in the heart of Chicago, where the population lives closest together and where the average years of education are the lowest, are juvenile delinquency rates of appalling magnitude. Here in some areas where the houses are old and need repairs, 15 out of every 100 boys between the ages of 10 and 16 are arrested annually by the police.

Insanity? Mark up your map again. Black for the sections in which the number of insane is the largest. Make less dark the parts in which the rate is lower. The pattern emerges as before, fanning out from the heart of the Try one last map. Mark on it the sections with the highest per cent of foreign born in the population. Add those sections in which there is the highest concentration of Negroes.

Of course. It comes out again—the same central portion of the city which has the lowest rate of education, the highest rate of juvenile delinquency, the highest insanity rate, the largest number of old buildings. In short, you have your slums.

Maps such as these provide the starting point for an excellent study on race relations and race tensions, "The Police and Minority Groups," prepared by Joseph D. Lohman for the Chicago Park District for the training of police officers.

These maps show, in essence, the breeding place of race tensions. They explain the growth of racial animosity, not only as it exists between white and Negro but also between members of different minority groups.

For the police officers who are trained in this course on human relations, the primary consideration is not the control of race tensions but the conditions, causes and evolution of race tensions.

Over one-half the people in Chicago are persons of foreign birth or persons who are the children of immigrants. In addition 10 per cent of the whole population is of Negro an-

Thus this "typically American" city of the midwest is composed of persons from what are termed the minority groups. In this setting the additional aggravations of housing, employment and social status bring into sharp focus the racial tensions of the country.

The maps on housing and racial distributions, etc., indicate the trouble spots of the city. They show for example, at what points the police can expect trouble to arise from the encroachment of one racial group upon another. The maps show a sharp demarcation of white and Negro residential areas. Along the boundaries there can be expected to arise incidents over housing.

But the book goes far beyond a mere indication of possible trouble spots. If the maps in "The Police and Hinority Groups" tell where difficulty can be expected, the text tells why.

Here, for instance, is a map showing that as of 1940 the central areas of the city are the areas of lowest monthly rentals. What does this map tell the trained observer?

Says Lohman:

"Broadly speaking, the central areas of the city have low rentals, ranging between $15 and $25.99 per month. In direct contrast, the outer areas of the city, adjacent to the suburbs, have median monthly rentals ranging from $45 upwards.

"In terms of everyday life these figures mean that within the low-income areas inhabited by minority racial and nationality groups are found the great masses of unskilled laborers. These are the first to be laid off and the last to be hired in periods of depression and prosperity. The basic economic insecurities of these areas breed hatred, jealousy and suspicion. This is the stuff out of which racial fights and riots came. The desperate search for jobs (particularly in periods of economic depression) and the limited security that is afforded by unskilled earnings sharpens personal envies and jealousies. It is, therefore, not surprising to find the members of one minority group often abusing another. To stamp a man in derogatory language is one way of seeking an advantage over another. When an individual or member of a race is labeled as inferior, he is removed from economic competition."

Another map, with the same dreary repetition, shows that the city's most acute housing repair needs are in the same central area.

There are, according to "The Police and Minority Groups," three major social situations in which race tensions arise. They are the competition for jobs, search for decent housing and the practice of residential segregation; and interrelationships between groups in seeking recreation and personal service.

In the matter of minority employment, Lehman says, much progress was made during the war years.

The author says in additional warning: "A further complicating feature is the recognition by labor and management that race can be a weapon in their struggle. It is especially important that police authorities recognize the irrelevance of the race issue in labor-management disputes . . . The police must not be misled into believing that an economic struggle is a racial one'

It is in the marginal areas of the segregated Negro section that violence is most likely to break out. Ninety per cent of the Negro population is rigidly confined to a single area. With the current housing shortage, the situation surrounding this area takes on the pattern of a contest, with residents of surrounding white areas resisting the efforts of Negro families to move outside the restricted area. From May, 1944, to July, 1946 there were 46 cases of arson bombings of Negro homes. All of these occurred just outside the Negro community.

The residential outskirts of the Negro community the author says, are a "no-man's land" in which rumors, scares and a chronic tension persist.

"The idea that race restrictions covenants will protect a neighborhood from colored invasion is widespread. Such agreements seldom prevent Negroes from moving in but are effective in mobilizing public opinion against

"It may be observed," he says, "that the situation will not exhibit much improvement until the critical housing situation is somewhat relieved."

Thus Chicago's police are taught the underlying motives and causes for race tensions that break out in violence that must be handled through police control.

The material contained in "The Police and Minority Groups" shows the modern-day concept of the police officer and his role in preserving not only the peace but also the rights of millions of minority group Americans.

back on a racist past the other day in Sacramento when its state convention elected John F. Shelley, former Democratic state senator from San Francisco, as its new president. Mr. Shelley's candidacy was bitterly opposed by the old-line bigots, led by C. J. Haggerty, but the pressure of the rank and file repudiated the administration candidate and resulted in Jack Shelley's election by a handsome margin of three to one.

Jack Shelley's election is a significant one in the long history of California labor because it marks the final departure from the reactionary leadership which was responsible for the role which the AFL played in California in the organization of an active campaign of racism directed against the state's residents of Japanese ancestry.

The question of Japanese Americans was not, of course, at issue in Sacramento. Mr. Shelley's victory was predicated solely on strict trade union issues. But C. J. The State Federation of Labor in California and the AFL leadership in San Francisco in particular, through the Union Labor party, took a leading role in the formation of the Japanese and Korean Exclusion league in 1905 and were closely identified with the anti-Japanese movement from that time until the First World War when some AFL leaders and a few unions began to balk at racism as an instrument of trade union policy.

The State Federation of Labor joined in the organization of V. S. McClatchy's Joint Immigration Committee, which supplanted the Japanese and Korean Erclusion League. The secretary-treasurer of the California AFL became a per-manent member of the Joint Immigration Committee along with representatives of the American Le gion, the Native Sons and the Cal-ifornia Grange. The Joint Immigration Committee exists today only in skeleton form and its public utterances generally are limited to "letters to the editor" written by H. J. McClatchy, nephew of the former executive secretary. In a report to a con-ference of the Institute of Pacific Relations in 1927, Elliot Grinnell Mears described the Joint Immigration Committee as "the most powerful single group in California." Mears credited McClatchy and his committee with responsibility "for the legislative acts against the Japanese since the World War." He said that the committee consisted of "the deputy-adjutant of the American Legion, the secretary-treasurer of the State Federation of Labor, Master of the State Grange, Grand President of the Native Sons of the Golden West, the State Attoney General and V. S. McClatchy.

The AFL, like earlier combinations of workers on the Pacific coast, owed a great deal of its initial impetus toward organization to the fear of white workers at the turn of the century that their jobs would be taken over by Oriental immigrant labor. In the 1870s and the 1880s labor groups, organized politically as the Workingman's Party in San Francisco, had been active in the campaign against the Chinese. The hate-mongering drove the Chinese into urban ghettos, the Chinatowns of today. Later this same sort of campaign was used against the Japanese workers who were brought in by the large industrial forces in the west to fill the need for a large supply of com-mon labor. It proved unusually successful against the Japanese immigrant because of the historical consequence of Japan's emergence as a world power during the same period. The hate-mongering against the Japanese immigrants was tied up with the problem of national security and became a prime political

FROM THE FRYING PAN

GI Sweethearts in Japan

Suppose you're a G.I. or U.S. civilian employe stationed with the occupation forces in Japan. You're wondering what to do with yourself durates Denver, Colo. ing off-hours when you run into a cute little trick, and pretty soon you're seeing her quite often.

You aren't thinking of anything serious, of course, but you begin to suspect that maybe she is. She talks more and more frequently about going to the states someday, sometime, somehow. Presently you find yourself wondering if you want to marry her and take her back home and show her what a real steak looks like, and all the cars and maybe even a look at a real movie star.

But you know that there won't be anything like that because she's an alien ineligible to citizenship

Then one day President Truman signs a bill which says Uncle Sam is giving you 30 days in which to get hitched if you want to bring that girl home under the C.I. bridge act. home under the G.I. brides act.

Well, what do you do? You're puzzled. You're not sure of yourself. Maybe you'd be smart to give her the gate and forget it, and maybe you're passing up the best wife a guy ever could hope to have. Maybe she puts the pressure on you, and maybe you're wondering about the girl back home that you were half-way engaged to before you quit writing more than once a month.

You've got just 30 days to make up your mind and nobody to talk to but the chaplain and maybe a buddy or two, and nothing ahead of you but a lot of questions and a mountain of "if's."

The guy who's in love and knows it is lucky. He gets married. The guy who knows he was just lonely and looking for companionship is lucky too—that kind of relationship has a way of dissolving when the chips are down.

But a lot of other fellows must have gone through a great deal of mental torture the last 30 days. Some of them were among the several hundred Americans who married Japanese girls in the 30-day period just expired. It will take some time to learn just how many will wish they hadn't.

Congress, no doubt, passed the measure in the hope that a good many personal problems would be accounted by the 20 days personal problems.

Tirade Against Catsup

The next tirade is directed against catsup whose primary use, we believe, should be confined to movie sets where it photographs as a passable substitute for gore.

Catsup doesn't improve the flavor of food, it merely disguises. Salt, on the contrary, brings out new delicacies of flavor. Taste a fresh tomato without salt and note the difference. Garlic used in cooking, and soy sauce to some extent, affect food in the same was as salt.

But catsup. Where is the mouth-watering zest steak after it is doused with catsup? The essence of its flavor is annihilated by the taste of crushed tomatoes and spices, and you're eating not succulent beef but a pulp that depends on a condiment for character.

We see only one justification for the use of catsup at the table—to camouflage the natural flavor of the food. We wince when we see the natural goodness of a housewife's servings smothered and mutilated by the catsup bottle.

Its presence on the family table should be considered an affront to the cook's abilities; its place is only at the hash and quick lunch counters where the food needs a dash of something powerful to make it palatable.

P-F-A-D

Even the ways and customs of boyhood change. Even the ways and customs of boynood change. Mike who is now in the coaster wagon and toy racer stage, informs us that it is the safe thing to shout "P-F-A-D" whem someone else is riding your wagon or pushing your racer.

The letters, he asserts, stand for "pay for all damages," and the act of shouting is insurance, since the rider is obligated to meet all costs of repairs to the vehicle in case of accident.

pairs to the vehicle in case of accident.

Some boyhood code of honor seems to prevail whereby no claim for damages is pressed if the owner neglects to cry out P-F-A-D. Likewise, anyone who has had P-F-A-D shouted at him is honorbound to make good the loss, if any.

How boys have progressed. In our day damage to a toy was settled either by a fight, or by the aggrieved party going home to his mother in tears.

And Now the Veteran: THE INTEGRATION DEBATE

Nisei Origins May Be Humble But Ex-GI Is Not Ashamed

By A NISEI VETERAN

Read the article of some time back entitled THE SILKEN CURTAIN which struck me as a rather naive conception of our problems of integration for a writer of MO's calibre. No doubt, she wrote partly to raise a question and start a disucssion. She certainly had grounds for it too. One Prof. Smith seems to have answered most of the points that hit me too.

The overall impression of the series was that the writer or her friend (was it?) were pretty disappointed in the Nisei, and that one would at least think that the Nisei would wise up after the war time experience of discrimination. Or take the veterans who seem so unlike the gallant heroes they were as members of the 442nd and the Pacific compaigns. Why at least, don't they keep up the flag of liberty and righteousness up high and fight as they did on the battle-notions of many of our so-called progressive or model Nisei who are integration-minded, their objectives seem to be: Be like other Americans. Wipe away all traces of your Japanese ancestry. Be frank and forward.

In other words, be like a Caucasian. There seems to be a tendency to cast away all of our Oriental traits so that we may blend into the American society as a Caucasian American without Oriental features. Or, am I all wet and off the track? Without being too per-Japanese.

Ever since I can remember as a ure out, I damn near kicked the bucket when my folks took me back to Japan when I was a small kid. Just by some miracle, I'm living today. Then as I started school, I met with the experiences many Nisei have had: that feeling of a bit of shame for our parents for the three in this field.

First, the handles are stamped out on a high-speed machine.

The most all of the latest toothbrush handles are made of a plastic second the bristles are set into the handles are set into the handles.

Now in those articles and in the latest toothbrush handles are set into the handles. their not being able to speak the a young kid.)
The folks like many others often suggested why don't I go back there for a little visit, but I was positive where I stood on that question. Then came the Kendo craze which swept the Issei circles some years back. Filial piety, etc., made me take up the stuff. Egad, how many times I wished my bamboo sword was a real one so I could slice off the head of that mighty squirt of a teacher who used to shove me around like a paper bag filled with

During a brief period following the outbreak of World War II, the Sekine Toothbrush plant was under the supervision of the Alien Property Custodian. However, after proper clearance was received, the management and operation of the firm was continued under the personal guidance of Mr. Sekine.

Also during the war years, countless millions of toothbrushes were supplied to members of the armed forces of this country and allied nations by Sekine's company. In recent years and months, his products have been exported to almost all parts of the world.

I came away from this interview with a feeling that here was a typical American story of an immigrant, who, through sheer work and effort, achieved success and eminence in his chosen field; that the element of race did not deter his progress. In this case it was a man of Japanese descent. It speaks well of America as a land of oppor-

Some of the Sky . . .

Larney Goodkind still hopes to put Joseph Anthony's play, "Some of the Sky," into production on Broadway. The drama concerns a GI from a small town in the west who marries a Nisei girl in Ha-waii. The role of the Nisei girl has been offered to Sono Osato. Her younger sister, Teru, who was originally considered for the part, died suddenly some months ago.

Mock Klan . . .

Stetson Kennedy declares he is statistic Reinedy declares he is undismayed over the refusal of the State of Illinois to charter his mock organization, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan. Kennedy, who joined the Klan to get material for his expose on the KKK, "Southern Exposure," says there were 47 other states and he is certain he can find one that is sympathetic to his property. one that is sympathetic to his program. Kennedy said that he was seeking to charter his mock Klan so that the real Klan would be de-prived of its name. "When hatemongering Kluxers stick their necks out we will seek injunctions f necessary to stop ing our corporate name," he told a reporter for New York's PM.

Kennedy explains that the old Klan has no charter in any state. When his mock Klan gets a charter in some state, it will be able to initiate legal suits whenever the old Klan lifts its hood.

Among the charter members and officers of Kennedy's anti-Ku Klux Klan organization are a Nisei, a Protestant, a Catholic, a Jew, a Negro and an American Indian. The Nisei is Tats Kushida of Chicago.

schools, etc. So went my life. A bit warped, tied down, frustrated, and all of the other things which made us what we are today. When evacuation came, I even thought that the Japanese Christians would be spared the moving because of our Caucasian Christian friends.

But it didn't take long to find out that to most people in times of hysteria, one Jap looks as bad as the other. It was about this time that I began to take interest in the forces that made us what we are now, and what made people act as they did and still do. It carried me from the camps out to a small university town, where I later enrolled at the University and took part in their inter-racial activities. Yup, I made talks, went on trips as exhibit A, etc. It was one of those things many a Nisei did in those days and

A Short Story: A DAY AT THE ZOO

By TOSHIO MORI

TEE, MOMMY! Look at the two white bears wrestling! Aren't they funny?" cried the little boy to his mother.

"Let's go closer and see, honey," the mother said.

The mother and the little boy ran to the cage and found a place. Soon a crowd surged around the cage. The day was warm and the Fleishhacker Zoo attracted thousands of early Sunday visitors.

"Look, Mommy! They're fight-

The mother did not hear her litthe boy. Her eyes were fastened to the dark cavern where the two polar bears stood facing each oth-er. Suddenly the giant bear leap-ed and struck. Blood streamed from a cut on her shoulder. Then the giant bear charged again, and the pair grappled in the struggle.

The little boy pulled his mother's coat. "Mommy, what's the matter? What are they fighting for?"

"I don't know, honey," she said.
"Probably for that cave. They're really mad."

"Why are they mad? What happened?" the little boy said.
"I don't know," the mother said. She turned to her neighbor. "What was the matter? Something happened before this?"

"That big male bear doesn't want its mate in his cave," the neighbor said. "They're in the death struggle." neighbor said. death struggle."

"Thank you," the mother said. "Honey, the big male bear wants the cave for himself."

"What's in that cave, mommy?" the little boy said. "Is there something in it "

"No. I don't see anything," the mother said.

The attendants rushed here and there attempting to stop the battle. They threw rocks from all sides, but it went unheeded. They turned the fire hose on the struggling animals. The police fired shots about the cave. The struggle went on.

"Why don't they stop now." the little boy said. "They're getting toolor returned.

"No honey"

The mother did not hear him. "Mommy, why don't they stop?" the little boy said, shaking her hand.

"They're beasts — animals, you know," answered the mother. "They don't know any better."

"Why don't they play and have fun?" the little boy said. "Look, there's another bear over there. Why doesn't he go over and tell them to stop?"

The mother noticed the third bear in another cave for the first time.. He stood watching the struggle.

"Why doesn't he go and help one of them?" the little boy said.

"I don't know, honey, the mother said. "He must be afraid or he doesn't want trouble."

Their white furs covered with blood the two bears struggled for an opening. Time after time the giant male struck telling blows settling damage claims.

but the other came back for more. The mother looked at her watch. "Honey, we must be going home.

"Gee, mommy," the little boy cried. "Wait a minute, please."

Daddy's coming home early for din-

"I hate to see any more of it. They're killing each other," the mother said. "Come, Luther." "Please, mommy," the little boy

The mother stood hesitating. "Isn't it horrible" she said to her neighbor, nodding in the direction of the struggling bears.

The neighbor nodded. "That's Big Bill," he told the mother, pointing to the giant male. "He's short-tempered and ugly. Killed another mate some time are. mate some time ago. The old survival of the best that's all."

For half an hour the two bears battled. Their shiny white teeth became red with blood. The wounds were slashed open time after time. The small female seemed to weaken a little.

"Mommy, when are they going to stop fighting?" the little boy

She did not answer, for suddenly the giant male bear saw an opening. He sank his teeth in his mate's neck, and more blood gushed forth. For a finishing blow he crushed her skull with his great jaws. Then he dragged her bloodsoaked body to the pool and held her under water until she was

For a minute the mother stood stunned. She could not believe that the end had come. "Let's go, honey," she finally said to her little boy.

"I want to see the big bear," the little boy said.

"Come on, Luther. Let's start for home. Daddy'll be waiting for his dinner," the mother said.

"Gee, mommy. Can't we stay here a little longer? I want to see some

She took his hand, and the two walked up the path. Her pale face became a bit animated, and her

"No, honey . . . some other time," she said grimly. "I know Daddy's home and I want us to sit down together and eat supper."

On Nisei and Integration

ing on today.

Then the usual army and after a stretch in the Philippines and Japan where my outlook on things really I came home and am home. That is roughly my back-ground. It might help to figure out my views.

It took this war and a lot of traveling around to make me really appreciate the Issei and also the Kibei. For the first time in my life I realized all of the woes and wearinesses the old folks went through, and comparatively, how much more persistence and guts they had than many a Nisei. Especially when I hit Japan when the war ended, did I really realize that I was damned lucky to be a "Japanese" from America and that because my folks had the guts to leave the home country to strike out for a strange and unknown land, to stick out there despite all the problems which America threw at them for being Japanese.

It really was pitiful to see the war weary people of Japan. I haven't the words at my finger-tips to tell adequately what life back there is like. Then too, I began to see American GI's in another light. The coarseness of American culture and mannerisms stuck out like a sore thumb. Even the defeated enemy who were and are classified often as degenerate people had my re-spects more than had some of my fellow soldiers.

Now let's take the Kibei. They did more than any other group of Nisei in doing the intelligence work of the Pacific. Don't let any one of these smooth-tongued Nisei kid you. There might have been some Kibeis who beat out to Japan, but for every one of those guys, there were others who did great service to

If I learned to hate anything in war, it is the hatred for these selfrighteous and pious hypocrites who pictured themselves or their thinking as the prime adulthood of de-cent, just, and noble thinking. (It takes all kinds of thinking to make a world). Some people are just plain dirty, stinking rats, but for the most part people are OK even if they often are misguided or off the right road (or so I think.)

About the average ideas of the Nisei veteran, I'm afraid every-body swallowed the propaganda of the PC too thoroughly. You read the same things over and over with each reading your rosy vision of the heroic GI become rosier. True, the neroic GI become rosier. True, they did a great deal, helped win the war. I think many a girl dreamed up the Nisei GI to be someone tall and handsome, fearless and yet ever-smiling in the face of danger, self-sacrificing, and brave and on yes, ever smiling . . .

In fact he smiled so damned much that some guys said: what de eating grin. Actually when the worshipper woke up from rew he found the GI the same old or Haro or Taka or Baka what he was before getting into the form. In fact, quite a few of were pretty runty guys once got over the magnificient obe of being a civilian again. On the following day he went in as a relief pitcher and allowed four runs in five and two-thirds innings as the Hawaiian team was eliminated by San Diego, 36 to 6. Sakai also got two hits in four times at the plate.

Lincoln Yueno started for the Hawaii nine on the mound in the San Diego game while Shigeru Tsu-hako was behind the plate. San Diego scored 15 runs in the final inning of the game.

The Hawaiian team lost its first match of the regional playoffs, also against the same San Diego team, 21 to 3. Sakai, Matsumoto and Uyeno hurled for the islanders.

Hawaii then defeated Arizona, 5 to 4, with Uyeno and Tsukaho as the batteries and then went on to trounce Utah and Nevada to enter the finals against San Diego. Ikeda pitched for the losing Arizona team from Mesa-Tempe.

Yukio Wada Named To Presidency of San Francisco JACL

SAN FRANCISCO-Elevation of Yukio Wada to the presidency of the San Francisco chapter of the JACL was announced this week following the resignation of Dr. Yoshiye Togasaki.

Wada was one of the chapter's three vice presidents.

Dr. Togasaki is leaving Sept. 4 to continue her studies at Harvard Medical school.

The action was taken at the regular board meeting of the chapter on Aug. 14.

The board also decided to present a proposal for group membership in the Blue Cross hospital plan to the general membership at the next meeting on Aug. 28.

The San Francisco chapter also decided to participate actively in the coming financial drive of the Council for Civic Unity. Board members recalled that the Council for Civic Unity has taken an ac-tive interest in the readjustment problems confronting returned evacuees of Japanese ancestry in San Francisco. The council also has taken a stand on the urban redevelopment program which will be of advantage to Japanese Americans in the Western Addition area.

Los Angeles JACL Vanguard Published

LOS ANGELES-The first issue of the Vanguard, monthly publication of the Los Angeles JACL was published this week.

The Vanguard was issued in an eight-page format and was printed by the multilith process.

Richard Itanaga and Sue Takimoto are co-editors of the publication. Other staff members include Mabel Ota, society; Jack Kunitomi, sports; Chris Ishii, cartonist; Jack Ellen Kishi. toonist; Jean Emory, Ellen Kishi-yama, Frank Suenaga and Alice Sumida, staff writers; Dick Fuji-oka, business manager; Mack Hamaguchi, advertising manager; Bessie Nagahori and Hana Uno, circulation; and Michi Katoaka and Tim Kifune, commercial artists.

In the lead editorial of the new paper, the editors declared:

"Since the JACL is a non-political organization, the Vanguard will, of course, remain non-parti-san in so far as party politics are concerned. However, it shall shun neutrality and support or oppose men or measures in cases which involve a basic democratic right or wrong and not American political philosophies."

Appeal for Funds To Send Goats to People of Japan

PASADENA, Calif.-An appeal for funds with which to send goats to Japan in a special relief project was made this week by "Heifers for Relief," an interfaith committee sponsored by the Brethren service committee.

ADC Office Reviews Contacts At Recent Congress Session

Personal Educational Campaign Stressed Among Senators, Representatives on Major Legislative Problems Facing Japanese American Group

WASHINGTON-Fifty-two congressmen and 17 senators were congressmen and 17 senators were contacted personally by the JACL ters relating to legislative and tacted personally by the JACL lied subjects were and Anti-Discrimination Committee during the first session of the 80th Congress, the Washington ADC office disclosed recently in its final recapitulation of activities for the Congressional session.

In addition to the personal educational campaign among the representatives and senators, the ADC staff also contacted 23 secretaries to representatives and 21 administrative assistants or secretaries to senators, the report showed.

Pointing out that the primary purpose of all contacts was to provide background information on the bills introduced and the need for further remedial legislation affecting persons of Japanese ancestry, Mike Masaoka, national ADC legislative director, stated:

"Additional contacts were also made with various government agencies in the hope that they might endorse the ADC legislative program." He noted the close cooperation in which the ADC worked with many friendly legislative representatives of various organizations.

"Especially helpful" were representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the American Friends Service Committee, Masaoka said.

In addition to those bills in which the ADC was interested as the representative of persons of Japanese ancestry, the Committee participated in legislation affecting the common welfare, according to the final

Such legislation as the National Act Against Employment in Industry, anti-lynching bills, anti-poll tax laws, the displaced persons bills, and legislation relating to housing and increased benefits for war veterans were among those bills in which the ADC participated.

As a part of its support of such legislation, the ADC testified before a Senate Labor subcommittee endorsing fair ampleyment endorsing fair employment prac-tices in industry in the United States.

When bills proposing compensation for American prisoners of war of the Japanese were being con-sidered, the ADC called the atten-tion of the committees concerned to the dangers of "loose language" in providing for the confiscation of the assets of Japanese nationals in the United States, Masaoka declared.

"The ADC protested any consideration of such provisions as being both unfair and ill-advised," he said and added that assurances have been received that "insofar as possible the legitimate assets of resident Japanese nationals would be protected."

In order to keep the various Japanese American newspapers in the United States and Hawaii and Canada informed on the progress of legislation, the Washington ADC office sent out 137 news releases in English and 117 in Japanese, according to the final report.

In addition, the report showed that more than 2700 individual lied subjects were sent out by Washington office to all part the United States, Hawaii, Ala Japan, France, Italy, Switzer and Germany.
