NISEI BUSINESSMEN UP TO 35 YEARS OF AGE FORM JUNIOR CHAMBER

Honolulu

Spirited group action and smart public relations are the twin keynotes on which the Honolulu Japanese Junior Chamber of Commerce has soared to public recognition

Although only four years old, the organization has caught the public eye as a Nisei group with lot of spark and spirit. Young professional and business men make up most of the membership of 160. Its annual banquet for the installation of officers on Feb. 7 was a suc-It was attended by 350 members and friends.

A queen contest is the top feature of the festival. About 50 girls have entered the contest so far.

The Japanese have retained a go-getter public relations firm in Honolulu to publicize the event, and the result has been reams of copy and attractive photos in the news-

Therein probably lies the contrast between the Jaycees and the parent body that sponsored the Jaycees.

The senior Japanese chamber is made up largely of staid, almost stodgy, Japanese mer-chants, and a limited number of live-wire members. Strong opposition to the so-illed "freedom of choice" choice" amendment proposed last year was repeated this week against Senate Constitutional Amendment 21, whose language and intent is to wipe out the California Civil Rights code.

SCA 21 is authored by State Sen. Tenney (R., Los Angeles) who was onetime national chairman of "America Plus," a chairman of "America Plus," a ing an American citizen could private group which failed last year in its attempt to pass a service upon making a declarayear in its attempt to pass a "freedom of choice" initiative.

The amendment seeks to revise Sec. 1, Article 1 of the state constitution by adding the words in boldface:

"All men are by nature free and independent and have cer-tain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty: choice of associates, customers, tenants and employees; acquiring, possessing, disposing and protecting property; and pur-suing and obtaining safety and happiness."

The Immigration and Na-turalization Service does not venture or provide an advisory opinion to a private organization on any portion of the law prior to the official receipt or determination of a case based on it.

Masaoka and Ennis, however, urged the Issei to apply for naturalization, even if the Issei claimed exemption from mi-litary service in World War I because of alienage, since the provision of the old nationality code applied only to declarrants for naturalization.

Issei being racially ineligible for naturalization, they were not and could not become declarants for naturalization, contended Ennis.

During World War II, the language of this provision was broadened to provide that any neutral alien upon application be relieved from military ser-vice but he shall there after be barred from becoming a citizen. This section was not restricted merely to neutral aliens who had filed declaration of intentions to become American citizens.

This provision did not extend to enemy aliens, who are entitled to refuse to serve against their own country without incurring the penalty of being barred from American citizenship, so that any Issei who re-fused to serve in World War II is still eligible for naturaliza-tion, declared Ennis and Masa-

Elbert D. Thomas . . .

When death claimed former Utah Democratic Sen. Elbert D. Thomas on Feb. 11 in Honolulu, persons of Japanese ancestry lost one of their truly great friends.

He was serving as High Com-missioner of the Trust Territories of the Pacific, governing the former Japanese mandated islands in the South Pacific with the same kindly concern for human sensibilities that had dominated his 69 years.

Before that, for 18 years he served with distinction in the United States Senate, winning the affectionate designation as "philosopher-scholar" from friends and foes alike,

His senatorial activities covered three major fields: labor, military affairs and foreign relations. Though his legislative achievements stand as historic landmarks of liberal thinking, he still found the time to profoundly affect the lives of per-sons of Japanese ancestry both in the United States and in Japan.

As a member of the labor commission in the depths of the depression, he was the chairman of the subcommittee that dared visit the west coast and investigate the terrible and inas well as the Okies, in the fac-tories in fields that Carey Mc- Kyoto, Nara, and Nikko. He

Also, during the war, chairman of the Far East subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, he urged ace and such historic cities as counsel during the dark days Kyoto, Nara, and Nikko. He

And, since he spoke Japanese fluently, having served in Ja-pan from 1907 to 1912 as a Morman missionary, his voice was beamed to Japan to urge a constitutional surrender and the retention of the Emperor on the throne. He was one of eight who served on Secretary of State Hull's committee plan-

Before Sen. Thomas defeated
Sen. Reed Smoot, a 25 year
Republican leader, in 1933, he taught at the Univ. of Utah, Salt Lake City, where he met many students from Japan, as well as Nisei. Among his former students are many pro-America leaders in Japan today.

Although his appearance in Tokyo was very inconspicuous, rumors were rife that a certain Nisei buyer from the States was reputed to be a millionaire in those confusing days of Japanese economy. Japanese businessmen were inspired to stand up on their own feet-the comeuppance of a Nisei in their midst was too much.

He is none other than Wesley Oyama, the Sacramento boy who is now regarded as the most successful Nisei businessman in Japan. He is president of the Modern Food Products Co., Modern Import Co., American Drug Corp. American Pharmacy and Daimaru Trading Co. His office is located right in the heart of Tokyo, the Fukoku Bldg., while the American Pharmacy is situated in the fashionable Hibiya spot, the Nikkatsu International Bldg.

Wesley is the same Sacramentan but gracious with dignity as he confronts the endless stream of visitors, businessmen and leaders at his office. Masakatsu Yasueda, former San Francisco businessman, sits near him as liaison agent with the Japanese government. It is within the past several years that Wesley developed his business and reputation-his offices expanding at the same time as well.

His one regret is that his father with so much imagina-tion and hope died before he could be shown anything. His father had a cosmetic laboratory, trying to produce something new and attractive from time to time. His imagination fed and raised his six children, including Wesley, Mrs. Mary Mittwer, Joe, George, and Mrs. Lily Sasaki.

I wish my father was here to see me. Six kids ate up everything before he could do anything," Wesley said in a serious mood.

Inthates

His business is reputed to be over $3,000,000 annually with indications of further increase. His volume of imports and exports are mounting. Soy sauce alone accounts for $500,000 a year.

His American Pharmacy is a new wonder in Japan. He brought in new drugs, one right after another, to assir medical development in Japan dous in saving many lives in postwar Japan.

Recently he made available 'Vita-Health," which stirred sensation (as well as trouble among Japanese drug manufaturers. The Asahi Weekly with its half-million circulation carried a six-page story to intra duce the medicine. The not for "Vita-Health" is still of duce with Wesley bending every elfort to meet the demand. But the ever-increasing demand of the Japanese people cannot be filled.

Meanwhile, he is introducing genuine American-style app ment houses, completely fur-nished within the most fashion able residential areas of Tokyo Two will open soon. His real estate enterprises are another wonder in Japan.

Another plum for Wesley are the big contracts with the U.S. Army and the Far Eastern Ar Force for construction of ware houses, huts and other accommodations in Korea and Japan One contract alone amounted to $42,000.

His brother, George, is tra-yeling far and wide in the Far East—Bangkok, Hong Kong Formosa-in search of new trade contracts.

With Wesley as partners at Hisao Inouye, San Francisco, George Nakatsuka and S. Kazahaya, Los Angeles, and his brother George. This combina-tion must be functioning smoothly as the success of this venture indicates.

Wesley has invested in fish-eries in Peru, which is making headway. He also has interest in mining.

"The opportunity for Nisti in Japan is tremendous. I believe there are more oppor-tunities here than in America if one knows what he is going to do. Secondly, it is important to have proper con nections in Japan and the United States. Lastly, plans on how to finance this all is very vital," Wesley suggested.

He added that he is grateful for what Mike Masaoka has done for him at the early stages of his coming to Japan. He has an elegant home in Tokyo's most fashionable section. Goro Murata, business manager of the Nippon Times, also has a home in the same area.

What Wesley will do next in Japan shall be more interesting than what he has accomplished in the past.

For the 55-year-old student and teacher of Hebrew, Egyptian, Assyrian and the Old Testament, the thought of citizenship, permitted by the enactment of the Walter-McCarran Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, in the land that sheltered him and granted him everything but his most cherished gift, is still a little staggering.

Renouncing the uncompromising nationalism of Shintoism, the youth broke away and embraced Buddhism. For a year he studied law at Nippon University and taught high school classes and, on the side, Japanese to foreign missionaries.

It was this latter affiliation that was to change Dr. Nakarai's life. One of the mission-aries studying under the young Japanese was the Rev. Charles P. Paul, president of the Col-lege of Missions, at that time located at Irvington, and par-tially sponsored by Butler University and now situated at Hartford, Conn.

Under Rev. Paul's influence, Dr. Nakarai was converted to Christianity in 1922. With this religious backing, permission was obtained for the 25-year-old student to study in America. He attended Butler and obtained his second B. A. degree in 1924, his Master's in 1925 and was awarded his Ph. D. in 1930 from the Univ. of Michigan.

immediately following the attack on Pearl Harbor.

During the early days of the war, his was the only voice in Congress to speak out for fair treatment and justice for persons of Japa-nese ancestry in the United States and for a distinction between the people of Japan and its military leaders. In the days when it was popular for west coast congressmen to scapegoat the Nisei and the Issei, he stood alone against evacuation.

When Congress passed a special law to legalize evacuation, he and Sen. Taft, now Senate Majority Leader, were the only ones to protest. When Tennessee Sen. Stewart, Mississippi Rep. Rankin, and various California congressmen proposed that all Lagrange and the congressments of the congr that all Japanese everywhere in the United States be placed in military camps for the duration, Sen. Thomas led the fight against racism and bigotry. When the future loomed darkest for persons of Japanese ancestry and when it required courage and conviction to speak out in our behalf, Sen. Thomas more than any other single individual in Congress worked and fought for our future.

Even after the war, when the JACL ADC office was opened in Washington, he used his great personal prestige and his good offices to prepare the groundwork for our legislative achievements.

Truly, with his death, per-

In time the senior chamber may also be imbued with this go-getter attitude, when enough Jaycees "graduate" into the older group. Sixteen Jaycees reached the age of ineligibility (35) this year and presumably will carry on in the senior chamber.

The tone and temper of the Jaycee leadership is expressed in the inaugural speech by the new president, Dr. Theodore T. Tomita:

"Man yof us have answered the call of our great country honorably during the last war and have won our rightful place in this society. But it is not sufficient to live in the glor-ies of the past. FOR A SMILE: STORY OF HOW ARMY FOUGHT ENEMY IN PACIFIC

Livingston Recommended as a "smile" for readers, the Grapevine, publication of the Livingston Rotary Club last week briefly sketched George Yagi, new Rotarian engaged in raising truck crops here. Of his army career, the Grapevine quips: "In 1944, the army found that George could speak Japanese and they invited him into their organization to serve with the Counter Intelligence Corps. This shows that the army sometimes gets the right man in the right slot. Just to clear their record they installed him as a cook. Nothing like having a bi-lingual cook to face the enemy.'

George's younger brother, Tom, played center on the San Jose State College varsity last season.

He was a onetime member of the American Communist Party in San Francisco, ac-tively engaged with other Kibei Reds instructed to dis-rupt the Japanese language schools and to overthrow the JACL movement before the war.

These objectives were disclosed in sensational exposes after Ikeda was expelled from the party. It was fortunate the Communists could not disturb the Nisei movement in prewar days.

He once started a strike of sugar plantation workers in Hawaii with the Filipinos, then moved to San Francisco where he became a Salvation Army worker before joining the Communists.

English language waived

Reports from all parts of the United States including Hawaii tell of hundreds of Issei who have signed up in naturalization classes.

Their enthusiasm in preparing for naturalization examinations has been a source of deep satisfaction to all JACLers who have participated in the campaign to have this privilege made possible.

It is most unfortunate, however, that questions have been raised as to whether federal judges would permit aliens to become naturalized if they did not understand English. There. is also a report that even if an examiner passes an alien using his native language, the judge may insist upon a knowledge of Eng-

The intent of Congress on this point seems clear. Section 312 of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 states without any ambiguity that those who are over 50 years of age and a resident of this country totalling over 20 years need not meet the requirements of the English language.

Congress is aware that every nationality group has its vernacular press, magazines printed in this country or radio programs. Hence, information any citizen should know is being conveyed through these media. Even if an alien does not have an adequate command of English, he still understands our form of government, history and current development.

Loyalty as an American citizen is not primarily based upon a knowledge of English. Matters of the heart are not dependent upon the kind of language. used. Parent generations of various nationalities have clearly demonstrated this

We are firmly convinced that there could be no more a loyal group than our Issei parents, irresbecuve of incompetance with the English language. America is their home, the land of their children, where they intend to re-main the rest of their lives and become a part of its soil eventually.

What better proof have we than the excellent response by aged aliens seeking naturalization to show liberalization of the law was necessary to encourage them to take steps to become an integral part of American life through citizenship?

The exemption granted pertaining to the English language is a good law. We believe the judges should interpret the intent of Congress correctly and permit aged aliens naturalization. No discretionary right is given the court in this mat-

Be It Resolved

Whereas Guyo and Larry Tajiri have abandoned familiar haunts in Salt Lake City and taken up abode elsewhere,

From the Frying Pan . . .

And whereas Guyo and Larry have multitude of friends scattered throughout the Unit-ed States and overseas who are wondering how the Tajiris are faring,

And whereas, besides being poor letter-writers anyway, the Tajiris have been much too busy to keep up their correspondence, Now, therefore, let this column be a report on the pre-sent whereabouts and state of being of said Tajiris.

Since the week before Christmas the Tajiris have been residents of Colorado Springs, Colo., a clean, attractive tourist center at the foot of Pike's Peak. Colorado Springs is a city of roughly 35,000 population and about 70 miles south of Denver.

Larry is on the staff of the Free Press, a daily newspaper whose editor and publisher is Edwin P. Hoyt. Ed Hoyt is the son of Palmer Hoyt, editor and publisher of the Denver

The Free Press is a young and struggling newspaper. It is livilier but somewhat less prosperous than its competition, the Gazette-Telegraph. Being poor, the Free Press has attracted devoted newspaper craftsmen who work long hours because, they tell themselves, they love it.

A few weeks ago Larry had a whole load of titles and duties conferred upon himself. He was made assistant managing editor, news editor and book editor. He also got the work which goes with the titles.

Then the managing editor, who'd been working from 7 a.m. until midnight almost every day, went away on a long overdue vacation leaving Larry in charge. The one nice thing about it was that Larry was relieved temporarily of his editorial writing chores. Sometimes, these days, Larry thinks back wistfully to the time all he and Guyo had to do was put out the Pacific Citizen once a week.

This is not to say, of course, that Larry is not enjoying his work. He likes the town, the job, the people he works with, and the opportunity of being in a competitive daily field

The Tajiris live in a comfortable new apartment on the northern outskirts of town. They have a spare bedroom set aside specifically for friends who might want to drop by. The TV set is hooked although the Colorado Springs station isn't on the cable yet and programs are pretty slim pickings.

With the work schedule the way it is, however, Larry doesn't have much time for the long, pleasant evenings. He sets the alarm for 6 a.m. and he's at the office by 7.

Guyo is working, too. She got herself a job as secretary although she left her boss with no misunderstanding about her abilities. She told him everything she didn't know about the secretary business, which made an impressive list. But he hired her anyway. Those who know Guye well may be able to figure that one out.

The night we visited the Tajiris the telephone rang shortly before 8 p.m. The state patrol had telephoned one of the reporters about a traintruck collision in which a woman had been killed. The reporter called Larry.

The reporter was off duty, and so was the staff photographer. Yet the accident was enough of a story that it should have first hand coverage and pictures. So Larry hopped in his car, drove down to the office, grabbed a camera and drove ten miles out of town to the crash scene.

Larry was back in harness and he liked it fine.

Publicity Chairmen

Aside from holiday hangovers and clearance sales in January, there is a flurry of activity along the club front
. . . Fraternal and social organizations, about this time of the year, elect and install new cabinet members and usually at the bottom of the list is the man in charge of publicity . . . As club elections go, the most popular or the most promising gets the top post and the lesser posts to others who are intent on promoting an active calendar of events . . As far as this desk is concerned, the role of publicity chairman for any organization ranks next to the top post. But the traditional order of succession has placed him low

A historian of one JACL chapter has measured his responsibilities manfully and asks for our SOP (standard operating procedure) ... Of course, with each newspaper, the procedure varies as to deadlines, photographs, and publicity material. Daily papers insist on strict deadlines, publicity of a community nature . . . Some editors ignore entirely any benefit contrary to local, state or federal regu-lations . . . What these are can be determined individually with each newspaper . . . But there are some general rules a good publicity chairman should Typewritten copy doubled space is best, but if written in long-hand, the names at least should be printed . . . Names should be as complete as possible, at least the middle ini-tial . . . Then there are the famous 5-Ws to remember in any news item—who, what, where, when and why ... The correspondent should sign his item and add his address and telephone number . . . Some editors prefer different stories on different sheets of paper . . . Reports on events should be submitted as soon as it happens. The quicker an editor gets the story, the bet-ter the prospects are for giving it due prominence . . . Club members who make the local press in the way of achievehome, can earn further recognition when the historian or publicity chairman passes that news clipping to other editors . . , Added items of club members, though not directly concerning the club, in the hands of an editor insure the relationship between them. A serious publicity chairman can be a self-appointed cor-respondent (especially if he lives outside of the town where the paper is published), which will spell benefit for his parti-cular group later on . . . These are but a few tricks to insure proper publicity for any club.

As for the Pacific Citizen, our deadlines vary. Front page items are due Thursday noon. Otherwise it is generally Tuesday night. Advertisers usually clear for space by Monday, although the copy may be submitted by Wednesday . . . Stories should be typewritten, although a long-hand report is never ignored . . . Vital statistics are welcome from any place in the continental United . States And get in as many photographs be glossy and ment, be it school, work or names as possible in the story.

I heartily appreciate the Ni. sei's thoughtful efforts for a Issei. I am ashamed that a number of Issei are acting a number of uith had conting a number of issel are acting a lunatics with bad century of Japanese ways instead of bein thankful. Even here, local lead ers have a lukewarm attitude

Degree in Humanities

For many years I have been interested in the affairs of the JACL and have viewed with deep sense of admiration my Nisei friends in the United and elsewhere. Twice States have I had the pleasure of visiting Japan and on each of these visits acquired many, many friends among the Japanes people.

Knowing as I do the iniqui. tous treatment of our Japanese citizens prior to World War II and during World Wa II, I was horrified to read the letter addressed to the editor by Dr. M. M. Horii. It seems to me that Dr. Horii has no read Morton Grodzins' "Americans Betrayed," or may be he should read the very interesting book written by Dr. Walter A. Adams, eminent psychia-trist, "Color and Human Na-ture." If he should, he would find in there a statement which points out "that minorities look for and sense more factors that work on themselves and their fellows than do white people among themselves."

With amazing clarity Dr. Horii, as is true of many who try to escape God's handiwork has failed to sense the factor which are at work on him and others whose pigmentation seems to breed the contempt of such bigoted-minded whites as the barber who declined service to a Nisei. Certainly, the Doctor should recognize that he is neither safe nor secure w long as there is being perpetrated against any Nisei or any person, incidents such as these. I wonder if he joined in with the Fruit Growers Association in the early days when they consorted to deprive hard-working Japanese farmers of their farm lands.

What Dr. Horii needs in addition to his Degree as Doctor of Dental Surgery is a degree in the humanities.

Such courtesy, plus industry and intelligence, will be used by the Japanese in their efforts to put silk stockings back on the legs of American women and silk trains back on American railroads. Whether or not this would add any glamor to the legs we do not presume to say, but it would undoubtedly a d d glamor to railroading. -Portland Oregonian

Opinions from Other Newspapers . . .

Silk Trains Again?

A glamorous institution of pre-World War II days—the silk train—may be revived, says a brief dispatch from Vancouver, B. C. The item is based on optimistic reports of a Japanese trade mission in that city that the silk market is expanding.

The silk trade was ruined by the war, which shut off all exports from Japan to this country. Meanwhile American women found nylon a satisfactory material for the same material. factory material for hosiery and other apparel. Now the Japanese are trying to restore their former rich source of American dollars. Their success depends, it seems to us, on whether they can induce American women to accept silk as more fashionable. If this they can do, then silk trains will speed again from west coast ports to the East, putting passengers trains on the sidings.

It was page 1 news on June 30, 1929, when Japanese ships resumed discharging silk in Portland after several years of disuse of this port for that purpose. The S. S. Bordeaux Maru docked at 2 p.m. that day, and hardly had the lines been made fast when the first of 1400 bales of raw silk was lifted from her hold through a hatch already uncovered be-fore the vessel had tied up. In rapid succession, 826 bales were transferred to six ex-press cars which the Union Pacific has spotted beforehand on the siding at Albers dock. At 6 p.m. the train, carrying a shipment worth nearly $1,-000,000 was on its way to New York, armed guards riding the cars to keep thieves away. Capt. S. Nagao, master of the Bordeaux Maru, had poured on the coal in the Pacific, making the voyage from Yokohama to Portland in 111/2 days. The train schedule called for a run from Portland to New York of 85 hours. So valuable was silk in those days that speed was essential to reduce time of idle investment and to cut insur-ance costs. Silk cargoes continued to come through Portland for some time after the Bordeaux Maru reopened the trade.

A member of this paper's staff, who covered the arrival of the Bordeaux Maru, recalls that he was impressed by the courtesy of Captain Nagao. Despite the hurry in transferring the silk and the many details he had to watch, the ship's master invited the re-porter and the accompanying photographer into his cabin
