ATTENDANCE AT FULBRIGHT ACT PASSES, PLUGS LOOPHOLE FOR VISITING STUDENTS

WASHINGTON. — A loophole in the Fulbright Act of 1946 which permits non-immigration visitors to return to their own country after a period of two years has been closed by a measure passed by the House Financial Committee.

The measure, sponsored by Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, would enable the Secretary of State to grant a non-immigrant visa for the return of a cooperating country and to reside there for a period of two years before becoming eligible for an immigration visa and permanent residence in the United States for a non-immigrant visa. President Eisenhower, upon the recommendation of the State Department, had urged last year that the loophole in the Fulbright Act be plugged.

The House Subcommittee on Immigration and Naturalization had been instructed by the Committee of the Whole to report back to the House on the same with the recommendation that upon the request of Buddhist Churches of America and before it goes to the President it be amended to provide for the issuance of a non-immigrant visa which would not be applicable to return to the United States unless accompanied by an order to return to the countries where the benefits of their education obtained here.

Over 1,300 Issei in Northwest naturalized

SEATTLE. — In a recent report by the Pacific Northwest District of the American Bar Association, 1,300 Issei and Japanese-born people were naturalized, 880 of whom were in the Seattle area.

In the first two weeks of May, since the Immigration and Naturalization Act was in effect in Dec. 1932, the Seattle JACL reported 239 Issei were naturalized in the area.

Sunday services were held in Japanese churches in the metropolitan area with 500 people in attendance. The services were conducted by the Reverend Mr. Murphy and Mr. Tomioka, Church of the Messiah, Seattle. The student body of the San Francisco State College was present.

Japanese immigrant workers are coming in daily, and the JACL is attempting to educate them to understand the principles of democracy.
Big time sports

If people think college football is getting too big for its own good in view of issues such as student-athlete welfare, a varity, a parallel exists in Nisei circles, where a phenomenon some have not even realized.

Now that the game is being handed over to Nisei bowlers themselves, it appears to be on the mend. bowlers are predating on the same level, the various Nisei bowling groups can even rise to greater heights.

Problems in sponsoring bowling tournaments differ from issues that might arise in other sports like basketball, track, and soccer. In bowling, there has been no problem relating to the financial status of the players. Thus we understand the lack of Nisei league professionalism. Certain organizations have chosen to remain reluctant to sponsor a team. Some others have been in the business of sponsoring. (Thus it is safe to assume there are no problems with the league.)

If the San Francisco JACL is to sponsor a league, it must be a league for the benefit of its members and members have been enthusiastic about this enterprise. Now that the professionalism of the bowling and camaraderie provided has been achieved, the league is taking from its profits and making it the richer and better. Yet, its fame was attended with entry problems since ABC sanctions were not in order.

From Central and southern California as well as communities across the United States, this week at the Linda Lea Theater, it's still color and glamour in the TV world. And a story will be the norm for good motion pictures from Japan in the future.

Rabble rouser Tenney

- Much of the fuss and furore in California June 6 elections has been brought about by the rival candidacies of Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver who seek control of the state's delegation to the Democratic national convention in Chicago. A close race will be watched in California particularly, for a ringing victory for one may well mean an extreme American right.

- Their choice would seem an obvious one.

- In 1944, Tenney and his committee lent themselves to the efforts of California Nisei in the famous "Yes on 15" campaign. The committee lent itself to the efforts of the Nisei in this campaign, while the Japanese American Citizens League, as well as civilians, could have been excluded by the state.

- Expert legal advice was active in the Peril movement outside the legislative arena. He was a director of California's National Japanese League which was involved mainly in anti-Japanese activities.

- He was chairman of the California Reorganization Committee (which was later known as the Committee of 100). He was chairman of the council of the league.

- As such, he was active in the council's efforts to obtain a legislative appropriation of $200,000 for enforcement of the Alien Land Law. He sponsored an initiative measure, "Proposition 15" the crusading defeated administrative to Proposition 15 by the Nisei's League's California Anti-Discrimination Committee helped fight it--was the first major reprisal to be taken against Japanese Americans in the state, with the exception of Proposition 15.

Express need for JACL building

Newspaper columnist Roy Ishibashi ("Speaking Freely") in the San Francisco newspaper, "The Chronicle," has written a lengthy letter to the editor about the need for a JACL building. The Chronicle is a daily afternoon newspaper with a readership of approximately one million.

The letter is addressed to the editor, and Ishibashi speaks of the need for the JACL to have a permanent home where it can conduct its meetings and activities. Ishibashi notes that the JACL has no permanent home and that its meetings are held in various locations, which has made it difficult to plan events and activities.

The Chronicle is one of the leading newspapers in the San Francisco Bay Area, and Ishibashi's letter is widely circulated. The JACL is considering Ishibashi's letter and is exploring options for building a new JACL building in the Bay Area.

The MARCH OF Progress

- "If our ship had been in distress, no doubt, other boats would have come to our rescue," said Captain George Fukuzaki of purse seiner Stella Maris who directed the rescue of four men from his craft to save the lives of seven fishermen from the stranded Western Explorer on May 14 off Socorro Island, near Mexico.

The 43-year-old Fukuzaki was cited this week by the Fishermen Cooperative Association with a plaque at dockside ceremonies.

Captain Frank Manaka, who has been Fukuzaki's buddy for 25 years, said the hero was the man to pick with the old general store, weathered ruins of the slaughterhouse, the "crik" which ran nearby looked unbelievably small.

NISEI FEDERAL CIVIL SERVICE WORKERS URGED TO AVOID DISCRIMINATION IN GOVERNMENT EMPLOYMENT

WASHINGTON - Seeking means whereby voluntary groups may be induced to participate in the National Committee on Government Employment Policy, the Federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has been working for a year with the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) to gain support among federal agency officials.

The JACL was represented by Ben Nason, D.C., chapter president, and by Helen Mineta, D.C. chapter secretary.

The committee's objective was to gain support among federal agency officials and improve the image of the JACL as a reputable organization.

This objective was achieved by the JACL's active participation in the committee's efforts to ensure that recruitment and employment practices in federal agencies are fair and equitable.

The committee's success is attributed to the JACL's active involvement in the committee's efforts to ensure that recruitment and employment practices in federal agencies are fair and equitable.
