PRESIDENT'S CORNER:
Goodwill banquet as investment in community

A fortnight ago, native of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Nishitani, this writer had the pleasure and honor of speaking before the Placer County JACL's 16th annual goodwill banquet. This is undoubtedly one of the outstanding affairs of its kind on a local chapter level. A crowd estimated at over 300 persons attended. The leading civic figures of the community including the Mayor, State Senator, and Assemblyman, the Sheriff, and Members of the Board of Supervisors and City Council were present as well as the leading business and professional men of the district.

The Placer County JACL is gradually gaining respect and recognized in its area that community leaders look forward eagerly to this yearly event. The entire community is anxious to show its friendship and support for this chapter and its members.

Chapter members do their part in inviting their friends to accompany them to the banquet as their personal guests.

In terms of public relations and community good will, such affairs is inestimable to both the local chapter and to National JACL. President Nishitani's hope that goodwill banquets of this nature—possibly in conjunction with the installation of new officers—will be held by as many of our local chapters as possible.

Undoubtedly this is one of the surest and best ways to help integration and community acceptance among all types of our population.

Since everyone benefits, cooperation and enthusiasm generally run high on affairs of this nature.

As one Placer County member said, "Our relations in the community are on a high plane and will keep it that way ... This is the best investment we can make in our community."

—Dr. Roy Nishitani

The JACL policy statement stands firm on the stand of Japanese temporary farm workers. The JACL supports their rights and advocates for fair treatment.

GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE TO HEAR JOB DISCRIMINATION IN FRESNO SET UP

FRESNO. — A grievance committee has been appointed to the City Commission to hear complaints of job discrimination because of race. In a report now on file by a committee formed a year ago to study the problem, Mayor Mike Iwatsubo, a member of the study group, said the committee will not make a decision on the appeals.

The group, headed by Rev. Ken Yoshida, pastor of the First Methodist Church, also proposed a community educational program.

The grievances heard by the committee would be a matter of record and reported to the City Commission.

"Such a standing committee," says the report, "would serve as a clearing house to indicate the number and nature of complaints involving the question of racial discrimination in employment and this committee would also offer an educational opportunity to employees and to the general public.

"We further recommend that this committee be appointed by the Mayor and, that the educational and publicity program follow as it was practiced in the committee.

"The other temporary farm workers from Japan should be given the same opportunity to earn a livelihood as that afforded workers from any other country under our laws and regulations. We believe that such a program would benefit us in the national organization: vegetable growers as well as citrus growers. It is our hope that we can help to earn a livelihood as that afforded workers from any other country under our laws and regulations. We believe that such a program would benefit us in the national organization: vegetable growers as well as citrus growers. It is our hope that we can help to explain this to the workers from Japan.

"The committee recommends that the City Charter be amended to provide for a grievance committee to hear complaints of job discrimination in employment.

S.F. REPORT: Employment for stationery workers many to keep at home life

Oxnard. — For the past month, a group of 150 newly arrived Japanese temporary workers have been working on the fields in this area. They are employed by the agricultural labor service agency.

The workers are paid $50 to $100 a week, according to the kind of work they do. Since the Japanese government arranged for these workers to come to America, they are allowed to return to their homeland at any time.

"The climate seemed suitable for growing many vegetables, and the workers are interested in growing vegetables in their homeland. They are happy with the climate, and they are looking forward to returning home soon.

Housewives in politics

Denver

This past election I got a chance to look into politics from my housewife's point of view. In Colorado one of the key contests was the race for the seat of Sen. Eugene Mil- liken, one of the Senate Agriculture leaders, who did not run for reelection but was defeated in the primary by the colorful Dan Thornton, former governor and a Republican from Denver. Thornton, one of President Eisenhower's closest friends, had a farm group on Ike's coat-tails and expected to win easily.

Among the Democrats an obvious candidate was John Carroll, former congressman and one time White House assistant. His record was that of a Roosevelt Democrat and he was now a Denver attorney, was of the Democratic leadership obviously favored Brannan. Carroll insisted on remaining in the contest despite the fact that most of the Democrats were urging him to drop out. When he started his campaign against Thornton, Carroll was a pitcher which had gone to the political well under Truman and now a Denver attorney, was of the Democratic leadership obviously favored Brannan. ## WOMEN PUSH PHONE CAMPAIGN

When he started his campaign against Thornton, Carroll had set up a network of volunteer women. The number of these women and Marrile's home state, would be of landslide proportions. Few, if any, were the politico's secrets who told John Carroll the truth about the Eisenhower tide. The Demo- cratic National Committee, which was pouring its money into the campaign, was not as sure as the native Masons. Frank Church in other critical Senate races, sent Carroll only a small fraction of his contribution because of the state of the control was elsewhere.

Nihongo in grade school

- American, as a people, are descendant of many nations on the face of the earth. It is important to learn one language. Those who have visited overseas have been surprised to find English widely spoken and, in turn, are embarrassed by their own lack of ability to communicate in other tongues. There is some hope for change—at least in California. Fifteen elementary and junior high school children learning a second language. Such instruction, which began in 1934, is now carried on in 1,900 schools in 357 cities and towns of 44 states.

Whenissociation is started by the grade-school children, no asserts an official of the Modern Language Association in the United States in a foreign language in order to be able to write and speak English. The program has been well received by merchants. There is the largest number of votes will be elected for a term of two years. There were 35 Flags presented then and Japanese as their first language.

The enrichment that comes from acquaintance with a second language is without question. If the State Dept. of Education in Sacramento can be encouraged to assist local school districts in the enlargement of their curricula, it may hasten the day when Americans can become more aware of the skills necessary for living in an international world.

- With Nisei becoming members of various school boards and many mothers taking active roles in parent-teacher groups, there seem to be some likely proponents for teaching Japanese at the conversational level in the grade schools.

The elements of the Japanese language were taught to me in Japanese, and then I made the switch to English. The curriculum is deeply rooted in the history of California. If we are to teach our children about Japanese culture, it will be wise to remember the advice of the Modern Language Association to start with grade-school children.

FINAL CUFF NOTES

- We’re leaving the society angle of the invitational premiere tomorrow night of “The August Moon” for San Diego next week. But we have a few personal observations to make. After our visit to Los Angeles we made it a practice of doing the glamour Hollywood sorts its stars and guests—like driving to the front of Pantages Theater and having an attendant park our limousine (a dusty Ford). We found that Japanese title of “Teahouse” from right to left. All other Japanese words are written from right to left, however. And Col. Purdy was one for signs. Aside from coming on stage from time to time, Machiko Kyo’s dance fit with two girls peeling off kimono and the bird’s-eye view of the hibiscus and pond stand out. That brings to mind a certain “nichio” (Chinese looking bird) that was mentioned in the film twice just to make the Nisei aware of the extras. I know the old folks will like this immensely.

The JACL, as a national organization officially dated from its birth at the Seattle convention in 1930, but things had been going on for years, developments that are not part of the approach, "oting age, the idea of sponsoring a Citizens League official record, but nevertheless deserve mention.

So on January 1, 1928, the first issue of the Japanese American Citizen, known as the "Japanese American Citizen"". This was a natural step for the community, as there was a need for a voice for the Nisei in their duties as voters when they became of voting age. This was a crucial point in the organization's history, as it allowed for the formation of the Citizens League, which is still going strong today.

The need for such an organization was evident, especially in the years following the Japanese American internment during World War II. The Citizens League was formed to protect the rights of the Nisei and to ensure their participation in the democratic process. This was a significant step in the fight for civil rights and equality for the Nisei.

In conclusion, the Japanese American Citizens League has played a crucial role in the struggle for civil rights and equality for the Nisei. Their work continues to this day, as they continue to fight for the rights of the Nisei and to ensure their participation in the democratic process. The league's work is a testament to the resilience and determination of the Nisei, and their contributions to American society.

In this great jet and atomic age we live in a world which is changing rapidly and in ways which, however important they may be. One such revolution which is influencing the process is Communist China. When our attention is called to China, we seem to angrily deny its existence. But the Chinese themselves are not so naive, and their impact on the United States is significant. They are a vital factor in the world of tomorrow.

For the first time since 1945, the Chinese Communist Party held a national congress on November 18th, in Peking. They claim that only 10 million out of China's 120 million people are not under their control, or at least influenced by them. In the cities and towns, state has in wholesale lot taken over private industry, workers are now organized under the party and have a place in the government.
