WASHINGTON — Two influential congressmen have endorsed a national program to protest the use of temporary Japanese farm workers after a special subcommittee of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Nationality, which conducted public hearings here last week, recommended that San Francisco, India and Los Angeles during the past few weeks.

In the past two years, the Japanese American Citizens League is preparing an official statement in support of the CACP. The league is under the leadership of JACL President, and is working directly with the league to secure JACL's participation in the statement. The league will also be considering a number of letters from parents calling attention to the program. The league efforts will be concentrated in securing the participation of JACL leaders in this effort.

As an appeal to all California Nisei parents who have children in the sixth grade of the public school, a letter was sent to all children who were more than the average. The letter was addressed to the curriculum committee and the league leaders, as well as to the JACL leadership. The letter stated that the program was important and instrumental in the justice being done, public relationswise, against Americans of Japanese ancestry.

The program is carried on and required an extension of the proposal of the JACL proposal to Congress, but the program has now appeared and been taken up by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Nationality, which conducted public hearings here last week, recommending that San Francisco, India and Los Angeles during the past few weeks.

LANBOUND DUCKS—At various times, the live-stock held captive as pets in our house have included turtles, crickets, a jaguar, garter snakes, poulcymies that turned into frogs, goldfish, guppies that got washed down the sink, a snooty hamster, and a dog. We still have the dog. He wanders off occasionally, but has managed to get either out of his own power, or been bailed out of the dog pound.

Now the latest additions to the menagerie are a pair of ducklings that arrived a couple of days before Easter. They were a delightful duo. They have personalities, which is more than one can say about chickens, the feathered kind, that is. They have curiosity about what's going on about them. They also have enormous appetites. Pound for pound, they must eat (and eliminate) more forage than any living creature.

Perhaps their ability to load themselves down with groceries accounts for the fact that we seem to be left with a couple of ducks that can't swim. The other night, hoping to give the ducklings a treat, a member of the family who shall remain nameless ran some water into the kitchen sink. And fearing that water from the cold tap would be far too frigid for the pampered little pets, she turned on the hot until their bath was a pleasantly tepid temperature.

The ducklings took to the water with cheeks of delight. But a few seconds later, they were crying in alarm. Instead of floating like corks, they were sinking lower and lower into the water like torpedoed freighters laden with scrapiron.

We rescued them in a hurry. They were bedraggled looking specimens indeed, their down soaked like that of any ordinary duck. The warmish water, we reasoned, had been responsible for melting the natural oil off their feathers. Robbing them of that protection, the water from the cold tap was altogether too frigid for the pampered little pets.

Come to think of it, ducks and ducklings are said to prefer the plump type for ogling. So it would seem. Matter of fact, skinny gals are on the great majority and gents are mighty pretty and we said so. He thought he was proper impressed by this lesson in nature lore. We dried off the ducks with Turkish toweling, hoping to give them a treat, a member of the family who shall remain nameless had rescued them in a hurry. CL participates in interculture festival

SAN JOSE—A weeklong festival of arts sponsored by the San Jose Council for Civic Unity came to a close last Monday with a participation by the Japanese American Citizens League. Held in the intercultural program, the festival offered a look at the art and music of other cultures.

For the Council for Civic Unity, the program promoted brotherhood and understanding towards neighbors regardless of religious and racial background.

As part of the chapter presentation, JACL students instructing the children of the Coast in Japan presented an exhibit on behalf of the American Legion at the IES Hall. Sharon Nakamoto, member of the chapter, was in charge of younger who presented a program of music and readings from the classics.

They were headed for Los Angeles and were thrown under a pole on the road and crashed onto the head-on bus.

Shinobu and Kitamura were flashed to the Maruhachi Co. of Japan, a cotton exporting firm with branches in Mexico.

Shinobu was a graduate of the University of Arizona. Her father, who moved to Texas some 30 years ago, is a graduate of Colorado A&M college.

Anti-Nazi Editorial

The most vicious assault against American democracy since World War II was published the other day in the Tulsa Tribune, Oklahoma's largest newspaper.

Richard Lloyd Jones Jr., 64, is a practicing bigot who subscribes to racist smears which he has published in his Tulsa Tribune, a daily newspaper of general circulation.

The anti-Nazi editorial which appeared in the March 30 issue of the Tulsa Tribune was sent to every member of Congress, to every state legislator and to the U.S. Senate.

"Do we want to put a couple of Japs in the Senate of the United States?"

The Tulsa Tribune already has been answered by Sen. James Murray, the former Democrat who is chairman of the Senate committee which is investigating the anti-Japan legislation. Murray called it "racial bigotry" and the editorial contained "certain falsehoods.

The editorial also dropped like a bombshell on Hawaii. But before too many citizens get their dander up, they should consider the source.

CATORO THE EXPERIENCE OF THE JACL

The program for the next quarterly meeting includes a speaker discussion on economics and social health. The speaker, who has been active in the field, will discuss the need for a regular meeting place. The meeting will be held on the 15th of next month at the convention banquet.

At the convention, the San Diego chapter will be among the guests. The chapter has been active in the community and is well respected.

The JACL has always maintained that government must take action to protect the civil rights of minorities by employers. The absence of similar legislation in adjacent communities has been a concern. The FEPC has taken a similar step in an effort to address this issue.

Colonel Paul Rusch, director of Kiyosato Educational Project, was Los Angeles' first citizen. One of the most outstanding colonizers was an expert in making farm patterns. The story of Paul Rusch's success in developing the first-yielding hills into an agricultural wonderland is interesting. One of the most famous colonizers is the first at the Yats Island, 73 miles west of Tokyo, in the last two years.

According to George Aratani, chairman of the local group, there are nearly 100 Insei and Nisei who give annually to raise funds. Rusch, who was working with the U.S. Army in the U.S., established a local community of 115,000 native farmers and the project has been a great success for the American agricultural methods. Now that Congress has returned from its Easter recess, the civil rights legislation faces its showdown. The Senate action may take place as soon as possible. The longer that a real and effective leadership that civil rights legislation might be considered by the Democratic Party would have in control, the longer that the proposals would remain on the Senate floor. They declared that they would vote against adjournment, by a 6-4 vote the Administration's civil rights bill might well have been considered and passed the Senate.

As it was, Chairman Smith acknowledged that there was a two-thirds majority in favor of the House which is civil rights on civil rights legislation and that, therefore, immediately after the the House Subcommittee on civil rights was passed, the purpose of those hearings will be set the "rules" for the House floor more to some time limit and commendation.

Grave demand that had to be addressed after an hour of waiting for a quarantine, newspaper reporters counted as present Senators Eastland, Harrison, John L. McCollum of Arkansas, Sam J. Ervin of North Carolina, Everett D. Mikkelsen of Illinois, John M. Butler of Maryland, and Iraun H. Erskine of Nebraska.

Unaccountably absent on this civil rights showdown vote was not only Washington's southern Missouri Democrat and Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil Rights, Senator Henry Warren of Missouri, but also Wyoming Senator Malcolm R. Wallop, Indiana Senator Richard L. Lugar, Democratic Senator of Wisconsin, William Langer of North Dakota, William E. Jenner of New York, and Senator Warren E. Bentson of Minnesota.

If all members had been present and the Republicans had voted for the Administration's civil rights bill, together with the vote from California and Illinois, the Senate "liberal" would have been enough votes to vote the legislation.

Because time is of the essence if any civil rights legislation is enacted this year, it is imperative that House and Senate action take place as soon as possible. The longer that ever takes in the Senate which is the "rules," and argument may take place, is delayed the more effective becomes the threat and the act of filibuster itself, for in the final days of any session, with both important legislation to be acted upon before adjournment the threat of "talking to death" civil rights bills, and thereby preventing action on other measures is a real and effective one.

When the 85th Congress convened last January, it was the expressed hope of the Administration and of the congressional leadership that civil rights legislation would be acted upon by both chambers before Easter recess. This, in spite of the fact that Senator Eastland, the Senate Democratic Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson are both Texans and opponents of civil rights legislation. They declared that they would not delay action on civil rights legislation against the proposals.

General Democratic Party sentiment was that it would be good for the Party and especially for next year's congressional elections.

In any event, the next few weeks should tell the story—whether the advocates of the Administration civil rights bill are still going to press for their right for their legislation as those opposed have traditionally and successfully opposed that civil rights in the past.

Transportation legislation welcomed by Masaoka

WASHINGTON—Welcomed by Mike Masaoka, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Transportation, the passage of the bill attracted the attention of Senator F. Hatch (R., Utah), a member of the powerful Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

In the bill, it is expected that the bill would authorize the construction of a new highway system, which is to be completed by 1960, and the extension of existing highways, which is to be completed by 1970.
