Lily-white 'trucks with govt financing doomed by judge

SACRAMENTO. - Federal funds are now being used to build homes in tracts and subdivisions not generally open to Negroes, an innovative use of such homes by reason of color, of creed, or color. Sacramento Superior Court Judge James H. Oakley has ruled.

The ruling was in a memorandum opinion, which is not final until issuance of a judgment and decree.

Judge Oakley said that if equal rights for Negroes applies to marriage, education, recreation and public housing, "there would seem to be no basis for denying its application to 'real property.'"

His decision was in favor of Oliver A. Ming, a Negro WWII veteran who sued the Sacramento Real Estate Board, and several subdivision developers, charging he had been turned down in attempts to buy a new home.

During the week-long trial in March, Ming had charged through his attorneys, William Lynn and: Thomas S. Nagano, that there was a conscious effort by builders and developers to keep the housing market "whites only." He contended that this was a "national convention and it is incumbent upon 'all' to help determine JACL's program for the coming biennium.

Salt Lake JACL was particularly gracious in volunteering to host the 1957 Biennial. Considering the lack of a national or regional office nearby which could assume much of the paper work and details in planning, the Salt Lake convention board has done remarkably well. Other chapters should express their appreciation by giving them untiring support.

West Coast JACLers who intend to drive to Salt Lake City will find many attractions along the way. Reno, Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, Yellow outskirts can best express the many attractions along much of the paper work and details in planning, the Salt Lake convention board has done remarkably well. Other chapters should express their appreciation by giving them untiring support.

Spokane, Wash.

MAGNIFICENT — A bright new landmark in this Eastern Washington metropolis is the Highland Park Methodist Church. It is starkly beautiful in the modern tradition. It might even be called magnificent, although it lacks the sire for such a description. It's estimated that the church would have cost $150,000 to build, although generous assistance from volunteers held the actual expenditure to something like $95,000.

The Rev. Shigeo Shimada is pastor of Highland Park Methodist, and the Japanese Americans of Spokane are justifiably proud of the church that they've built. Not only did they raise the largest portion of the cash through pledges, but members had a big role in the actual shaping of the building.

There was, for instance, Frank Toribara, architect. He designed a functional building with a steep-pitched, open beam ceiling. Ed Iwata and his construction company took Toribara's plans and translated them in terms of concrete and mortar, concrete and wood and soon the building began to take shape.

After that, Sumio Matsumoto and his father-in-law, Ryoko Nakashima, Landscape gardeners, took advantage of the great black-buckeye site to build a beautiful rock garden. Many farmers in the congregation brought their power equipment to help move the boulders and the city even lent back-hoes to make the precise adjustments of positioning demanded by Nishikawa's artistic instincts.

The womenfolk helped with a benefit sukiyaki dinner, generously publicized in the press. They had expected perhaps 500 of the faithful, but more than a thousand townfolk turned out on each of two nights and ran the girls ragged.

But there is much more to the magnificent pew, carpeting and drapes than to be installed, the Highland Park Methodist Church is one of Spokane's handsomest and certainly a stunning improvement over the Grant-Street church it replaces.

... AND THE FUTURE is a rather down-at-heels neighborhood that the sociologist would say is in a state of flux. It is surrounded by the homes of chilis, Negroes and Japanese Americans at another level where the church building will help increase the value of real estate in the area.

And finally, and in reality, this is a "Japanese" church. The question is whether it will remain so. I'm sorry I didn't get a chance to sound out the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Shimada, but even a casual visitor is moved to say that the church is magnificent.

For instance, will the congregation make an effort to invite people of other racial extractions to join them in worship in this fine new house of God? Or will they prefer to keep it pretty much a segregated church? And the area is progressive jazz records.

... and visit a few questions.

... the actual expenditure to something like $95,000.

... and the workshop for making convention decorations. Well, though it may sound, this group was able to attend and give us a tour of the creation hall. An outdoor barbecue chicken dinner will be featured.

... and above all, to be a "Japanese" church! "Flight" of all the artists.

... and greeting old ones. We lie come forward in making new friends and visit a few questions.

... and immigration. As a disparity in the number of cyanide origination with other Canadian citizens.

... and immigration. As a disparity in the number of Canadians of Asian descent in joint bid on immigration bias.

ANNIVERSARY

This month marks the first anniversary of our working here in the Southern California Regional Office, and it seems as though yesterday that we came in and embarked on our gear. As we look back on the year we are grateful for the many new friends we have made, and especially to all the Chapter presidents in the PSWC, who helped us along in getting adjusted to our work. Of course, we want to thank the members of the National Board, who are always available when we called the roll.

As we look ahead to the year of service, it is really the most enjoyable evening.

Mile-Hi Clers attend annual conflagration of Commissions against Discrimination

DENVER — As part of its continuing interest in and concern for equal opportunities for all Americans, the Mile-Hi JACL participated in the tenth annual meeting of the Conference of Commissions against Discrimination, which was held from July 15-17.

A conference highlight was the address by Emmett Heitler, general manager of F.W. Woolworth, on "Life Good Business." He pointed out that discrimination is costing the United States $300 million to $500 million every year.

Full survey

He cited the example of national bakers' union as a successful case of discrimination processing over $425 million worth of goods and services against a $2 billion pay check.

At about 2:00 p.m. last Saturday week in San Francisco, a delegation of 15 JACLers, who had just returned from a trip to Japan, was addressed by a speaker at the JACL headquarters in the Woman's Building.

The delegation, which consisted of 15 JACLers, had just arrived in San Francisco after a trip to Japan to attend the JACL Convention last week. The delegation included 15 JACLers, who had just returned from a trip to Japan. They were addressed by a speaker at the JACL headquarters in the Woman's Building.

Amidst the dignitaries present was an old acquaintance, a British author who had written a book on JACL history. The author, known for his insightful analysis of JACL affairs, was greeted warmly by the JACLers present. A lively discussion ensued, with the author sharing his thoughts on the current state of JACL affairs and the challenges facing the organization. The JACLers listened intently, eager to learn more about the author's perspective on the issues at hand.

As the discussion came to a close, the author made a call for action, urging the JACLers to remain committed to their mission and to continue working towards a brighter future for JACL. The JACLers responded with resolve, determined to uphold the values and principles upon which the organization was founded.

The meeting concluded with a round of applause and a promise to stay in touch. The author departed, promising to return soon with more updates and insights. The JACLers, buoyed by the author's words, left the meeting feeling motivated and inspired to continue their work towards a better JACL.

San Francisco JACL Convention

At the San Francisco JACL Convention, a number of resolutions were passed and discussions were held on various topics of interest to JACL members. The convention was held at the JACL headquarters in the Woman's Building.

A resolution was passed to increase the number of JACLers attending the convention. The resolution was supported by a majority of attendees, who believed that a larger presence would help to strengthen the organization and increase its visibility.

A discussion was held on the need for increased funding to support JACL activities. Members of the JACLers present argued that increased funding would allow the organization to expand its reach and increase its impact.

A resolution was passed to support the efforts of JACL members in their communities. The JACLers present were encouraged to continue their work in supporting JACL members and to collaborate with other organizations to achieve common goals.

The convention concluded with a round of applause and a promise to stay in touch. The JACLers, buoyed by the spirit of unity and the resolve to work towards a better JACL, left the meeting feeling motivated and inspired to continue their work towards a better JACL.

OLYMPIC CHAMPION KONO Nominated for 'NISEI OF BNIENNAUM' AWARD

Olympic weightlifting champion Tommy T. Kono, now of Honolulu, has been nominated by members of the Sacramento Chapter of the Jappanese American Citizens League for the Nisei of the Biennium Award. The nomination was made Monday by George J. Inagaki, chairman, and five others of the committee.

It was the first nomination received for the JACL Nisei of the Biennium Award to be made at the request of the biennial National Convention in Honolulu this week.

Kono is considered the most noted Nisei weightlifter who has the distinction of being the only Nisei selected for this national honor for the last two years.

The Sacramento JACL nominated Kono because of his leadership category, Inagaki revealed.

Inagaki is president of the California State College Foundation which has the distinction of being the only Nisei selected for this national honor for the last two years.

What it MEANS TO BE AN ‘EBIHAN’

'We will never bring disgrace to our city... We will strive unceasingly to quicken the public sense of civic duty... We will transmit this message to the youth of tomorrow',"
Japanese in Brazil

Washington, D.C.

LAST WEEK June 18, the more than 69,000 persons of Japanese ancestry in Brazil celebrated the 50th anniversary of the arrival of the first immigrant ship, the old freighter Kasato Maru. The ship, sailing around the Horn to Brazil, the seaport for Sao Paulo, the 28 who landed in Santos, serve as the nation's Japanese pioneers.

They participate in all aspects of community life, though many, especially in the isolated, rural areas, find it necessary to cultivate on a small scale for subsistence. Some arc making a living by raising bananas, coffee, rice, and corn, 60 percent of the potatoes, 30 percent of the other vegetables, 20 percent of the coffee, and 80 percent of the oranges.

The trend of Japanese immigration is toward the cities. The introduction of vegetables that now thought could ever grow in the area. At the moment, the Japanese are introducing the growing of peanuts and other specialty crops and are being transformed by the Japanese from quiet, sleepy places into modern, prosperous towns.

They have established large-scale cooperatives that are models for the surrounding territories and have even introduced ice-planting.

ALSO, UNLIKE AS to the United States, Japan export workers are not needed. The result is that the Japanese are participating in the construction of a steel mill in the state of Minas Gerais that is needed to turn out 500,000 tons annually. Japanese companies and engineers are helping to build this 11 million dollar shipyard in Rio de Janeiro. One of the largest Japanese rice-growing projects is among a total.

Blueprints are ready for a plant to manufacture Japanese jeeps-type vehicles. And all across Brazil's booming industrial landscapes, they are growing rich in the steaming jungles of Amazonas and Para in the north.

The IMMIGRATION PATTERN to Brazil has been, and still is, a model for all countries that wish to attract millions of immigrants. The government-assisted companies advance first and then expand the activity, and the immigrants are regarded from the beginning as part of the national fabric, not as a crowd of strangers in a country.

Since that first shipload, about 250,000 Japanese have arrived in Brazil. Some 70 percent of the population still resides in the state of Sao Paulo, with the largest concentration in the capital city, Rio de Janeiro. They are also found in the states of Minas Gerais, Bahia, and Mato Grosso.

SALT LAKE CITY — JACL.

Japanese Helio Matsui is an expert on the subject of travel to Brazil. He has been to Brazil many times and has written extensively about his experiences. His latest book, "Brazil for the Japanese," is widely read by travelers to Brazil.

Japanese immigrants in Brazil have made a significant contribution to the country's economy and culture. They have brought a strong work ethic, a willingness to adapt to new environments, and an understanding of the importance of community. Their presence has helped to shape the country's development and has contributed to its unique character.

69 chapters adopt travel pool plan

SAN FRANCISCO. — With 69 chapters endorsing the various travel accommodations available here for the 1958 JACL biennial convention, hotel headquarters, the hotel headquarters of Sao Paulo are in charge of the building of the hotel.

The number of units for convention headquarters, Nakashima revealed. The convention chairman Rupert Busa.

The proposal was prompted by the current stage of biennial conventions, except in 1959, when the JACL convention was scheduled to be held at the same place.

The matter of the convention travel pool and its problems are to be considered again at the Salt Lake convention, Satow added.

The 1956 convention, the district council portion of $75 was advertised while the chapter portion was to be studied further.
