Arizona, which regards manufacturing as its biggest industry today, found its progress in agriculture in terms of economic wealth, has attracted new residents in astounding numbers in the past decade.

Harry Masunaga was one of them, leaving a mild-tempered Gardenia to continue his wholesale nursery business in desert climate and succeeding. This past week, his selection as a "Meet Mr. slogan" in the Phoenix Gazette focused a Nisei business activity that has developed in the past year other than farming.

His success in the wholesale nursery business is matched by his activities in real estate development sales as directArizona nursery panies in Arizona as well as being on the sales force of JACLer Tom Kadodome in the other Nisei enterprise in Phoenix which has become a tourist attraction.

All of this success enjoys the support of his Nisei ancestry in Arizona dealing with land is marred by one fact-— that by tomorrow he will be an alien by law.

Now that the State of Washington has passed legislation to place its outmoded alien laws on the ballot to be stricken from its state constitution, it behooves JACLers in Arizona to initiate similar interest.

They can take heart in the gesture made by the two Nisei JACL chapters, which are leading the fight to secure the rights of the Japanese American citizens.

Earl Ager, Shasta county ru-

It is interesting to note that male Nisei, born in Japan, are a son of an immigrant. The California supreme court validated our horsey and buggy situation. We hope that California Nisei, then now has the ability to write-up an annual report.

Gregory Peck’s latest movie outing is a likable piece of movielooking called “Pork Chop Hill.” This is the story of one small engagement in the Korean war and an army officer, Capt. Clemons, who has no wish to follow President Eisenhower’s account of the bloody U.S. assault on the Chinese Communist strongpoint. He brought in Lieut. Col. Clemons of the 28th Infantry Division, and if the movie experiences some hard and bitter facts of combat which Milestone could translate into cinematic terms, it is a director who has made some of the greatest of war films—one in particular, “All Quiet on the Western Front” and another, the battle of the Bulge (“Frontline Victory”).

Milestone is a director who has made hard and bitter facts of combat which Milestone could translate about as much force and reality as the screen can achieve.

The Rotarians of Hollywood made scores of war-inspired pictures but with the Nisei and Issei performers in the relocation camps, Japanese roles were played mainly by Chinese Americans.

“Bridge on the River Kwai.” The Japanese roles written into the script were taken by Nisei performers, and especially George Shibata.

The story has been told before, but Peck and Clemons chose the casting of roles and interviews some Japanese types. None according to Clemons, had the military bearing of the real Lieutenant Ohashi.

This was a Japanese American in his class at West Point and had trained with the 28th Infantry Division. His name was George Shibata, and he flew jets in the Korean war.

A check of Peston records showed Shibata had resigned his commission and was now studying law at the University of California. His commission, he said, was not far from Peck’s office at the Golden relations.

Thus The Rotarians of Hollywood have discovered a talent in the making of movies. Shibata has no wish to follow in the footsteps of a Sessue Hayakawa, but he has trained in the actual practice of law, either in Los Angeles or in Utah. Shibata is a graduate of the University of California, and he has a law degree from the University of Arizona, where he served as law clerk for the late Sen. Harold D. Uehara of Hawaii.

It is Shibata’s opinion that Hollywood will discover how to depict the human being who has his doubts as well as his duty. Shibata said the other Ga roles should be played by genuine types, rather than with star personalities.

By George McCartney, Shibata was under consideration as the colorful night dancer, his role in the film is Robert Kino, Eiji Yamashiro, James Goto, Jim Vagi, Bob Okazaki, Rollin Ngriyama, Dale Shibata, Fred Tayama.

SALINAS MOOTS NEED OF CHAPTER HEADQUARTERS

SALINAS. — A lively discussion marked the meeting of the Salinas Valley JACL last Monday, but not to have a chapter headquarters built.

The committee in charge, composed of Harry J. Ishimura, Paulina A. Santos, and Vincent D'Alfonso, had this to say: "We are of the opinion that a need existed, particularly for the youth of the community.

While no definitive problem were evident among the local JACL, the prospect of a meeting place for these individuals would mitigate the pressure, the proponents said.

Proposers recalled the Jisc in the past as a "sick spot" and still contributed willingly to community activities, although some of the Nisei today are not following in their footsteps, although capable of contributing.

Those in opposition, however, felt that the Japanese American community already have too many small members to afford a headquarters building, along with the opinion that if the project were to be approved, the Nisei in JACL would avoid fund raising campaigns at the present time, further suggested that the JACL would not help by raising chapter dues.

It is possible that motion might be on the resolution to rent a room from the local chapter. The building of a headquarters building, in this respect, is not all too far away in terms of dollars, they felt.

Further discussion is set for the General JACL convention.

Juvenile Delinquency to Rise

The Japanese American Youth, Inc. has established a Juvenile Delinquency Task Force to identify and prevent the causes of juvenile delinquency.

In a recent survey, it was found that nearly 30% of the incarcerated youth had a history of truancy, 25% had a history of weapons possession, and 20% had a history of substance abuse. The task force will work closely with educators, parents, and community leaders to address these issues and provide support for at-risk youth.

Oxnard City Council supports anti-bias housing resolution

OXNARD. — The Oxnard City Council has submitted to the Ventura County NAACP branch a resolution which shall be "subject to discrimination or segregation in the renting of housing constructed with public assistance."

The Council has directed that all builders, developers and dealers of real estate who are renting housing be notified of its action. President J. H. Jones, president of the Ventura County NAACP, told the Oxnard Council yesterday that the Oxnard are not only prevented from buying housing of their choice through various kinds of discrimination, but also have to pay more and make higher down payments.

"This is a heavy weight to carry on our shoulders," the president said in Executive session in . . . jobs," he stated.

Bars may lose license on bias

SACRAMENTO. — The Assembly passed 48-12 and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill which gives the Governor the power to license or refuse to license any beer, wine or spirituous liquor license on bias. The measure (AB 126, written by Assemblyman Philip Burton of San Francisco) directs the State Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control to close a bar for repeated refusal to serve Negroes. The Governor can refuse to issue a license.

"This is an outright infringement of the businessmen's rights," argued Assemblyman Harold Barker, D-San Jose.

CIVIL RIGHTS

The bill has the support of the National JCRL, which fought against it in the Senate.

The bill is directed to the Senate waiting Senate action includes a new tax formula for insurance companies, an extension of employees' rights in the case of company-owned employees, and an amendment to the so-called Smith Act to provide for prosecution of subversives who merely "organize."
