COLUMEN LEFT:
A week we hadn't intended to miss

Thanks to the unexpected and bitter reaction of Soviet Premier Khrushchev to General Eisenhower's proclamation for July 19 to 25 captive Nations week achieved an impact that was worldwide. Even its advocates in Congress could not have dreamed this was possible as most proclamations are on the whole symbolic statements wrapped in broad generalities that are deemed most appropriate for the period.

As a result, the peoples behind the Curtain now have a better understanding of the attitude of the American people to wards their plight. The communist tyranny. Soviet foreign policy also was put back balance.

Following the unanimity of the Council by Congress, the President invited the American people "to study the plight of Soviet -dominated nations and to recommit to themselves the support of the just aspirations of the peoples of those captive nations."

Nothing was said for the captive peoples to violence or rebellion, but this harmless appeal for some unknown reasonsmarted the Krem ilin. That shortcoming, however, has been made up by the publicity given to Washington, in the person of Senator Daniel Inouye, and the incredible number of votes he received in his successful campaign.

Youth Policy in Substance — Some of the answers may be found in the second half of this article appearing in the next issue of the Pacific Citizen. An earlier article on the subject has been published in the San Francisco Bay Area. The article was written by the Chairman of the Committee on Youth Policy. It discusses the importance of involving young people in the decision-making process of the organization. The author suggests that this can be done by creating a youth advisory committee that will provide input on important issues to the Board of Directors. The author also emphasizes the need for young people to have a voice in the organization's policies and decisions.

WACCAGIN — If you can't get a political job, write your congressman! This old American political truism worked out for Tatsuno Uchida, who had been active in Hi-Co activities in Southern California and who served about a year ago, prior to his induction into the Army, as an instructor at National JACL Headquarters in San Francisco.

Private Uchida was inducted into the Army last December and sent to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and assigned to a Medical Hospital. In the m a t m i m e, his mother suffered a stroke. So, like the foolish son that he is, Tatsuno requested a compassionate transfer to Fort MacArthur, Calif, in order to be near his sick mom.

When he was turned down through the JACL Washington Office, he requested Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, Republican of his home state of California, to ask the Department of the Army to grant a compassionate transfer. Last week, the Senator from California was informed that the Commanding General of Fort Sam Houston had ordered Private Uchida to report to the United States Army Garrison at Fort MacArthur for reassignment.

Hawaii's Model Election

Christian Science Monitor, July 29, 1959

Hawaii's first elections as a state were, like any state elections, first from within on the list of candidates. The results were as expected, with the majority of votes cast for the two major parties. However, the election also featured some smaller candidates who were able to capture a significant share of the vote. This was an indication of the growing political awareness among the electorate.

The final vote showed a clear party strength, with both Democratic and Republican organizations appearing to be strong. The results were significant for the future of the state, as they indicated a strong commitment to democratic principles.

Sen. Engle remarks on reversal of anti-Nisei feelings

WASHINGTON — To emphasize to his colleagues in the Senate the dangers of racial prejudice and to gain support for a number of public opinion in his state, Sen. Harry R. H. Johnston (D-Hawaii) presented arguments against the internment of Japanese Americans, which he emphasized was a first step in the movement for equal rights for all citizens.

Although the majority of California's population is Japanese American, Sen. Johnston is among the few who have spoken out against the internment of Japanese Americans. He believes that the internment was a violation of civil rights and that it had a negative impact on the state's economy. He suggested that the internment had been used to suppress the political activities of Japanese Americans, who were perceived as a threat to the stability of the state.

Sen. Johnston emphasized the importance of understanding the historical context of the internment and the role that it played in the movement for civil rights. He argued that the internment was a step in the movement for equal rights, and that it was important to acknowledge the past in order to move forward. He concluded by reminding his colleagues that the internment was a violation of civil rights and that it had a negative impact on the state's economy.

ROVING REPORTER—Visiting here this past week was a personable young Japanese newspaperman, named Seikosuke Otani. He drove a Koke Shimbun is set-territorial reputation as a contact lens expert and the firm learned they were in their late twenties and early thirties, had degrees in medicine and were professors some 10 or 12 Japanese doctors attending the meeting.

That, ironically, was at the hands of fellow Japanese correspondents. They snubbed him, Otani said, because he wished more young men and women—those on the way up—had degrees in medicine and were professors, rather than those who are about to retire.

Also, the Hillman had only two seats and a little room to move about. He estimated 350,000 of the cars have been sold in the United States and that between 250,000 and 300,000 are being used in the years to come. While working among the Nisei and active part in center activities.

More Samurai Swords in U.S. Than in Japan

NEW YORK—Jiamo Sato, on the search for ancient Samurai swords considered to be Japanese Artistic Sword Preservation Association's director, described such a sword Monday, saying that there are many more swords in Japan than in the United States.

However, there are only about 50,000 swords in the United States, according to Sato. He said that in Japan, swords are made for specific purposes and are kept in the homes of their owners. In the United States, swords are often kept in museums or in private collections.

Sato also referred to the thousands of Japanese American residents during World War II, who kept swords in their homes as a symbol of their patriotism and national pride.

JACERS WELCOME CONGRESSMAN DANIEL INOUE—This past weekend we were up before the crack of dawn in order to get to International Airport to extend our greetings to Daniel Inouye, our Congressman from Hawaii, who had a two-hour stopover before continuing on to Washington. We were informed that the highlights of his visit in Hawaii were Dr. Roy Nishikawa, Frank Chunan, Dr. Masa Uyehara and Dr. Makoto Uchida. Inouye flew from the West Jefferson Democratic Club and his wife Susie, were also present to greet him. Mrs. Moro presented Mrs. Inouye a bouquet of roses on behalf of the JACL members, to make great plans for the future.

We all joined the Inouye for breakfast and Frank Chunan and George Moro expressed the appreciation of all those present for the opportunity to meet with Inouye. He expressed his hopes that his new position would help promote a better understanding of the Japanese American community and his wish to serve as a voice of the Japanese American community. It was his hope to accomplish the job he was elected to do. We were quite pleased to have our Washington representative here with us and to have an opportunity to meet with him.

Join us at the next event.

When police and fire officials found Misa Suzuki walking into the living room of her apartment overlooking Central Park to greet the morning sun, they were astounded to find her surrounded by the hundreds of transparent tubes. Her very expression charged the atmosphere with electricity. "To be honest, I'm flaying in from Chicago," Misa's sister, Leslie Saiki, who is flying in from Chicago as well, said with a smile. Misa's long-time secretary and Gal Friday, Miyeko Kosobaya, was elected the Convention Chairman, and served all during the New York Chapter hosting this EDC-MDC Joint Convention. He was the person most responsible for sparking the idea of our Convention. As she continues to ascend the ladder of fame, her favorite, autographed portrait will be missed as prices during the EDC-MDC get-together, scheduled for the Labor Day weekend in New York City.

From Washington comes a letter signed by Misa and Sam Kii who are planning to attend our convention. They are more than happy to be coming from Chicago where we first met her two years ago. Sam is the only three-term president of the New York Chapter, serving from 1953 to 1956. For loyal services to the cause of JACL for more than the second "Person to Person" and "The Jack Paar Show." She has many JACL friends across the country, and her admirers are legion. Furthermore Pat autographed three of her top-selling LP albums, which will be given as prizes during the EDC-MDC get-together, scheduled for the Labor Day weekend in New York City.

Washington State Legionnaires

Seattle

At this moment, we dich our notes on the delights of driving the highway over the Cascade while en route to the National American Legion Convention, which opened on Saturday morning. At the same time, into the waste basket go our harvest reports of the past two weeks and again, we first crossed the highway to the summit of Snoqualmie Pass.

We believe that we should express our feeling of warm appreciation well up in our tired old heart by way of old friends and new friends in the American Legion. It is a real pleasure to represent the State of Washington in the Legion at this time of national legislation.

We were well received by the men of the state and the Legionnaires of the city of Seattle. We were surprised to learn that the lowering attorney, Olly Nixon (about 6 feet 7 inches), is our guest. Former National Commander of the Marine Corps, the late F. W. Davis, said that "perhaps a little more may be expected of us, much as Mike, so he could jump up with an answer on a moment's notice."

We were also surprised to learn that his father, a prominent member of Post 1 and new acquaintance from Connecticut, made almost a dozen recitations. Answers that did not seem quite adequate, when George Flood, a Washington State Legionnaires and a new acquaintance from Connecticut, was called to Chicago on business or profession was requested, he replied; "Oh, I'm an assistant attorney general for the State of Washington," he said, "and in my post it is, At this point we must describe that Wing is a snag, we think, when one of the chairmen asked, "Just how does Wing react to these matters?" he answered; "You can't get me to do any".
