REPEAL OF UTAH MIXED MARRIAGE BAN HELD LIKELY

Civil rights bills in Utah legislature reviewed at IDC meet

BY ALICE KASAI

SALT LAKE CITY. — Repeal of Utah's anti-miscegenation law in the current session of the state legislature appears to be the most promising of the various civil rights bills, which have been introduced, the Intermountain District Council meeting here Sunday was told.

Prof. Robert D. Goff, executive secretary of Utah's Citizens Committee on Civil Rights, addressed the first quarterly district meeting hosted by Salt Lake JACL at the Hotel Newhouse.

His introduction of Ralph Cannon (R) and Phyl Poulson (D), new state representatives of Salt Lake City, was one of the highlights of the day.

Goff added that the public accommodations bill has a chance; fair employment will get a good push from Rep. Cannon, and that fair housing will be the hardest to push against strong opposition from real estate and finance firm lobbyists.

The Citizens Committee was assured support from Governor Clyde on the anti-miscegenation bill. Public hearings are to be slated, according to Henry Kasai, who urged JACLers attend to show their support.

8 Chapters Present

All eight chapters of the IDC were represented. There were close to 50 delegates meeting in the Waters Room, while an equal number of IDYC youths met at the same time in the Terrace Room. A luncheon attended by both groups opened the day's session.

IDC Chairman Rupert Hachiyu commended the IDYC for being the first to organize.

National Director Mas Satow presented the National JACL scroll of appreciation to George Sugai and Joe Nishiooka, co-chairmen of the successful campaign to repeal the anti-oriental statute in the Idaho constitution. The Idaho chapters will be recognized at the district convention to be hosted by Boise Valley JACL in November.

In the report of activities by chapters, which the IDC features at all district meetings, unusual was the glaucoma clinic co-sponsored by Mt. Olympus and Salt Lake.

National Mental Health

Omaha

Since assuming the job of Mental Health Planning Executive with the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute to prepare a comprehensive Mental Health program for the State of Nebraska, I have been doing a great deal of reading in this field and find that much has been written, but relatively little has been done regarding the mental health of our citizenry.

A few of the most significant and important national developments are cited here.

In 1946, the National Mental Health Act was passed by Congress establishing the National Institute of Mental Health.

In 1953, the Joint Commission on Mental Illness and Health was established by the 84th Congress on July 25, 1953.

In January 1961, Report of the Surgeon General's Ad Hoc Committee - "Planning of Facilities for Mental Health Services."

In 1962, the Conference of the State and Territorial Mental Health Authorities recommended that Public Health Service develop guidelines and provide new funds to the States to implement community planning for mental health.

In May, 1962, the Governor's Conference resolved that each State develop a comprehensive master plan for coping with mental disability and promoting mental health.

Kennedy's Message

President Kennedy in his State of the Union message plainly stated his concern by stating "I believe that the abandonment of the mentally ill and the mentally retarded to the grim mercy of custodial institutions too often inflicts on them a needless cruelty which this nation should not endure."

Before this article goes to press this week, the President on Jan. 29 will unfold the full scope of his mental health program in a special message to Congress. This new program will put Uncle Sam into new and deep commitments for the prevention, treatment, rehabilitation, as well as the planning for an all-out drive on the mental health of all of the citizens of this Country.

The Administration will call for no less than 50 separate campaigns, one in each State of the Union, rallying all existing state, community and private resources but supported with copious new Federal Funds.

The President will call for "community centers" for the mentally ill, where intensive short term treatment, using a broad array of medical and social services which be put to use and the patients treated within the context of home.

Berkeley anti-bias housing act adopted

BERKELEY. — The City Council last week passed by a 5-2 vote the second reading of the tough ordinance against housing discrimination which goes into effect on Feb. 15.

Berkeley is the first city in the state with such an ordinance. It forbids refusal to sell or rent property to a person for reasons of race, religion, national origin or ancestry.

It applies to private property owners, real estate dealers and home-financing agencies. It carries a maximum penalty of $500 fine, six months in jail or both.

A four-man commission to be known as the Board of Intergroup Relations, backed by investigative and subpoena powers, will be set up to administer the law.

Nisei loyalty to U.S. cited as example for Chinese Malaysians to emulate in Malaya

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya. — The president of the Malayan Chinese Association called on Malaysian Chinese to be as loyal to Malaya as American-born Japanese have been to the United States, the United Press International reported on Jan. 18.

Tan Siew Sin, who also is finance minister in the Malayan government, said there are not "many races who can be more nationalistic than the Japanese."

But, he said, during World War II Japanese American units served with distinction in Europe.

"I have no doubt that the Chinese, who are deeply imbued with the Confucian concept of tolerance and brotherhood of nations, and men can be equally loyal, given the right leadership and right treatment."

He said that "it is clear that despite minor setbacks, a growing number of our community are coming to regard this country as their own and only home and the object of their loyalty."

The Chinese association is a strong supporter of prime minister Abdul Rahman's ruling anti-Communist Alliance Party.

Chinese comprise approximately 40 per cent of the Malayan Federation's population. The figure does not include Singapore which is roughly 80 per cent Chinese,

Nat'l JACL credit union in 'excellent shape', declares 4 1/2 p.c. dividends; members not fully using services

SALT LAKE CITY. — The National JACL Credit Union, at its 39th annual meeting Jan. 25, again declared 4 1/2 per cent dividends and said it was in excellent shape.

S. Ushio, president, revealed that in anticipation of expanding demands for credit union services and in order to encourage thrift among its near-900 members, a $200 U.S. savings bond would be given to a lucky member making deposits up to June 27. One chance is offered per $5 deposit. The credit union is also asking for social security numbers, since it must report dividends to the Internal Revenue Service from 1964. Continued participation in the National JACL Credit Union also requires JACL membership; therefore, prompt renewal through the home chapter is urged and the credit union office, at 129 W. 1st South, should be informed of the card number.

Tatsuomi Milani, credit committee chairman, reported 330 loans amounting to $348,773.36 were made in 1962. Perusal of the daily record indicated that some members approached finance companies for a loan, using their furniture as collateral. It was hoped that this type of loan would be made available to credit union members.

Workers Commended

Albert Oshita, supervisory committee chairman, commended the fine work of the staff, board of directors, credit committee and treasurer Ilio Okada.

In the treasurer's report (see the credit union Statement of Condition on page 4), counsel to the minority who are finding themselves in trouble was offered. "Use your credit union for your financial problems. . . . A major step toward financial security is a systematic and regular additions to your share account, even though it be a small amount."

To those who have over $2,000 in their share account, it was suggested new accounts be opened for the spouse or children with the amount over $2,000, which is the limit of life insurance.

New accounts can be opened with a 50 cents entrance fee.

To those who have small, inactive share accounts of one or two shares, they were urged to add to it this year. It would help the (Continued on Page 4)

Shady Hong Kong merchants bilk tourists, says Honolulu's collector of customs

HONOLULU. — Hong Kong is filled with unscrupulous merchants who prey on gullible American tourists, Honolulu Collector of Customs Dr. Ernest J. Mural said after returning from a two-week inspection tour.

"During my four days in Hong Kong," Mural said, "I consulted with our customs investigators and tried to visit as many stores as I could myself."

"All I can say is that our people should be very careful where they do their shopping in Hong Kong."

Mural warned that many merchants try to make sales of jade, sweaters and other articles of Red Chinese origin by claiming they "have things fixed up" so that a certificate of origin is not required. "That certificate certainly is required for such goods," Mural warned. "We insist on such a certificate—whether you bring the article in your luggage or have it sent by mail."

"It is partly the public's fault that these unscrupulous merchants get away with things like this."

"Signs are posted in the windows of those reputable shops which are licensed by the Hong Kong government to issue the certificates. But the public, in search of bargains, keeps going to these other fellows, who can naturally sell a little cheaper."

Mural said 900 sacks of Christmas mail were returned from the West Coast to Hong Kong senders this month. The reason was that the parcels were not accompanied by certificates of origin.

Infantry specialist to address NC-WN DC quarterly meet

UNION CITY. — Col. Bert Nishimura, principal speaker at the NC-WNDC district session banquet this Sunday at Kiote Hills Country Club, is with the Combat Development Experimentation Center at Fort Ord (not from the Presidio of Monterey as previously noted).

He was the main speaker at the Jan. 19 Salinas Valley JACL installation, which saw Tom "Lefty" Miyayaga assume the chapter presidency for a third time. He was elected president in 1951 and 1952.

A graduate of the Univ. of Hawaii, Col. Nishimura was one of the first Nisei officers to enter active service prior to World War II. One of his first commands was that of an airfield in Hawaii during the Pearl Harbor attack. Although scheduled to leave with the 100th Infantry, the Army recognized his exceptional talents and requested he remain to assist the military government in Hawaii. He eventually commanded Co. 1, Co. E and 2nd Bn. Hq. Co., of the 442nd Regt. at Camp Shelby and overseas.

Col. Nishimura was discharged after WW2, but recalled to active service with the start of the Korean conflict. He served 18 months in Korea with armored units.

Downtown L.A. JACL names Fr. Clement

LOS ANGELES. — A veteran Maryknoll Missioner of some 25 years, Father Clement, was named president of Downtown Los Angeles JACL this past week, succeeding Frank Omatsu.

The Catholic priest has been chaplain for the chapter, a six-year 1000er and attended most of the National JACL Conventions since 1954. He was in Japan before the war and assisted Japanese Americans during evacuation and relocation camp days.

The new chapter officers will be honored at a dinner meeting at Seibu Restaurant, Feb. 14, 7 p.m.

Star-Bulletin defends Sen. Inouye's stand for opposing changes in cloture rule

HONOLULU. — The Honolulu Star-Bulletin went to the defense of U.S. Sen. Dan Inouye in its Jan. 12 editorial after regional director Jack W. Hall of the HWWU had his letter published in the Advertiser attacking him for opposing a rule to cut off Senate debate by a majority vote.

"Unlimited debate in the U.S. Senate is a potent weapon for the protection of strong minorities," the Star-Bulletin declared. "This is recognized by Senator Inouye who says he will not support moves by liberal Senators to make it easier to shut off debate and thereby break filibusters."

"Coming from Senator Inouye, who is generally classed as a liberal, this may lift some eyebrows. Yet Mr. Inouye's position is by no means inconsistent," the editorial continued.

In last week's Pacific Citizen, Senator Fong announced he was joining the group in support of ending Senate debate by majority vote.

Hall's letter said the rule is supported by the Kennedy administration, the labor movement and progressive forces. "To find Dan allied with Senator Eastland and the conservative Southern bloc who are determined to continue the use of the filibuster to maintain white supremacy down to 1950s may, however," he said, Inouye in the past has identified himself with the Southern Democrats, Hall added.

The Star-Bulletin recalled that while the filibuster has come to be associated with civil rights legislation in recent years, some of the most famous filibusters in history have been waged not by conservatives but by liberals and noted that Wayne Morse of Oregon, an extreme liberal, conducted one of the longest one-man filibusters on record a few years ago.

"The point that Senator Inouye makes is a valid one," the Star-Bulletin feels. "The filibuster is primarily an instrument to protect minority rights. Although it is used mainly today by conservatives opposing civil rights, the time may come when liberals will want to use it in defense of their own positions."

Legislative Brake

"Voting to support the filibuster as a legislative brake is not the same thing as voting to support an automatic House Rules Committee. The filibuster can be used by any senator; a Rules Committee dominated by a powerful chairman becomes an instrument to be used by a single within a larger body, often becoming a veto exercised by a very small minority—and the same minority all the time."

Proceedings of the Senate for the first two weeks of this session only show continuing debate on the anti-filibuster rule changes and committee hearings.

Speculation this past week indicated a showdown by Jan. 31 on the rule changes was expected.

Isaac Matsushige starts today as regional director

SAN FRANCISCO. — The appointment of Isaac Matsushige, 46, parts department manager, western division of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., Los Angeles, as So. Calif. JACL regional director was announced today by National Director Mas Satow.

A LESSON IN LACONICS

Economy of language for one so rich in the knowledge, plans and objectives of the Japanese History Project as its director, Dr. Scott Miyakawa, is an arduous task. He kept brushing his coat sleeve to check the time while speaking at the Venice-Culver JACL installation dinner last Saturday. Yet he invested his half-hour speech with glimpses of the grandeur that embraces the project as well as with some of the little known facts and questions that stimulate this study.

Since Dr. Miyakawa will be on the "creamed chicken" circuit in the coming weeks, addressing several JACL installation and district council meetings, we promised him we wouldn't steal his thunder at this stage. By all means, make a point to hear him and later, if time permits, discuss informally with him on some of the points made in the speech.

We must be honest with Venice-Culver JACL here. It was not "creamed chicken" that was served but baked ham and pineapple. The scalloped potatoes looked tempting with toasted coconut shreds.

Seated at our table was the president of the Mar Vista Chapter of Commerce who thought the chapter should be renamed Venice-Mar Vista-Culver. Nothing laconic about that name.

In the Los Angeles area, the Venice-Culver installation parties score high in community public relations by inviting many non-Nisei to join them. One year, it was a group of local school administrators. Another year, it was a group of community leaders. This year, it seemed like the medical profession turned out in force. Next year, it might be the legal profession for its incoming president, Jack Nomura, is among them.

Going back to what Dr. Miyakawa had to say, he touched upon the seven "sub-topics" of the History Project. These were treated in detail in the Jan. 4 PC front page: "Why $200,000 Has Been Donated".

EN PASSANT—INCIDENTEMENTE

"Laconics" comes from the Greek, Lakonikos—an inhabitant of Laconia or Sparta, being noted for their brevity of speech and manner of speaking.

Lakonikos is derived from the Greek word, "lakos", meaning "hollow" but I'm sure the Greeks had another meaning besides the inference we see in the word today. In Crab's "English Synonyms" (we haven't plopped this book open in decades), it is noted that that which is "hollow" is destined by nature to contain; but that which is "empty" is deprived of its contents by a casualty; a nut is "hollow" for the purpose of receiving the fruit; it is "empty" if it contains no fruit. This kind of philological distinction is missing from the handy Webster dictionary.

If we had studied Greek, our "deck head" would have been its equivalent in this language of the great philosophers, dramatists and historians for this parting shot on the Venice - Culver installation but we only trifled with French and Spanish.

AROUND THE TOWN

Whereas the principal address at the Venice - Culver inaugural was condensed, the entire Southwest L.A. inaugural two weeks ago was a compact affair—no speeches, a few guests and new & old members together in a private dining room.

It can be compared with the lull before a storm, knowing its new chapter president Mas Shimatsu as well as we do. A rugged lineerman during his prep football days, he still exhibits that charge and drive of old. He was among the masterminds of the upcoming Uptown L.A. JACL, which is being carved out of the Southwest L.A. area.

Tomorrow night, we're invited to the East Los Angeles installation to witness the medical director of City View Hospital, Dr. Robert Ohi, sworn in as chapter president. The transition here is a natural for the outgoing president, Mable Yoshizaki, is a hospital office manager. This may be the chapter with the most number of M.D.'s on its roll this year. And don't forget the R.N.'s, Doctor.

Two weeks hence, the Downtown L.A. JACL is installing Father Clement of Maryknoll as its new chapter president. He has been its chaplain for several years. The office of chapter president has seen men and women from many walks of life and in the 30-year history of National JACL, at least 2,000 persons have served in this capacity—but hark a man of the cloth. Election of this veteran Catholic priest of some 25 years as chapter chairman may be a sign—a good sign—whereby clergymen and ministers in other areas may be called to this office in the near future.

Our Northern California friends may point out Haruo Ishimaru of San Mateo, in this connection, who was chapter president in 1960 and an ordained Protestant minister, though not in active service. Since leaving his ministerial duties over a decade ago, he has become a successful insurance salesman after a stint as regional JACL director in San Francisco.

If we could list the kinds of people who have served as chapter presidents, what a wonderful galaxy it would make. These are the stars that brighten the JACL sky—the men and women who have lifted the eyes and hearts of their fellow members.

1st Amendment Decisions

Washington, D.C.
THIS WEEK we shall comment on two recent decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States that have special meaning to all Americans concerned with civil rights in general and to Japanese-Americans in particular. Both cases involve the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

One is the announcement of January 7 that the nation's highest tribunal will review a libel judgment over statements carried in a newspaper advertisement that were critical of police handling of racial demonstrations. The other is the decision of January 14 that the Virginia statute prohibiting certain legal activity by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) is unconstitutional.

The JACL was an interested party to both cases.

AT ITS first decision day of the new year, the United States Supreme Court agreed to review a $500,000 libel judgment returned in an Alabama State Court against the "New York Times" newspaper. The judgment was the first in a series of cases growing out of advertisements involving race discrimination in the South.

In asking that the case be heard, the "Times" told the nine Justices that "the issues are momentous," since it "transforms the act of protesting private reputation to a device for inciting government against attack."

In this rare case, a half million dollars was awarded to J.B. Sullivan, Police Commissioner of Montgomery, Alabama. Four companion suits involving claims of $250,000 are also working their way through the courts.

Also pending against the "Times" is a series of libel suits based on stories written about Birmingham more than two years ago. The Columbia Broadcasting System faces several similar suits based on a program it carried about segregation in that same Alabama community.

The "Times" won review of its claim that freedom of the press was abridged when Sullivan collected damages because of statements critical of the operation of the Montgomery Police Department. He did not prove that the statements injured him and he was not named in the advertisement. The "Times" admitted that some of the statements in the advertisement, placed through an advertising agency by an organization called "The Committee to Defend Martin Luther King and the Struggle for Freedom in the South", were inaccurate.

The Supreme Court also agreed to review the "Times" claim that it could not be sued for libel in Alabama because it does not do business in that State. The Alabama Supreme Court held that the New York newspaper was subject to suit in that State because of its efforts to gather news and advertising there and because of its circulation (394) there.

The suits against the "Times" resulted from a feeling among some Alabama officials that the newspapers in the North were failing to present a fair picture of the racial situation in their State. The attorneys for Sullivan alleged that the advertisement libeled him "with violent, inflammatory and devastating language."

The Supreme Court accepted for review too a petition from four Negro libelers in Alabama who are co-defendants with the "Times" in the libel action. The Justices claim that judgment against them is wrong because they did not authorize the use of their names in the advertisement. They also allege that they were denied due process of law because the trial was conducted before an all-white jury in a segregated courtroom.

A WEEK after its decision to review the libel judgment of a newspaper advertisement criticizing police handling of racial segregation in Alabama, the Supreme Court ruled that the activities of the NAACP in aiding litigation in Virginia may not be barred by the State under its power to regulate the legal profession. The high Court reversed a decision of the Virginia Supreme Court that the NAACP had unlawfully solicited business and that thereby its attorney should be disbarred and prevented from practicing law.

The ruling also held that the 1956 Virginia law outlawing prohibited legal activity is unconstitutional as used to prohibit encouragement and support of racial litigation by the NAACP.

Five justices — Earl Warren, Hugo Black, William Douglas, William Brennan, and Arthur Goldberg — were in the majority. Three justices — John Harlan, Tom Clark, and Potter Stewart — dissented. Justice Byron White concurred in part and dissented in part.

Justice Brennan, for the majority, said the NAACP was following lawful objectives of obtaining equality of treatment for Negroes. "Groups which find themselves unable to achieve their objectives through their ballot turn to the courts," he said.

He found that the NAACP had shown that its activities fell within the First Amendment's protection and that the State had failed to show "substantive evils" from these activities to justify the broad prohibitions against the organization.

The majority opinion stated that the activities of the NAACP, its affiliates, and legal staff were "modes of expression and association protected by the First and Fourteenth Amendments." Justice Brennan found that the Virginia law enacted in 1956 during the State's "massive resistance" campaign against public school desegregation appeared to bar simple referral to or recommendation of a lawyer. He said the State law thus contains "grave danger of smothering all discussion looking to the eventual litigation on behalf of the rights of members of an unpopular minority."

In the context of Southern racial strife, the tribunal's majority said "A statute broadly curtailing group activity leading to litigation may easily become a weapon of oppression, however even-handed its terms appear. Its mere existence could well freeze out of existence all such activity on behalf of the civil rights of Negro citizens."

Justice Brennan said that there had been no showing of a serious danger of "professionally reprehensible conflicts of interest" that antislavery rules seek to prevent. He said that monetary stakes were not involved. "Resort to the courts to seek vindication of constitutional rights is a different matter from oppressive, malicious or avaricious use of the legal process to private gain."

He declared that the fact the NAACP case involved Negroes was irrelevant. He said that the First Amendment protection outlined in the ruling protected rights of expression and association without regard to race, creed, or political or religious affiliation. The Justice explained that under conditions existing today "litigation may well be the sole practicable avenue open to a minority to petition for redress of grievances."

The NAACP often urges individuals to bring law suits to define their rights, refers them to lawyers who are often on its staff, and then pays the cost of much of the litigation from the lowest to highest courts.

THE JACL interest in these two cases arises not only because JACL is concerned with the civil rights of all Americans and, at present, with the gallant continuing fight of Negro Americans for equality in treatment and opportunity, but also because of its own experiences in the past with similar practices.

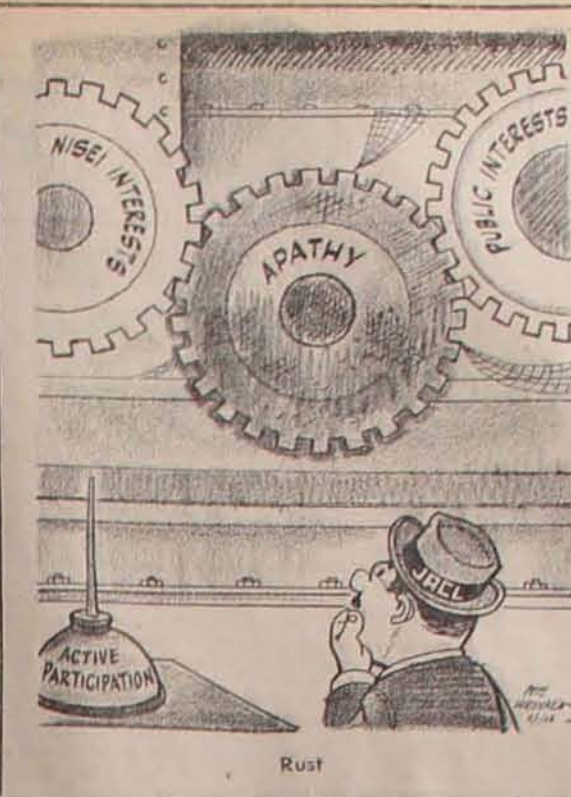

JACL recalls that during the campaign by the race haters and economic exploiters to create a demand for the arbitrary mass military evacuation of all persons of Japanese ancestry from the West Coast some 21 years ago, vicious advertisements impugning the loyalty of Americans of Japanese ancestry were used as one of the effective means to establish the public mood that was translated into "military necessity."

JACL also recalls the many court cases in which it was directly and indirectly involved to define the citizenship rights of Americans of Japanese ancestry, to have declared unconstitutional the evacuation and its attendant curbs on travel and the imposition of curfew, to nullify the anti-Japanese land laws and other prejudicial statutes, etc.

In a sense, the JACL sees mirrored in the present struggle of the Negroes for equality and dignity the identical battle that had to be carried on for Nisei Americans during and after World War II to achieve the degree of acceptance that is theirs today.

Press Comments:

Editorial—Jan. 16, 1963
St. Louis Globe-Democrat

In sarcastic vein, a reader writes in to complain that in the picture of "New Senators Take Oath," which appeared in The Globe-Democrat last week, "It appears the Senator from Hawaii doesn't know his right hand from his left."

As an "underprivileged" child in Hawaii, Dan Inouye might have grown up as an ignoramus had he chosen. He was a poor Japanese American family. He worked as a beachboy at Waikiki for 10 cents an hour. But, because both he and his family were ambitious, he was a good student.

Until the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, that is. As soon thereafter as possible, Dan enlisted in the United States forces—joining the all Nisei 442nd Infantry Regimental Combat team, which quickly became known as the "Go for Broke" boys.

In Italy, Dan Inouye won a battlefield commission at 19; was wounded four times; won the Purple Heart with clusters, the Bronze Star and the Distinguished Service Cross—this nation's second highest award for valor—for leading a charge against German machine gun nests "despite grave injuries."

Thus, taking his oath in the United States Senate, the Senator from Hawaii raised his left hand—because he had lost his right arm in Italy!

Had our anonymous complainer but known this, he undoubtedly would not have been sarcastic. But the Inouye story is worth retelling, anyway. The incident points out such a fine moral.

What the cynic doesn't know won't hurt him if he doesn't expose it.

(Sen. Inouye's office last week announced the ex-442nd RCT captain is entering the U.S. Army Reserve as a major in the Judge Advocate General's Office. He was turned down for his favorite branch of service—the Infantry—because of his disability.)

Vagaries

'Go For Broke!' for TV

LAST TIME we met Dore Schary, which was in New York last fall, he expressed gratification that his personal production, "Go For Broke!", the drama of the famed Regimental Combat Team, had been released, together with another Schary film, "Butterfly and the Sun", and that the pairing had enjoyed successful runs throughout the country, particularly in the drive-in theaters. Schary was the head of production at MGM at the time he made both pictures. Now he is in the midst of another career as a Broadway playwright ("Sunrise at Campobello"), and as a director and producer ("Unsinkable Molly Brown" and "A Majority of One"). He returns to film shortly as the producer of "Act One", the Moss Hart autobiographical which Joshua Logan will direct.

"Go for Broke!" has just been sold to television, and a reader in Cleveland writes to note that this film which focuses on Nisei combat heroism will give Japanese Americans "equal time" to answer the false charges of Nisei disloyalty contained in some of the World War II films which have been shown in recent years on TV.

"Go for Broke!" which starred Yasuhide and included such Nisei players as Lane Nakano and Tammy Kishimoto, was released ten years ago. It is included in a package of 10 MGM features which were sold recently to WNBC, New York, and WGN, Chicago. Sales are being negotiated to stations in Los Angeles, San Francisco and other areas.

Schary, a movie-maker with a conscience, once said that he made "Go for Broke!" because it was a good story for the movies and because Hollywood had an obligation to tell this story of Japanese Americans in combat.

'One Puka Puka'

THIS YEAR's big trend in television is to the war story. There are a number of stories of American at war among the popular series. One of the best is "Gallant Men," which consists of stories of GIs in World War II.

It was inevitable that TV would get around to the Nisei GI and a one-hour drama called "One Puka Puka" is currently being filmed. Since "One Puka Puka" means "100" the story is presumably that of the 100th Infantry Battalion from Hawaii, composed of Americans of Japanese ancestry, which was committed to action in North Africa and later in Belgium in the Italian campaign. Hawaii's newspapered congressman, Spark Matsunaga, was among those who served with the 100th.

Among those who have been cast in "One Puka Puka" are George Takei, who had an important role in Warner's "Ice Palace" and in

Widowed mother of two held for murder

REDWOOD CITY. —Takako Phillips, 32, a widowed mother of two children, was bound over to the superior court and held on a charge of first degree murder.

The preliminary hearing, compelling the prosecution to show evidence to hold Mrs. Phillips on this charge, was held in the Redwood City Municipal Court before Judge Roy W. Seagraves this past week. Represented by Attorney Peter M. Nakahara of San Jose, Mrs. Phillips entered a plea of not guilty.

The prosecution had two witnesses testify in the preliminary hearing. Deputy District Attorney Brian M. Howson first called on San Mateo Sheriff's Sgt. John Caswell who testified that he was called to the Phillips home in East Palo Alto on Jan. 3 and found the bleeding body of Joseph E. Talbert, 22. He then told the court that he asked her for the death weapon and that she went to a cabinet and handed him a Smith & Wesson .32 cal. revolver with six empty shells.

The second witness called by the prosecution was Deputy County Pathologist, Dr. John Roseander. He testified that Talbert was shot six times and that at the time of the autopsy Dr. Roseander had extracted two bullets.

Mrs. Phillips' attorney related that she was arraigned in the Redwood City Municipal Court on Jan. 7. The preliminary hearing, at which Mrs. Phillips pleaded not guilty, was held on Jan. 17. She is now being held at the San Mateo County Jail under her arraignment in the San Mateo County Superior Court.

Inevitable: Death and Taxes

Someone once quipped: "The two things certain in life are death and taxes. The only difference is that death doesn't get worse every time Congress meets."

And while none of us enjoy the prospect of considering the inevitability of death, yet each of us owes it to those we leave behind to make certain necessary plans, which includes your will. The following is not meant to be a technical or exhaustive course in the law of wills; rather, it merely seeks to outline some points for the readers' information.

What is a will?

A will is a writing, in form complying with local state law, which provides for disposition of the signer's property upon his death.

If I'm not rich, do I need one?

Yes. In a very real sense a will is more important to a man of moderate means than to a millionaire because the former must make every penny count and is less in a position to afford the additional expenses of dying without a will. A properly drawn will can provide the following advantages and savings: (a) save administration costs, (b) avoid having your estate escheat to the state under certain circumstances, (c) save time in administering your estate, (d) control the portions and the persons who will receive your estate, (e) provide appropriate trust provisions for minors, including grandchildren who may very well receive portions, (f) avoid potential needless confusion and questions. In addition to the foregoing, those with appreciable estates can make considerable savings in taxes by proper estate planning.

If all my property is in the joint names of myself and my wife, do I still need a will?

Yes, for a number of reasons including the following: (a) Often there are a number of small items which are not jointly owned such as salary due from an employer, a small savings account, etc. and these can cause just as much difficulty as large items; (b) if you and your wife die in a common accident, then property jointly held must be administered; (c) even if your wife survives you, she then becomes the sole owner of all property then jointly owned by the both of you and it becomes necessary for her to have a will.

Can I continue to use my money and property after making a will?

Yes. Since the will does not take effect until your death, you have complete freedom to do whatever you wish with all your property.

Can I change my will once it is made?

Yes, as often as you wish.

Must I "renew" my will?

No, your will remains good. However, it is advisable to review it periodically to make sure it is up to date.

Must I notify those named in the will?

No. Keep in mind that the will does not take effect until your death.

What if I have little or no property at my death?

There is no "penalty" or any obligation against your estate.

What about any debts that I might leave?

These are deducted first and paid from your estate. Only what is left is subject to distribution under your will.

What reasons are there for including in my will gifts to charitable organizations?

Several good reasons. First, Nisei may do well to remember those organizations and local institutions—your church (Buddhist or Christian), or the American Friends Service Committee, or the JACL, etc.—which have long and unselfishly served the Nisei, contributing much to what we have today. Secondly, most of these charitable organizations qualify—under Section 2055 of the Internal Revenue Code—as organizations, gifts to which will be exempt from federal estate taxes. Federal estate taxes may run as high as 77%. National JACL, for example, has long been ruled to be a charitable organization under federal tax laws and thus will qualify as such an organization referred to hereinabove.

Secondly, also under many state inheritance tax laws, no taxes are imposed upon gifts to such an organization.

Thirdly, by making gifts to such a worthwhile organization, your property continues to work for worthy causes even after your death.

How do I go about making such a charitable bequest?

As to JACL, simply name "Japanese American Citizens League Endowment Fund." As to any other charitable organization you may have in mind, check with your lawyer.

Can I simply make my own will?

You can, but should you? Experience has invariably shown that "home made" wills lead only to confusion, necessity of court interpretation and often bitter and costly disputes. It is much more economical to leave the writing of your will to an expert, your lawyer.

Well, how much would it cost?

Surprisingly little. Consult your lawyer; he'll be glad to quote a fee without your incurring any obligation.

Taniyama has been one of the mentors for the Valiant teams in basketball and baseball. His devotion to youth in sports stems from his own youth prewar when he participated in the So. Calif. Japanese Athletic Union, then directed by Mas Salow. Presentation of a framed copy of the Japanese American Creed was made by George Isoda.

The Idaho SJR-1 Committee, as its final gesture before dissolving, presented a $3,000 check to Mas Salow as partial refund of the $5,000 aid received from National. The balance of $633.54 was turned over to the IDC treasury.

Salow gave the National report, revealing that a filming of a color movie is being considered as a public relations project in connection with the 20th anniversary of the activation of the 442nd RCT this year.

Bill Yamauchi of Pocatello was appointed PC representative. Kiyoshi Sakata, of Rt. 2 Box 12A, Rexburg, Idaho, is chairman of the Intermountain Chapter of the Bilingual committee. Chapter reports will serve as a basis for this honor.

The National JACL scholarship candidates are to be nominated by May. Salow added. The widow of the late Col. Walter Tsukamoto has indicated another scholarship comparable to the Masaoka scholarship will be offered from this year.

Youth delegates, in their session, discussed the area of program, in accordance to the scheme of the National Jr. JACL organizing committee. Further discussion at the Jr. JACL chapter level will continue and a workshop at the Mar. 31 meeting will attempt to summarize the conversations.
