"CITIZENS' KEY WORD IN NAME OF 'JACL', SAYS SEN. RATIGAN
SPECIAL TO THE PACIFIC CITIZEN

SANTA ROSA. - The use of the "Citizens for America" League (JACL) in the name of the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL) is a misnomer that "certainly needs to be corrected," Sen. Daniel Inouye has said.

In an editorial article appearing in the May issue of the "The Record," Inouye, a former JACL member, wrote that "the use of the name Citizens for America League is misleading and inappropriate." He suggested that the organization should change its name to more accurately reflect its purpose and mission.

"The JACL was founded in 1907 to promote the interests of Japanese Americans in the United States," Inouye wrote. "Its original name was the "Japanese-American Citizens League," which was changed to the "Japanese-American Citizens League of America" in 1910. The organization has since become known as the "Japanese-American Citizens League of America," or "JACL," as it is more commonly known.

Inouye noted that the JACL has been a leader in advocating for the rights of Japanese Americans and has played a significant role in promoting the interests of the community. He said that the organization has "served its members well over the years and continues to do so today."
Are We Different?

The following article is printed in the Pacific Citizen, a Japanese-language newspaper in Los Angeles. It discusses the differences between the US and Japan, focusing on how the two countries perceive the other. The article argues that Americans often see Japan as a monolithic entity, while Japanese tend to see the US as diverse. It suggests that understanding these differences is key to building effective relationships between the two countries.

In Japan, the Pacific Citizen is a widely read newspaper that is known for its coverage of Japanese-American affairs. The article in question was published in 1942, a time of significant tensions between the US and Japan due to the lead-up to World War II. The article raises important questions about how cultural differences can impact international relations, a topic that remains relevant today.

The article ends with a call for understanding and cooperation between the two countries, suggesting that by recognizing these differences and working to bridge them, the US and Japan can build a stronger, more collaborative relationship.

PC LETTERBOX:

After the 'Old Guard'

Dear Editor,

Will there be another generation of JACL when the Old Guard fades? In the future, will the JACL remain as we know it today? It seems likely that young people are interested in the JACL, but they are not necessarily motivated to join or attend its events because they may feel that the JACL is too old or too rigid. It's possible that the JACL has established a culture of exclusivity that is not attractive to younger members.

Just a Thought

Setting out looking for a chapter in Japan, I decided to visit the JACL headquarters in Tokyo. The JACL is a small organization with a limited budget, but it is quite active in its local chapters. I attended a meeting of the JACL in Tokyo, and it was quite lively. The members were active and enthusiastic. However, there were only a dozen people in attendance, and many of them were elderly. It seems that the JACL is struggling to appeal to younger members.

San Diego

The push for clubs by the national office has had some effect on local JACL chapters. The national office starts pushing for a club and the next thing you know, our chapter is having a meeting to discuss the possibility of starting a club. The individual who has been most enthusiastic in the matter is the president of the chapter, Mrs. N. N. Nakashima. She has been very active in the national office's efforts to start a club.

The national office has been putting a lot of pressure on chapters to start a club. The idea is that a club will help to promote the interests of the chapter. The national office has been saying that a club is necessary to promote the interests of the chapter.
