Washington Newsletter: Outlook for Johnson's Great Society

By AKI SANO

Recently President Johnson held his first meeting with Congressional leaders since the Election in order to discuss the legislative outlook for the First Session of the 89th Congress. Among those meeting with the Chief Executive were House Speaker John W. McCormack of Massachusetts and House Majority Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma.

At this meeting it was decided that when Congress meets on Jan. 4, work should begin immediately on the Medicare and the Aid to Appalachia bills. Both bills were considered in the past Congress. The Medicare provision, after having passed the Senate, was defeated almost singlehandedly in conference committee by Democrats and Missions committee chairman Wilbur Mills, Arkansas Democrat. The Federal aid to Appalachia bill, after having been favorably reported by House Public Works Committee, was never reported out from the conservative Rules Committee.

The President and Congressional leaders also agreed that other bills which were considered in the past Congress and which should not be revived are the Social Security bill increasing monthly retirement cash benefits, an immigration bill to abolish or liberalize quotas, a bill authorizing Federal assistance to control water pollution, legislation to increase minimum wages, and legislation providing Federal funds and technical job re-training programs in so-called depressed areas with alarmingly high unemployment rates.

Not considered in the past Congress and high on the Administration's legislative program next year is the proposal eliminating the recent excise tax on so-called luxury items such as furs, handbags, luggage, toiletries, and jewelry. This proposal, using the same formula as the recently enacted Tax Cut Bill, is designed to stimulate the economy by putting more money in the hands of consumers.

If this excise tax cut proposal is successful, it is thought that a proposal for tax reductions may next be introduced for manufacturers currently paying excise taxes on business machines, appliances, autos, and miscellaneous items such as telephone, air travel, and so on.

Except for the excise tax proposal, the proposals recently discussed at the White House are "warmed over" measures considered in previous Congresses. Most of them are Kennedy proposals. Even the excise tax cut legislation, although seemingly new, follows the Tax Cut Bill as conceived and introduced by the late President Kennedy.

One side of President Johnson's ability as a President definitely became known, when, after President Kennedy's death, he managed to push through the apparently stale-mated Civil Rights Act, the Tax Cut, the wheat and cotton bill, the mass transportation bill, the wilderness bill, etc.

TEST FOOT: JOHNSON

However, another facet of Johnson's ability, or lack of it, will be revealed soon when he outlines in his State of the Union Message the guidelines for his "Great Society." Kennedy displayed imagination for devising legislation which would be the means to explore the "New Frontier." Johnson must now meet his test with legislative proposals for the "Great Society."

Many "great" Presidents are associated with a particular program or idea which was exceptionally new or creative. Teddy Roosevelt was known for his legislation to break up the powerful monopolistic business combines. Franklin Roosevelt was identified with Federal leadership in providing jobs and economic controls in those Depression years. President Johnson has set his sights on the "Great Society," this envisioned by Johnson as the major historic achievement of his Administration.

Johnson embarked on this formidable task several months ago ordering numerous task forces to report on major problems confronting America. It is thought that most of the legislative proposals which may be derived from the task forces studies will be further expansions of many existing programs. Legislative proposals may attempt to deal with problems that have been talked about for years, such as improvement of public education, air and water pollution, elimination of city slums, and preservation of natural beauty. With the politically sympathetic Congress Johnson now faces and his famed genius for getting people with diverse interests to cooperate, we may well see many of these problems tackled effectively for the first time.

The AACL has a role in attempting to achieve this Great Society. It must continue to push for legislation in immigration and civil rights. President Johnson says he wants to be the President of all Americans. Indeed, without the participation of all Americans, regardless of race, color, or creed, the "Great Society" is meaningless.
