NISE APPEARS AT SEATTLE DEATH INQUEST DELIVING IN POLICE SHOOTING OF NEGRO

By ELMER OGAWA
Special to the Pacific Citizen
SEATTLE—Two weeks after the slaying of a Negro man, a Japanese American appeared at a hearing held by the Seattle Police Department to determine the cause of the death of the victim.
The hearing was held at the Seattle Police Department on July 6. It was the first time since the slaying of the Negro man that a Japanese American had appeared at a hearing of this kind.
The victim was a Negro man named James Earl Ray, who was shot and killed by a Seattle Police Officer on June 6. The shooting took place in the early morning hours of the day.
The hearing was held to determine the cause of the death of the victim. It was presided over by a judge. The Japanese American who appeared was a member of the Japanese American Citizens League (JACL).
The JACL representative stated that the Japanese American community in Seattle was deeply concerned about the slaying of the Negro man. He stated that the community was shocked and saddened by the news of the slaying.
The JACL representative also stated that the community was proud of the Japanese American who appeared at the hearing. He stated that the Japanese American community was proud of the fact that the Japanese American was able to stand up for his principles and speak out against the slaying of the Negro man.

The hearing lasted for several hours. The Japanese American who appeared was given the opportunity to speak. He spoke for about 10 minutes. He stated that he was a member of the JACL and that he was proud of the Japanese American community. He also stated that he was shocked and saddened by the slaying of the Negro man.
The hearing ended with the judge reading the verdict. The verdict was that the police officer who shot and killed the Negro man was not guilty of the crime. The judge stated that the police officer was acting in self-defense.

With its administration, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, given no real enforcement powers. Nevertheless, Title VII represents a significant and meaningful milestone in the history of mankind's advance toward dignity and equality.

In 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the father of the first chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, established by executive order, the new famous Fair Employment Practices Commission. Though it was acted when Negroes, led by Philip Randolph, threatened to march on Washington to protest discrimination in defense jobs, the FEPC provided the initial breakthrough for Negroes in defense and military jobs and professions which had previously been closed to them.

Late in 1941, with the shadow of war looming the FEPC, established before the FEPC in Los Angeles and helped to fill down the FEPC in employment and the professions among those of Japanese ancestry. Even though the FEPC was followed, the FEPC was among the agencies that worked to provide jobs for which many Nisei had trained but which, until that time, were denied them solely because of their race and ancestry.

The wartime FEPC died in 1946. Since then, a number of Federal agencies have operated to eliminate racial discrimination in employment involving government contracts.

John Yoshino is the deputy field director for the current President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. The Commission established by President Eisenhower more than a decade ago with Vice President Nixon as its nominal field.

Yoshino was in New York last week attending the 17th annual Conference of Commissioners for Human Rights. Among keynote speakers were, Edward Heine of San Francisco, California FEPC executive director, and Louis J. Lefebvre, New Jersey state FEPC general. Yoshino was resource person.
