Obata Brush Painting Presented

LOS ANGELES — "Glorious Struggle", a sumi painting by Dr. Chiura Obata which depicts a giant Sequoia in a storm, has been given to UCLA by the Japanese American Citizen League. It is on silk, measuring 36 by 22 inches, and is encased in an antique gold frame.

It was originally given by the artist to the Cultural Heritage Committee of the Northern California - Western Nevada JACL District, last Aug. 1 at a convention held in Alameda.

Frank Chuman, past national JACL president, presented the painting to Chan-

Appointment of DC civil rights charmen asked

OMAHA—JACL district council chairmen have been reminded to submit names of their respective chairmen of DC civil rights committee immediately, according to K. Patrick Okura, national JACL civil rights committee co-chairman with Rep. Spark Matsunaga of Washington.

JACL has recognized that meaningful implementation of civil rights for all Americans is one of the most pressing domestic problems and JACL as an organization has a significant and important role to play.

While JACL will carry out its traditionally active role at the national level, the program to be meaningful requires the support of district councils and chapters, Matsunaga and Okura pointed out. "We accepted the task of co-chairmanship with the full knowledge that participation on a district and chapter level is the only way to resolve these problems of human relations in our country today," the co-chairmen stated.

The name and address of the district civil rights committee chairman should be forwarded to National JACL Headquarters, 1634 Post St., San Francisco, Calif.

An information-education program is to be launched this spring and is expected to be an on-going program by national convention time this summer.

LOS ANGELES—Ichiro Kenny Kuroda, methods and standards technician with the L.A. City Recreation and Parks Dept., was commended for his 25-year service in civil service recently.

PC Cut-Off Moved to Feb. 28

With the Pacific Citizen "cut-off" date advanced to Feb. 28, it is incumbent upon 1965 JACL members to renew by that date in order to insure continuous subscription.

Chapter membership committeemen should make every effort in the coming week to have all renewals submitted to National Headquarters. Members who have joined a JACL credit union or a group health plan must renew also.

The Pacific Citizen will begin to transfer from "active" to "hold" those address plates of subscribers who have already received one full year subscription by March 18. This "grace" period is being provided to allow for last-minute renewals and processing.

After the plates are pulled from the active file, a list will be prepared from them and sent to the chapters for appropriate action. This list means the people have been "cut off". Similar "cut off" lists will be issued monthly thereafter as the 1965 subscription orders elapse.

OMAHA, Neb.—Honoring of the Nisei of the Biennium will again be one of the highlights of the national JACL Convention meeting July 26-30 at San Diego, Calif. K. Patrick Okura, national chairman of the JACL recognitions committee, announced today.

The recognition is bestowed upon the Japanese American whose distinguished community leadership has "helped to advance the welfare of persons of Japanese ancestry and which has brought about the acceptance of our people into the American way of life" or whose distinguished achievements in a specific field where such accomplishments are nationally recognized has "contributed to the status and prestige of Nisei in America".

The National JACL Recognition Committee will accept nominations for this coveted award from its district councils, chapters and individual members.

Nominations are due June 1, 1966, in order to give the selection committee an opportunity to review all candidates. A special panel of judges will select the Nisei of the Biennium to be announced at the 19th Biennial JACL convention.

Past winners of this distinguished award are:

1964—Henry Kasai, Salt Lake City (deceased).

1963—Minoru Yamasaki, Detroit.
1960—Sen. Daniel Inouye, Washington, D.C.
1958—William Hosokawa, Denver.
1956—George J. Inagaki, Los Angeles.
1954—Hiroshi Miyamura, Gallup, N.M.
1952—Minoru Yasui, Denver.

1950—Mike Masaoka, Washington, D.C.
The committee reminded that all past winners are eligible for nomination but they will be judged only on their accomplishments since receiving their previous awards.

The committee will select a slate of from three to five finalists and a special panel of judges will select the Nisei of the Biennium.

Nominations may be made for either the "distinguished community leadership" or "distinguished achievement" category.

Chapters are cautioned against premature release of any publicity in behalf of their candidate to spare any possibility of embarrassment. All announcements of nominees shall be made by the Recognition Committee. Nomination forms are available from the committee chairman, Pat Okura, 2604 Garden Rd., Omaha, Neb. 68124.
All inquiries should be addressed to him.

Ford Foundation grants $600,000 for foreign language high school classes

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
SEATTLE—The Ford Foundation has granted $600,000 to the Univ. of Washington for a five-year statewide program to improve and coordinate foreign-language teaching in high schools.

To be conducted in cooperation with state education officials and local school authorities, the program will embrace three major activities: teacher development, introduction or expansion on a pilot basis of high school courses in several critical languages including Japanese, Chinese, Russian, Norwegian and Swedish, and improved coordination of language teaching in high schools and colleges.

The program, second of its kind, in part is modeled after one initiated with Foundation support by Indiana University in 1962.

Seton Hall, East Orange, N.J., is also offering this year an NDEA Institute of History for secondary school teachers who are teaching Asian history at present, and an NDEA part-time academic year Institute of Chinese and Japanese for secondary school teachers who are or will be teaching either Chinese or Japanese. Full particulars are obtainable from Tadashi Kuoka, Seton Hall University.

Judge Dozier, a former army linguist, spoke in both English and Japanese in accepting the award.

In his talk, Dr. Jacoby also noted the efforts made to teach Japanese dancing and other arts to the younger generation.

He posed a question of whether this was really a proper method of passing on a cultural heritage or whether it was "merely creating a stereotype of Japan and things Japanese."

Japan is also under going tremendous changes, said the UOP dean who taught for a while at Yamaguchi University after the war and has led three tours since then to Japan.

What many Nisei and most Issei consider as Japan is not the Japan of today, he also pointed out, but Japan of some 50 years ago.

Personal Responsibilities stressed as basis of Human Relations

BEVERLY HILLS—Upon the invitation of the Los Angeles County Commission on Human Relations and the Beverly Hills B'nai B'rith Lodge, representatives of three minority groups called for closer working relationships during a panel discussion on "Understanding in Our Day".

The panelists were Los Angeles City Councilman Tom Bradley, Professor Manuel Guerra of USC, and Dr. Roy Nishikawa, past national JACL president. Moderating the Feb. 14 meeting at Emanuel Temple was John P. Lyons, assistant executive director for the LACCHR.

The discussion dealt with the concerns and problems of the major minority groups in the Los Angeles area (Negro, Spanish-speaking, and Japanese Americans) and what progress has been made toward mutual understanding.

Bradley hinted that the Japanese and Mexican Americans "were not pulling their weight" in the civil rights movement. However, after the evening discussion was completed, a new understanding in interracial relationships was reached.

Dr. Guerra asked the Jewish community for help in solving some of the problems facing the Mexican American. Dr. Nishikawa cited the Nisei role in civil rights locally.

Text of Opening Remarks

Representing a Nisei point of view at the Beverly Hills B'nai B'rith Lodge panel on "Understanding in Our Day", the following is the text of the opening message by Dr. Roy Nishikawa, past national JACL president:

Los Angeles

The topic for this evening's panel is "Understanding in Our Day." I wish to plead for greater understanding between minority groups.

Japanese Americans, like the Negroes, Mexican Americans and the Jews have experienced varying degrees of poverty, discrimination and the bitter taste of prejudice.

Before World War II, many of our parents lived in standard homes, held menial jobs and in many cases saw their college educated children end up as fruit stand workers, farm laborers and clerks.

After the attack on Pearl Harbor by the Japanese enemy, our own U.S. government forcibly evacuated — without trial or hearing — all persons of Japanese ancestry from the Pacific Coast and placed them in inland concentration camps. The climate of the times was such that one prominent columnist's published suggestion regarding the Japanese Americans was to "ship them to some isolated island—and then blow up the island!"

Because he has been the target of hatred and misunderstanding and because he has been discriminated against, the Japanese American can understand and sympathize with the problems faced by other minority Americans. Because he too has been denied justice and fair play—he understands the need for justice and fair play for all Americans.

A few Negroes have criticized the Japanese American by saying that he does not support civil rights while enjoying the progress brought about by the civil rights movement. Similar charges have been leveled at the Mexican American. Since 1929 the JACL has been teaching good citizenship to its members. During the War and Postwar years, the JACL has not only been seeking to redress the wrongs inflicted upon its members but has been part of a wider movement to bring about justice and fair play for all Americans. The JACL participated in the March on Washington. Its Washington office spent a major part of its time and efforts on the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Our Legal Counsel spent his entire vacation in Bogalusa offering his legal services to those who needed them. And in California, some 60 chapters of the JACL made a concerted effort against the passage of Proposition 13. Locally we are members of the Community Relations Conference and some of our leaders have met with Negro leaders in order to promote better communication and understanding between the Japanese and the Negro.

And so I find it disturbing when a Negro newspaper carries an article in which Negro ministers allege that the Japanese are exploiting the Negroes in the Southwest L.A. area and saying "that the Japs should get out of our community." A few weeks ago I saw a TV program in which a Jewish Rabbi was defending his people against the charge that Jewish merchants were exploiting the colored people in Watts. At the same time I am equally disturbed when I hear a white Anglo Saxon Protestant or Mexican American state that Negroes are shiftless, lazy or prone to commit crimes.

Minority groups, I feel, should help each other rather than engage in indiscriminate charges which foster misunderstanding and which gives comfort to the bigot.

One of the foolish and tragic tendencies of the day is to blame an entire people for the shortcomings of the few. One of the greatest stumbling blocks to understanding is the widespread tendency to think in terms of stereotypes. Unfortunately, in today's society, there are too many of us who think emotionally, who fail to listen, to learn, to consider all of the facts, who stick stubbornly to preconceived opinions. Calmness and reason are too often sacrificed to fear, to hatred, to ignorance and to expediency.

All of us realize that massive problems in education, in housing, in jobs, and in communication and understanding are involved in solving our racial problems. In all of these areas great efforts will have to be made by the ap-

RIGHTS GROUPS PROTEST USE OF SCHOOL BY ELKS

Matter Referred to Washington Board Against Discrimination

RICHLAND, Wash. — Richland Elks Lodge members will be picketed when they hold their charter initiation ceremonies Feb. 26 in rented school facilities, according to officials of the Tri-Cities Chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Both CORE and the Richland Human Rights Commission oppose renting public facilities to the Elks. They contend the Elks discriminate against non-whites.

The Richland School Board last week refused to withdraw its permission for the Elks to use the school facilities but it did decide to review its policies to see if a nondiscrimination pledge should be included in any future rental arrangement.

Civil rights officials said the matter had been referred to the State Board Against Discrimination.

Eugene Murphy, chairman of the Richland Civil Rights Commission, said the Elks have not replied to a December request to renounce discrimination.

Donald C. Mace, Richland, who will be grand exalted ruler of the new lodge, said local Elks lodges have to abide by a statute in the national by-laws which limits lodges to white members only. He said the best place for the local civil rights groups to get action on the issue is at the National Elks convention next July in Dallas, Tex. "If the School Board does not take affirmative action to prevent this misuse of public facilities, the commission will refer the matter also to the appropriate federal agency to determine if federal laws or regulations are being violated by the use of tax-supported facilities for a meeting from which some citizens will be excluded by reason of race," Murphy said.

Really body eases anti-Negro policy

LOS ANGELES—The Southwest branch of the Los Angeles Realty Board—target of a secret Justice Dept. investigation into racial discrimination—Tuesday voted 50-13 to make membership easier for Negro realtors.

Members of the all-white branch voted to liberalize its present by-laws so that it would require a simple majority to block membership rather than the present 20 pct. "nay".

Earl S. Anderson, president of the L.A. board, said with about 2,200 realtors as members, about 50 Negroes and other minorities are included.

While department officials have refused to comment on the investigation, it was learned that the department was taking a unique approach to solving housing discrimination through federal anti-trust laws.

Lafayette chapter quilts Sigma Chi

EASTON, Pa.—Sigma Chi's Lafayette College chapter withdrew Feb. 15 from the national fraternity after it sought unsuccessfully for 13 months to gain approval to induct a Hawaii student.

The chapter had pledged Chris Song Whun Choi in January, 1965, and last month Lafayette's board of trustees ordered the chapter to induct him or withdraw from the national group.

Dayton JACLers organize clown group to entertain hospitalized children

DAYTON—One of the most unique in-groups in any Nisei organization has been formed by the Dayton JACL. Known as the Shindler Clowns, members dress up as clowns and visit hospitals to entertain children.

The group is named in honor of Jim Schneider, who initiated the club by asking one of the Dayton JACLers to join him in the project. Schneider later developed muscular dystrophy and was unable to carry on the work. Other JACLers here picked up the work and last Nov. 28, with general approval of the membership, formally organized the Shindlers.

Dean Knutson, who worked closely with Fred Fisk, did the research for organizing the club. Other clown members include Dale Green, Jack Huntsburger, Ray Jenkins, Frank Tytus and Mas Yamasaki. Fisk is chairman.

Each letter in the name also means something. S for Schneider, H for Honor Society of JACL, I for Interest in Serving, N for Nerve, D for Devotion to Our Cause, L for Lightheartedness, E for Enthusiasm in Our Serving, and R for Rejuvenation of Those We Serve.

Ye Editor's Desk

NEW QUARTERS

This past weekend the JACL Regional Office and the Pacific Citizen, which shared office space in Room 302, of the Sun Bldg., 125 Weller St., made its move down the hall and now occupy adjoining rooms 303 and 307, respectively. Those acquainted with the premises will find the JACL-PC sign on the door facing the third-floor elevator stop.

To facilitate office procedures, a doorway was made between the two rooms by knocking a passageway through the wall. The rooms have been repainted, the floors cleaned and waxed. The L-shaped room 303 is partitioned so that the regional director and national youth director have private offices. Eventually, a library will be organized also in Rm. 305 to accommodate the many who come by for resource information on Japanese in America.

The PC business and editorial office in Room 307 shall be able to function without the type of distraction that was evident in the cramped quarters of old Room 302. About half of Room 307 is reserved for JACL-PC office files and joint work area housing office duplicating machines and paper stock.

The office files are also being standardized. The youth and Pacific Southwest District Council files are in Room 305 for ready access by the regional office and youth program secretaries. The remaining 11 filing cabinets for joint JACL-PC use are in Room 307. Telephone number for JACL (MA 6-4471) is unchanged.

The Pacific Citizen picks up MA 6-1065 for its own. The first day, the PC only had one ring all day (not many know this number and new phone books are not due until June) which provided the kind of quiet needed to process the many PC renewals coming in at this time of the year. Having to serve as acting regional director, our desk has two telephones for both numbers.

'LIVING WITH JACL'

An uncompleted series, "Living with JACL", authored by wartime JACL national president Saburo Kido, started in 1961 for PC readers has come in for unexpected attention when a request came last week for back copies. The order could not be filled. The series was suspended in early 1962 while Kido was reporting on the emergency 1942 meeting. Perhaps, we can persuade him to renew his memoirs—now that he has given up newspaper publishing.

The articles covering the first decade of JACL history will serve as a senior term paper in history, analyzing JACL as an organization, for a Samsel co-ed at Immaculate Heart College in Hollywood.

This is one term paper we would like to consider for publication as a PC Holiday special article.

Letters from Our Readers

Nisei Personality

Editor:

One of the Japanese customs which used to strike Nisei as peculiar was this constant self-debasing of one's person or his doings. A visiting Issei lady would give us a box of delicious candy by saying, "It's not very tasty, but please accept this." A proud Issei father would introduce his son to another by saying, "He's not very bright, but he's doing all right in college." The truth, frequently, is that he's an honor student.

Recently, American sociologists have made few statements expounding the virtues of the Nisei. This is apparently just too much for some. What do you mean? they ask; and go about systematically trying their best to break down the arguments that we deserve any such compliments.

It seems that it is about time that we accept graciously the complements we earned, realize that these statements were not made just for our ears, that their conclusions came from the analysis and studies of many minority groups in the U.S. Then, our efforts should be turned toward preserving and perpetuating those traits and beliefs which were largely responsible for our successes.

Bouquet for 'Mampitsu'

Editor:

Having been JACL members for a number of years, we have always enjoyed reading the Pacific Citizen; however, your paper has been read with even greater interest since our arrival here in Germany. Spending an year abroad is a marvelous experience, one filled with wonderful memories of places visited, new found friends, all making our life more enriching. However, we must admit "hometown" news is always good to read and hear about, and we feel we are not completely out of contact with the U.S. and especially the Japanese community as my mother has been forwarding the papers to us monthly. I'm sure you can understand our increased appreciation of such a paper like the Pacific Citizen.

May we also add that we have been reading with interest the column entitled "Mampitsu" written by Ken Kuroiwa who is now living in Germany and attending school in Goettingen. Mr. Kuroiwai writes very descriptively as we can well picture his past experiences. To us, his column has been followed with extra enthusiasm as Mr. Kuroiwa lives about a 2 1/2 hour drive from where we are now living and we have visited many of the same places he has visited, though not quite as adventurously as he and his friends have done. We feel the PC readers are getting a wonderful "reading tour" of Europe via the PC and hope everyone enjoys his column as much as we have.

appropriate civic, state and federal agencies.

But we as individual citizens must also play a positive role. It seems to me that as private citizens we can play our most meaningful role in the field of communications and understanding. In my profession, I have had thousands of contacts with people of just about every race, color and creed. My philosophy has been to treat each person as an individual deserving of not only my best efforts but deserving also of every courtesy and respect as a fellow human being.

This is a simple yet practical philosophy which all of us can practice.

The McCone Commission reported that one of the underlying causes of the Watts riots was a resentment—even a hatred—of the police as a symbol of authority. I submit that if every policeman and every private citizen would reciprocally practice the common rules of courtesy and respect, then much of the suspicion, resentment and hatred would be replaced by better communication and understanding. I believe that the L.A. Police Dept. is now taking steps along these lines. But more importantly, I believe it is up to the private citizen to put these rules into practice. In this way, each of

Kid Brother Herb Returns

The past weekend has been one of reunions, nostalgia and talking over old times. Principal, inspirations came from the visit of the kid brother Herb (four years our junior) from Dallas, Texas, to Seattle after an absence of 17 years. What brought the return of the prodigal to Seattle was the passing of our mother last week.

Center of reunion activities was within the ranks of the Baptist Hi-Stars. Most of the old line-up is still here around Seattle: George (Porgie) Okada, Mac Kaneko, Bill (Biff) Ihashi, Taft Beppu, Kelly Yamada, Joe Yoritaka. The squad also included Jun Okazaki, now of Washington, D.C., and "Tinky" Yamasaki of Dearborn, Mich.

The Hi-Stars team which originated at the Japanese Baptist Church here, made quite a record for itself, being made up principally of high school lettermen and got better as the years went by, finally making road trips up and down the Coast.

Kid Brother at Center

Tallest member of the team at nearly 5 ft. 11 was Herb, the center. Some of his other activities which added to his popularity then as now were: letterman at Franklin High in basketball; editor of Tolo, the Franklin weekly; sports writer for Jimmie Sakamoto's J-A Courier; English page editor of the local vernacular daily and letterman of the U. of W. rifle team.

For anyone under the age at which it used to be said that life begins, it may be a little hard to picture how the bonds of friendship among the "integrated" Nisei athletes of those days can be so solid. There were high school baseball players that date back some 15 years before MY time and would hesitate to try to remember a few and forget others. During the '20s, lightweight Nisei players started to show up on the high school football scene, after Jimmie Sakamoto's one game miracle debut in 1919.

But here we cannot fail to mention the big time granddaddy of them all, the late Ben Ohnick (Onuki), who was a starting end on Gil Dobie's unbeatable UW teams about 1912-13.

During the late '20s it became a subject for sport page comment on the Courier when two Nisei players (later to become Hi-Stars) opposed each other for the first time as representatives of their respective high schools.

Relative to the nostalgia of the time, the Courier told a story of an incident which must have occurred in the early '20s because of the one name that was mentioned.

A Nisei player was declared offside in a high school game.

us can make a positive, personal contribution to greater understanding. Governmental agencies, with all of their great powers, must do their part.

But I believe that human relations remains essentially a personal thing, with personal responsibilities.

Someone asked, "Who?" Said the referee: "That 'Jap' over there." Up jumped Franklin High end Johnny Cole to render what was called the greatest lecture ever given (without penalty?) to a referee by a player in the history of football. Johnny went on to be end at UW and played on either or both of the Husky teams that opposed Navy and Alabama in the Rose Bowl in the middle of that decade.

Rifle Team

Perhaps a little space left to get around to riflery. There were three lettermen on the Husky teams of that era which were either national champions in the intercollegiate and the Hearst trophy ROTC competition, or just knocking on the door. They were Tom Aral, '26 and '27; your reporter '27 and '28; and Herb a couple of years later.

Here is a sport in which personality and related talents are reduced to the absolute minimum. All that count is what is on the statistical scoreboard. It was an appropriate sport because all the team members had to do was to report to the rifle range once a week find out what teams we were firing against that week—the matches were telegraphic, so the Huskies could take on four or five any given week—record the score for that week, and that was it, the record being made on the rifleman's own time without other team members being present (except in "shoulder to shoulder" matches). From that time on, the team member was on his own free time to work at whatever job he was on to get through school.

But we started out to talk about basketball and Herb Ogawa's contribution in the local community. First day he was in town, I decided we should get our dinner in Chinatown. Chief reason we both liked some cookery not obtainable in Dallas, and second reason there was a little shanty of a Chinese American working there who had previously reminded me that he knew Herb Ogawa from the old days as a basketball player.

This same Paul Woo was a principal witness in a Chinatown fatal shooting involving an off-duty policeman last summer, but the two when re-introduced seemed not too familiar but soon the facts came out. To my surprise, said Paul: "Oh, no I was not a player on your opposing Chinese team—I was only a spectator."

Great Debate: Vietnam

Washington Now that the two-weeks plus so-called Great Debate over American policy in Vietnam seems to have come to at least a temporary halt before the Foreign Relations Committee, it appears to have spilled over onto the Senate floor, with the so-called hawks and doves in angry confrontation over a $4.8 billion Vietnam military authorization bill.

As of this writing, it looks as if the Senate and subsequently the House will approve the authorization by overwhelming majorities, but that the historic debate will continue.

The nationally televised, internationally reported Senate Foreign Relations Committee's public hearings were probably more closely followed than any similar discussions in recent times both at home and in world capitals.

Although it is questionable that the lengthy hearings changed many minds in the Administration and in the Senate, it is yet too early to learn whether public opinion at the grass roots level in the country has altered its collective mind in support of the President's position in the difficult, "damned - if - you - do, damned - if - you - don't" Southeast Asia situation.

Tennessee's Albert Gore thought that the primary purpose of the hearings was to "go over the head of the President" to the people, in the hope that the people would then be able to reach the Chief Executive with their reactions to what is going on and is planned, in Vietnam.

Although we may be completely wrong in so oversimplifying the testimony of the four major witnesses—for the "prosecution", General James Gavin and former head of the State Department's Policy Planning Board, one of the authors of the so-called "containment" policy against Soviet Communism, and former Ambassador George Kennan, and for the "defense", General Maxwell Taylor, former Army Chief of Staff, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and former Ambassador to Saigon, and Secretary of State Dean Rusk—there seemed more general agreement about what the United States should do than might have been anticipated from advocates of the anti-Administration and of the pro-Administration attitudes.

While questioning the wisdom of our deep involvement in Southeast Asia, it seemed that the doves and the hawks were in general agreement that we cannot—and must not—withdraw and that we must continue to fight until a settlement can be reached at some peace conference, whether at the United Nations, in Geneva, or some other locale.

It also seemed that there was general agreement that there should not be any escalation of the war to the extent that Red China, or even Soviet Russia, might actively enter into the conflict. At the same time, however, Administration "spokesmen" thought that the chances for the Communist Chinese entering the war were considerably less than those who questioned what appeared to them to be Administration objectives.

In any event, none of the witnesses suggested that the United States completely withdraw our armed forces, or that there be indiscriminate aerial bombing of such North Vietnam targets as the Hanoi-Haiphong complex. Moreover, there was general agreement that no new principles, ideas, or alternatives were presented by any of the witnesses, or the cross-examining Senators. There were restatements of previously expressed opinions, questions, challenges, and charges, perhaps more incisively, more meaningfully, and more understandably than before, however.

General Gavin, who brought the so-called enclave controversy into the open by writing a letter to a magazine, told the Senate committee that he believed that the United States should not escalate the Vietnam war because of its effect on the nation's ability to meet other more important world commitments and because of the possibility of provoking Red China intervention. In his opinion, the Administration has become so "mesmerized" that "We have been escalating at the will of our opponents, rather than on our own judgment."

Professor Kennan told the committee that the Administration should decide what could be held securely in South Vietnam and then "dig in and wait" for a political solution to emerge. To his mind, "I would submit there is more respect to be won in the opinion of the world by a resolute and courageous liquidation of unsound positions than in the most stubborn pursuit of extravagant and uncompromising objectives."

He then went on to warn that escalation would endanger the "greatest asset we could have in East Asia," the confidence and goodwill of Japan. His explanation of Japan's importance to the United States was the most impressive recently enunciated by a leading American.

In the meantime, President Johnson, returning from a dramatic conference with South Vietnam officials in Honolulu, said he saw no great conflict between his views and those of General Gavin. Professor Kennan, and most of his other critics, "No one wants to escalate the war. No one wants to surrender and pull out. At least, no one says they do. . . . All these days and weeks in all that has been said and done, I don't see any real program that anyone has presented that offers a clear alternative to recommend itself in preference to what we are doing."

In what most observers consider to be the most lucid and eloquent defense of Administration policies, General Taylor declared that the President's strategy was limited in objective, in geographical scope, in weapons and forces employed, and in targets to be attacked. He defined the Administration's goal in President Johnson's Baltimore speech of April 7, 1965 as "Our objective is the independence of South Vietnam and its freedom from attack. We want nothing for ourselves—only that the people of South Vietnam be allowed to guide their own country in their own way." He also conceded that we had secondary objectives too, such as that to prove that Communism's so-called wars of liberation are costly and doomed to failure. This is in our own national interest because the Communists, if they succeed with this tactic in Vietnam, will strike again in some other place, perhaps much closer to home in Latin America, with greater costs and sacrifices to the country than frustrating such future wars by "winning" in Vietnam.

Incidentally, by "winning" General Taylor did not mean capitulation or defeat in the more classic language of "traditional" wars of the past. He thought that by keeping the pressure on the "enemy", the time would come when Hanoi would decide that it has more to gain by "talking" than "fighting".

Secretary Rusk closed the arguments for the "defense" by presenting a 50-page prepared statement, detailing the diplomatic steps that have led to the present difficulties in Vietnam, before submitting to several hours of hard cross-examination. The Secretary put the case that "If the war in South Vietnam were—as the Communists try to make it appear—merely an indigenous revolt, then the United States would not have its combat troops in South Vietnam. But the evidence is overwhelming that it is in fact something quite different—a systematic aggression by Hanoi against the people of South Vietnam."

When the Secretary reminded the committee that the British surrender to Hitler's demands at Munich touched off World War II, committee chairman William Fulbright retorted that the situations were not comparable at all, that there should be no escalation.

From the Frying Pan

By Bill Hosokawa

HOW DO THEY KNOW?—During the recent Senate Foreign Relations Committee inquiry into Asian policies, two top members of the administration's team gave the American people assurances that military action is being restricted in an effort to avoid all-out war involving Red China.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk went on to say he doubts the Chinese want to expand the present war. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor testified war with China appeared unlikely because "there are too many reasons for Red China to avoid a confrontation with the United States."

How can they be sure? Weren't our leaders saying about the same thing when the Chinese crossed the Yalu River from Manchuria into North Korea back in 1950?

Perhaps one clue to the reason for the administration's confidence is to be found in an article, "The China Watchers," in the Feb. 12 New Yorker magazine. In an extremely detailed report, Robert Shaplen tells of the work of the "Pekingologists" in Hongkong who study Red China almost like scientists probing into the innermost secrets of an organism with a microscope, seeking out every significant political and economic development and trend behind the Bamboo Curtain.

WHO ARE THEY?—The Pekingologists include scholars and journalists as well as the more mysterious members of the diplomatic services, and even a Catholic priest who spent much of his adult life in China before the Communists drove him out.

These China Watchers read and analyze almost every scrap of printed material coming out of Red China. They listen to domestic radio broadcasts, interview escapees from the mainland, quiz travelers from neutral nations. They have learned to read signs so that they know when a domestic propaganda campaign takes a particular tack, it means certain difficulties have arisen inside Red China. Writes Shaplen: "One American student of Chinese economic affairs described to me how he arrived at some estimates of textile production in Shanghai. 'We know, to begin with, what the capacity of Shanghai's textile mills was before 1949,' he said. 'The Communists have announced percentage increases since then. We can check their export figures with the import statistics of other nations. Then we get accounts from visitors who have seen new plants or new wings of plants being built. We know what machinery the Chinese have been buying abroad. We can even figure out how many shifts a plant works in Shanghai by checking the amount of noise at night. So, bit by bit, we round out a fairly complete picture.'"

"The same man also gave me an example from the coal industry to show how economic estimates are made. The Japanese have been buying some Manchurian coal, he said, and if the Chinese fail to fill an order, that fact is sure to be disclosed in Japan, where the shortage of storage space makes it necessary for orders to be filled on time, and the failure can be traced to a production lag at a specific mine. 'After a while, beyond all the propaganda, the vague claims of Peking, and the sheer imponderables, you begin to sense the dimensions of success or failure, and you get a certain idea of the rhythm and direction of industrial activity,' he concluded."

THE TOTAL PICTURE—Shaplen's report adds up to a picture of Red China as a nation unified for the first time by the Communists, where clean new cities have been built, technical education improved and discipline enforced. But China also appears as a nation of oppression and suppression, where the people are exhorted to shore up a fragile economy by doing more with fewer material things. The world's most populous country emerges as being extremely vulnerable and far from a world power.

No doubt the findings of the Pekingologists in Hongkong and in other centers of U.S. intelligence give our leaders the confidence to say Red China is not ready for a showdown. And we hope they are right.

SWLA mortuary plans blocked by writ of mandate

LOS ANGELES—A petition for a writ of mandate charging "unfair play and bias" was filed Feb. 15 against the Angelus Funeral Home and the city board of zoning adjustment by the Crenshaw Buckingham Improvement Assn., thus blocking a decision by the board on plans for the proposed mortuary at 39th St. and Crenshaw Blvd.

The board was scheduled to act on initial designs and plans for the mortuary last week when the petition was served. The board has delayed proceedings indefinitely.

The funeral home and board were also directed to answer the charges by Mar. 2 in superior court.

This latest turn of events followed a decision by Superior Court Judge James G. Whyte upholding the board's approval of a conditional use permit, which only considered the Nov. 24, 1964 session. Attorneys for the improvement association promptly challenged the legality of the June 1, 8 and July 13, 1965, hearings. The writ charges the board with conducting unfair hearings and specifically charges its chairman, Roger S. Hutchinson, with bias and prejudicial remarks for the applicant.

The petition also contended the board hearings did not produce sufficient evidence for it to grant the conditional use permit.

More than a score of Issei and Nisei businessmen and residents of the area are members of the improvement association. Yo Takagaki is among the spokesmen for the group.

Nisei commands new Alaska army battalion

ELMENDORF AFB, Alaska—Lt. Col. Masakatsu Hisaka is commanding the recently formed 5th Bn., 23rd Infantry, at Ft. Richardson, which is part of the 172nd Infantry Brigade of the U.S. Army Alaska command. It replaced a battalion which has moved to Hawaii's 25th Infantry.

New Assignment

LOS ANGELES—Lt. Col. Geo. Suzuki of Los Angeles completed two years at Camp Buckner in Okinawa, training intelligence officers of Southeast Asian nations, and has been reassigned to the 108th Intelligence Corps Group at Syracuse, N.Y.

A 22-year Army veteran, he spent a week on the Vietnam front during the early stages of the current outbreak.

CANDIDATES of Westside JACL for Miss Nisei will be introduced at the Chanel's dance Feb. 26, 8:30 p.m., at Rodger Young Auditorium. Flanked by club advisers Roberta Takamoto (left) and Jane Takabayashi (right) are aspirants Candy Murata, Evy Hasegawa and Janet Murata. Three bands—the Outsiders, Something Else, and Superbs—will play for the dressy-dress affair. Bids are available at the door.

lation because the vital interests of the nation are not involved, and any escalation might well "trigger" World War III.

At last weekend, President Johnson replied to critics of his Vietnam policy, including members of Congress, who seem to believe that Asia should not receive the same commitment of United States forces that Europe had in facing the Soviet threat after World War II.

The President put it strongly: "We cannot hold freedom less dear in Asia than in Europe or be less willing to sacrifice for men whose skin is a different color... We cannot raise a double standard to the world..." He summed up his Administration's case, stating that "if the takeover of Vietnam can be achieved by a highly organized Communist force employing violence against a civilian population, it can be achieved in another country at another time and with even greater cost to freedom..."

Interim Council Newsletter

Salt Lake City Evidently enthusiasm for the Interim Council Newsletter was short-lived. The January issue was not published because only one article was submitted. Unless the response improves, the April edition may suffer the same fate. Consequently, may I solicit your support in providing us with news for publication.

Response to the initial Oct. issue was good. I think that Jane Saibara and Chris Kikuchi, co-editors, should be commended for the fine job they did in editing the October publication.

Since then, however, their office has terminated, and we have a new District Reporter who is assuming the newsletter responsibility. She is Sharon Mizuta from the Snake River Jr. JACL Chapter in Ontario, Ore. In Sharon we have a very willing and capable Reporter-Editor. She is currently a junior at the Ontario High School, where she is very active. Her extracurricular activities include Girls League Committee, GAA, FHA officer, the Honor Society, and Junior Class Secretary. She was also chosen the Sweetheart Queen of Ontario High.

Sharon stays busy in church activities as well. She is a member of the Ore-Ida Buddhist Church and serves as a Sunday School teacher, organist, and YBA officer. Among her special interests are sewing, traveling, and meeting people.

Thus, as you can readily surmise, we are not lacking in the category of an able National Newsletter Editor, but rather in Sharon's own words what is needed for the success of the newsletter is "more articles."

Generally, the articles should concern any chapter, district, or national activities of worthy note or special interest. We also encourage the submission of any articles from the Pacific Citizen pertaining to the youth; articles of general interest to the youth, whatever the source, such as, different youth fads in fashions, dances, etc., in different parts of the country; letters to the Editor; and youth opinions regarding controversial issues, such as, the Vietnam war.

Regrettably, expense permits only a limited circulation of the newsletter; currently enough copies are sent to each District Chairman or Area Representative to allow one copy per chapter. However, despite this limitation, the newsletter has the potential to be a valuable unifying medium for the various Jr. JACL chapters throughout the country.

The publication schedule for the next two issues is:

High Schools: Weiser, Payette, Fruitland, Ontario, Nyssa, Vale, Treasure Valley Community College, and Ontario Public Library.

Contra Costa's PTA 32nd District awarded Dr. Yoshio Terasaki a life membership . . . The U.S. Army Language School at Monterey uses a textbook on Cantonese Chinese written by a Maryknoll priest, Fr. Thomas O'Mella of Philadelphia. It was first published in 1938 and recently revised.

Press Row . . .

Debut of Nichibei Mainichi, successor of Shin Nichibei, in Lili Tokio Feb. 18 was auspicious, judging by the editorial comments in the other two Japanese vernaculars in town, Taul Watanabe, co-publisher with Bruce Kaji, in the opening editorial promised to support as well as criticize activities and personalities for the best interest of the Japanese community, to cover matters of public record including crimes and bankruptcies, to support issues and candidates it feels will be of direct benefit to the Japanese community, and to serve as a platform and podium. Under aegis of Civic Publishing Co., Taul and Bruce will be aided by George N. Matsumoto, Merit Savings & Loan president, and Alfred Hatate, Merit S&L vice-president, accounting supervisors; Akiyoshi Yamada, former Japanese editor of Shin Nichibei, president of the company and managing editor; Toshi Soffen, English editor; Hed Morodomi, Japanese editor; and Kenji Nakamura, advertising.

Taul is president of Civic National Bank; Bruce, president of Gardena S&L. Lili Tokio readers haven't seen papers jack each other in print since prewar days. Notes George Yoshinaga in the Kasu Mainichi: "They should have gone one step further and called themselves the Nichi Bei Mainichi Shimpo." "Before (Taul) Watanabe ventures forward again with another editorial it might be well for him to remember that while in the area of money-making he stands alone, newspapering puts him on common grounds with people equal to his typewriter" . . . Columnist Ellen Endo at the Rafu Shimpō regards the opening editorial as "fairly long on wind" . . . a little short on thought and research."

Japan Times president Shintaro Fukushima was named chairman of Kyodo News Service . . . Tom Seishiro Nakamura, 87, of Englewood, Colo., was recognized by the Denver Post Feb. 12 in its weekly Gallery of Fame "for work in furthering Japanese-American relations" upon receipt of his decoration from the Japanese government . . . $5¼-million fund to expand ADL sel

NEW YORK—The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith will expand its human relations and civil rights program this year with a $5,257,000 budget to "answer new threats" from the radical right and take advantage of "spectacular advances in intergroup and interreligious relations, civil rights, human rights and the state of democracy itself."

More than 800 Jewish community leaders from across the country, representatives of government and industry, labor, education and religion, attended the ADL banquet held in conjunction with the meeting, honoring U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg to the United Nations.

Nimitz opened Navy to Nisei

SAN FRANCISCO—Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, who marshaled American naval strength from the disaster of Pearl Harbor to Japan's surrender in Tokyo Bay, was buried on his 81st birthday Thursday in Golden Gate National Cemetery.

Nimitz died Sunday (Feb. 20) of complications following a stroke in his home on Yerba Buena Island in San Francisco Bay.

Though it was against official Navy policy to allow the enlistment of Nisei, as commander in chief in the Pacific in World War II, he not only authorized but encouraged the use of Japanese Americans in combat intelligence, knowing that they could make a significant contribution to victory in the Pacific.

After the war, as Chief of Naval Operations, he was responsible for opening the Navy to Japanese Americans.

Following his retirement from active service, he was helpful to resolving the problems of Japanese Americans, lending his name to various campaigns for equality and fair play.
