Reflecting upon Harry Kitano's analysis of some aspects of the Nisei personality during the UCLA Symposium on the Evacuation leaves me with mixed feelings.

Is the self-effacing, reluctance to accept praise and with ance to accept praise and with-drawing nature, often charac-teristic of Nisei, indeed a synderistic of Nisel, indeed a syndrome? Isn't this quality primarily responsible for the favorable image we enjoy today? Isn't this "nice" stereotype, after all, to be preferred to being perceived as aggressive, "pushy", arrogant, demanding and similar traits, san FRANCISCO — Despite the postponement, San Francisco — Despite the postponement, San Francisco — Despite the postponement, San Francisco — Despite — Training March 1988 — Trainin

Although its existence has Although its existence has attracted about hair of the Iso been a part of the Nisei success story, I must agree with Harry that the concept of "enryo" too often costs us too much. To me, it is at the root of a basically unhealthy and "phony" approach to inter-personal relationships. To lowing overall points within the four classes of competence.

How often do we say, or Reedley 72, San Francisco bear, the phrase "don't enryo" 58½, San Mateo 52, Cortez 31, w en we offer, or are offered, San Jose 24½ and Eden Town-refrestments. The message beship 14.

Summaries: the illustration is overly sim-plified, but I believe the inter-pretation holds.

Personally, I looked at my-self and long ago realized the impact of this kind of influence, both good and bad on me. Without doing an injustice to the positive implications, the negatives need looking at. Reluctance to admit ambition, or need for self-satisfaction, inability to accept honest praise gracefully, difficulty in saying "no", trouble in handling people's hostility, not because you are necessarily concause you are necessarily concause you are necessarily considerate of their feelings, but because open conflict is em-barrassing, and a host of other items you can think of.

How often have we shared Al-Co Jr. JACL anecdotes like, it is refreshing to be with "Hakujin" because The host chall of their openness (for lack of a better term), Why is it na-tural for the "Hakujin" (when it is appropriate) to ask a waiter for separate checks, but often necessary for a Nisei to insist on picking up the tab

The underlying current seems to be an exaggerated desire to look good to others, and this is an ingredient of the enryo concept. All these factors tend to place an unconscious premium on "phoniness", in the sense that in militates. scious premium on "phoniness", in the sense that it militates against open, "gut go horseback riding and at level", honest, inter-personal communications. It is apparent by now that the business I am in, having to do often with people interaction, has made this kind of self-examination necessary to survive. Thus, my fascination with

Washington Newsletter: Mike Masaoka Takeso Shimoda

Since the week-long Mid-East war happily appears to be over, even though difficult political, economic, and diplomatic problems remain to be resolved, and since there were no apparent special Nisei angles to that Israeli-Arab confrontation, we shall devote this Newsletter to Takeso Shimoda, who is scheduled to arrive in Washington early next week to assume his post as Japan's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the United States.

The 60-year-old Shimoda succeeds Ryuji Takeuchi as Japan's envoy to Washington. He will be the sixth post-World War II Japanese Ambassador to the United

The new Ambassador joined the Foreign Office in 1931, after graduating from Tokyo Imperial University. In addition to having been the Minister of the Embassy here a decade ago, Shimoda has served in such posts as Chief of the Treaties Section, Ambassador to Belgium, Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs, the highest post in the Foreign Ministry available to career diplomats.

In an address to the America-Japan Society of Tokyo and the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan late last month, the new Ambassador outlined his thoughts regarding the relationship of Japan and the United States, as he prepared to leave for his latest assignment.
Noting that "various changes have occurred in the relationship between the United States and Japan, as well as the situation in Asia" in the ten years since he was last stationed in Washington, the new envoy declared that, "During this period, Japan completed the process of normalizing its relations with other countries with a few process of normalizing its relations with other countries. tries, with a few exceptions including Communist China. This whole process took more than 20 years and was concluded, curiously enough, by normalizing its relations with its closest neighbor, the Republic of Korea. Emerging from its so-called postwar era, Ja-pan has entered a stage where it attempts to formulate and carry out foreign policies on its own from a new

Parallel to such renewed foreign policy activities

"Parallel to such renewed foreign policy activities on the part of Japan, there are trends in Asia which have been so aptly described by Secretary Rusk as the 'new wind in Asia'. What, then, is this 'new wind' in the eyes of the Japanese people?

"The most notable aspect of this 'new wind' is that, in spite of their differences in political and ideological views or positions, neighboring countries of Asia are making concerted efforts towards the most fundamental goal common to all Asians, namely, the conquest of poverty. Asians can look back upon a conquest of poverty. Asians can look back upon a period in their history, thousands of years ago, when their civilization enjoyed a position of preeminence in the world. They have now resumed their steps towards the long-term goal they share of rebuilding an Asia which would enjoy an improved standard of living, as well as a high standard of social and cultural achieve-ment, an Asia which would be worthy of its tradition

Shimoda then went on to summarize Japan's participation and leadership in the cooperative regional programs that have been established for the economic, social, and cultural development of the area, expressing the hope that "the United States would continue its support to and cooperation with the efforts of Asians, since the United States does have a great stake in peace and stability in this region."

Explaining that the "Peace Constitution" of Japan distinguishes the relationship with the United States, as compared to American relations with the Western European nations, the new Ambassador emphasized that "Japan is unable to make any military contribution to collective security measures within or outside the United Nations." At the same time, however, Japan is lending "cooperation in the economic outside Japan. field or in the field of social welfare, including medical care, for the purpose of peaceful construction" in Viet-nam "as a part of the broader cooperative efforts towards the achievement of the common goals of Asi-

It is not that bilateral issues have disappeared before us. There are, for example, problems constitutions of the constitution of cerning Okinawa or difference of our interests in tion of the Watts community fisheries. While conceding that "discords and differences are bound to exist between two independent countries," he declared that, "We have always succeeded and comin mutually satisfactory settlements. The question of fun-damental importance in this regard is whether, despite these differences, the two governments and the two peoples are willing to make their efforts to underexchange of views. So far as our relations with the United States are concerned, I need hardly repeat here that the Japanese Government and the overwhelming majority of its people would answer this question in the affirmative.

"We can derive further encouragement from the fact that today there are hardly any Japanese who have prejudices against the United States due to their memories of the war or who, on the other extreme, regard the United States as a unilateral protector in view of their experiences during the occupation period. In their place has arisen a generation which has been harverly in free from memories of two and this bear In their place has arisen a generation which has been brought up free from memories of war and which has been nurtured in the political and economic environment of a new, developing Japan. Without having any prejudice against the United States, they would speak out in the international arena in a most forthright manner. They also expect their country to act on the basis of a strong sense of independence and responsibility fitting to a country of the first rank. These are the people who can from the genuinely solid foundation for establishing a new partnership between Japan and the United States.

"I think that we are now at a point where we should return to the clean slate, so to speak, to the time when we first established diplomatic relations one hundred years ago, and to develop a new friendship between us, marching forward together, sharing joys and sorrows in this world filled with hardships and respecting independence and freedom of action of each other."

THE ART OF PRINTING — Those of us whose reading is oriented primarily toward daily newspapers and magazines are inclined to overlook the enormous strides being made in the printing of books. A few years ago we thumbed through some art books in Hongkong flawlessly printed in Red China. More recently we saw samples of fine printing in the Soviet exhibit at Expo 67 in Montreal, and some spectacularly beautiful color printing in the Czechoslovakian pavilion. Obviously the Communist nations are making a good deal of progress in the art of fine printing: they good deal of progress in the art of fine printing; they are turning out quality as well as quantities of propaganda material.

All this leads up to a visit the other day by Kat-suhiko Sakiyama, the young assistant vice president of Kodansha International, the American outlet of one of Japan's most distinguished publishing houses. Ko-dansha International has set up offices in Palo Alto, Calif., and is distributing a number of remarkably handsome volumes, most of which have to do with some aspect of Japanese or Oriental culture.

Many of Kodansha's books are not cheap. For example, its prize-winning "Decorative Arts of Japan," with 112 color plates, sells for $32.50. The two-volume "The Arts of Japan," translated by Prof. Glenn Webb of the Univ. of Washington, is $25 per volume or $42.50 for the set. However, for one who appreciates good printing or is a student of the Japanese arts, these volumes are collectors' items.

POSTWAR PROGRESS — Good printing requires a good many skills — the skill of the paper-maker, the skill of the typographer and pressman, the skills of the binder, the color engraver, the layout designer — and it is obvious the Japanese printing industry has developed each of these skills.

—and it is obvious the Japanese printing industry has developed each of these skills.

There was a time before the war when Japanese publications left much to be desired. They were much like the products of other Japanese industries—shoddy, substandard. The paper quality was low. Antiquated type faces were used. Sometimes rusty staples were used to bind the pages.

Kodansha's books are proof that the printing in-Kodansha's books are proof that the printing industry has been upgraded in the same fashion as Japan's automotive, electronic, shipbuilding and other industries. They take back seats to no craftsmen anywhere in the world.

IN AMERICAN ENGLISH—Equally as impressive as the quality of printing in the new books from Japan is the quality of writing. It used to be that Japanese scholars with an inadequate command of English tried to tell us about such complex matters as the Noh drama, flower arrangement or woodblock prints. Americans who tried to translate Japanese manuscripts simply did not know enough about the subjects to do an adequate job.

Not so any more. Both Japanese and American scholars are well-enough acquainted with their respective subjects that their writing is both lucid and

Books such as these should be of particular in-terest to Nisei who, if you'll pardon the expression, in middle age are demonstrating a brand new curiosity and concern about Japanese cultural arts. Men and women who ignored or resisted exposure to Japanese culture have developed an interest in learning more about Japan's contribution to the world's store of beauty. One need but thumb through a volume such as Torao Miyagawa's "Modern Japanese Painting" to understand how contemporary Japanese artists have combined ancient and modern techniques with strikingly beautiful results.

Kodansha's fall catalogue includes some 45 titles ranging from the arts to sports, fiction to sports, cooking to folk tales, and they all look interesting.

In Japan Perry noted in his diary that Japanese are a people of form. Heusken wrote: "It seems that the Japanese do everything they must at the same time, prescribed by law. They take their breakfast, lunch, and dinner all exactly at the same hour. They change clothes four times a year on the same day. One day everybody is busy drying fish; another day is to dry fabrics woven by the women. Apparently they go even further, for today everybody without exception has a cold, certainly by order of the government."

Fortuitous discovery led to findings of two important sets of documents on Japanese history: (1), when UCLA's li-brarian found the French manuscript of "Japan Journal, 1855-1861" in the

Harris was angered with what he took as a threat but later learned that the governors might have to commit hara-kiri if they could not convey satisfactory answers to the Tokugawa authorities who wanted no foreigners in Edo.

Finally Harris and Heusken could journey to Edo and conduct direct negotiations at the capital. Heusken describes their outfit: "We mount our horses in order to avoid for as long as possible being onlessed in our basis." possible being enclosed in our 'nori-mon'. Finals, for the most part, are over and graduation time is here and for some most important of all—sum-mer is here at last. The anticipation is gone and the pace of activities will increase, decline or will shift emphasis.

How many Sansei drift apart from school friends who may have appeared as close, intimate friends, during the year after school has closed? For some Sansei youth, Jr. JACL activities by and large will increase in number, if not in tempo.

Is Jr. JACL that gap which can fill a void of meeting and greeting many friendships and new challenges? Perhaps it is the opportunity for some to work with fellow Sansei, whom they very seldom meet at school, church, or community situations. To others dealing more frequently with Sansei, Jr. JACL may seem to be old hat. Yet, when they find themselves in Jr. JACL, it is a wider circle than just their school, church, or community. church, or community.

church, or community.

Jr. JACL seems to prosper better in the summer months than in the winter. Hopefully, most of the youth chapters are polishing up their activity calendars with balanced programs and keeping an eye on a prospective new member, who can answer the call and help pitch in and make Jr. JACL what it should be and not just a dream.

And, in passing, do Japanese American youth sometimes wonder who they are, what they are—seek self-identity? Do they question the friends they have and the people they meet and deal with during the summer months? Are they the future leaders of tomorrow, "A Man of All Seasons," dealing consistently and fairly with the same circle of friends or do they shift from group to group with the tempo of activities varying with the season or finally is this all part of growing up?

PSW Potpourri

Let's talk this week about what's been happening in the Pacific Southwest District. Although the PSW is running a poor second in

Although the PSW is running a poor second in membership for the 22nd consecutive year, we have one very bright spot in the West L.A. Chapter. Membership chairman, George Nakao, has made the chapter, with 604 members, Ichiban in the district and fourth nationally behind San Francisco, San Jose and Chicago. I guess this calls for a bottle of champagne ... At the other extreme, Coachella Valley Chapter has had only one member for the past seven years. And this calls for a bottle of Listerine.

NEW CHAPTERS — It seems almost a certainty now that the San Gabriel Valley Chapter will be reactivated into our 90th chapter. Twenty-five members have signed up and a committee has been appointed to draw up a constitution. Temporary officers elected are Dave Ito, chairman pro-tem; Marvel Mivata, secretary; and Deni Uejima, treasurer. Pasadena is the sponsoring chapter.

There is also another chapter taking form in the There is also another chapter taking form in the Riverside-San Bernardino area. The first organizational meeting was held on May 29 with eight members of the sponsoring Orange County Chapter attending along with Dave Miura, 2nd National Vice-President; Ted Tsukahara, District Vice Governor; James Kasahara, National Membership Chairman; Alan Kumamoto, National Youth Director, and myself.

PENNSYLVANIA BOUND - The District will suffer a tremendous loss at the end of this month when the much loved and respected JACLer, Father (Clement) Boesflug will leave for his new assignment in Pennsylvania. Reservations or inquiry may be made regarding the JACL sponsored dinner at 6:30, Thursday, the Peninsylvania of t day, June 22 by calling the Regional Office at 626-4471.

WHEN TO DECENTRALIZE

Though not of prime concern at the present time, the question of JACL's organizational structure has been attracting more attention than usual. A sum of about $500 was authorized to study the communica tions problem within the organization last year—pointing up the gravity of the situation. A specialist was employed to sift through the maze of communication lines existing within the organization, who recommended several steps to unravel or improve the lines. But more fundamental is the structure.

The structure as designed by the JACL national constitution is not the problem. It appears to be the execution or implementation of mandates and handling the every day problems that arise.

Asked by Jerry Enomoto to prepare a draft for executive reorganization by July 1, we have had to brush up on principles of management, trying to elicit ideas from several current texts on the subject that can be applicable to JACL administration.

We may arrive at three organizational chartsdetailing the relationship between chapters, district councils and national board; another charting the lines of command and roles of service within the national organization; and one establishing the structure of the JACL professional staff itself. At this point, a complex diagram combining all three charts seems highly improbable to project so that it can be readily understood.

As an organization made up of people, it is a basic principle that each member within the organization participates and shares in the business of striving for the objective for which JACL has been organized—"security through unity" and "better Americans in a greater America"—which we interpret as simply "more members"

It is also incumbent upon the organization that its members know what to do, what its share of the task at hand is, and help them acquire the necessary skill or knowledge to do the job.

JACL's stated policies, programs and activities help to motivate members to get more members. The responsible officers and members of the organization are then charged with fulfilling the various functions that make an organization tick

The primary functions of JACL are already spe-cified by the establishment of on-going national committees. Some are more basic to the business of get-ting more members, while other committees provide service and assistance to improve the means of enroll-

As a national organization which has continued to grow in size (additional staff has been hired, salaries have been increased, more frequent travel has been approved), burden on the top executives never abates, multiplication of programs affects quality and the need for decentralization becomes more real

Our free time with the textbooks leads to us to one conclusion for the present: organizational execu-tive charts can be changed at will and each organization must custom make its own charts.

A FORTNIGHT OF FAREWELLS

Starting with the three-day Maryknoll School carrival this week, JACL's chaplain and my onetime Father Confessor, Father Clement Boesflug will be saying goodbye to the hundreds of acquaintances he has made during his near 30 years in Los Angeles, four of them in the various War Relocation Authority camps during the bleak era following Pearl Harbor.

Father, who spent his early years as a missioner in the Kyoto area, hails from Bismarck, N.D., and on the occasion of his silver jubilee as a Catholic priest had his parents present here at the Maryknoll Mission on Hewitt St. for the celebration several years ago. on Hewitt St. for the celebration several years ago. Because his German surname was a tongue twister among the Japanese with whom he worked, they called him Fr. Clement; those in Japan affectionately called him Fr. Hiroshi, which also means clement.

Yet he continually abhorred publicity, quietly going about his duties for the good of the Japanese Americans in general. He was an "associate member" of a number of JACL chapters in the Pacific Southwest, caring for chaplaincy duties when asked.

His first brush with JACL came in 1954 when he pinch-hit for Fr. Hugh Lavery, then superior of the Maryknoll school and church here, who was being cited by National JACL for his work with Japanese during the war years. Since then, Fr. Clement has manage to show up at every JACL national convention. His Roman collar and clerical suit stood out no matter where in the Nisei world, in which Catholics are but a privileged few

So, before July 1, his friends here will be saying "so long for a while" to Fr. Clement. The Maryknoll Mission is holding a farewell reception on Sunday. June 25, 3 p.m. We shall wish him success on his new assignment at the Maryknoll House in Clarks Summit Pa., and know that our oaths will cross again in the future. It's the nature of missioners to get around—and if he isn't able, we'll have to rely on a newspaperman's getting around.

Concert Japanesque

Dear Harry,
Thank you for your encouraging words, (PC, May 26), in regard to Concert Japanesque that our chapter sponsored recently. Financially, we did not come out too well due to the great expense involved. to the great expense involved; however, since $15 of every patron ticket ($25), was desig-nated toward this fund regardless of the outcome, we are happy to report that a con-happy to report that a con-tribution will be made soon. We had hoped that a sub-stantial amount would be real-ized so that a portion of the proceeds could be retained by our chapter, but because of the nominal amount the Board of Directors voted to earmark of Directors voted to earmark the entire proceeds for the District to administer toward cultural activities. With this as a starting point it is our hope that other chapters will be stimulated into sponsoring programs whereby the youth in our community may be awakened to our wonderful cultural heritage as well as be encouraged to pursue careers in the arts field. It is heartening to know that although the attendance was not quite as large as we had anticipated, the audience was a most enthusiastic and appre ciative one, attested by its thunderous applause and re-quest for an encore. Nothing but complimentary remarks have been received, and all indications show that the peo-ple who attended the concert will not only be back, but will definitely influence others to come along with them. A few merchants have even asked us for ad space in the next pro-gram, believe it or not! With this kind of warm response, the ensuing concert should be bigger and better now that we've hurdled the difficulties of a first attemut. of a first attempt.
