The group was led by a number of prominent Portland political figures, including Mayor David Maddox, who had previously been a member of the Portland Citizens for Freedom group. Ideal in my mind is some honorary status, akin to the honorary vice-president, for the old faces who have disappeared from the leadership. I believe the installation should give these old hands the feeling of being together again. Since they found themselves always emotionally and mentally involved in the cause of peace. This feeling of being together again would certainly elevate the sentiments of the new generation and bring them into the fold.

In the Youth program we are continually seeking adults to become involved in advising us. This is a special treat, not unlike each and every member who is willing to give a little. But here is a question: what do we expect from this volunteerism, other than to "feel" their "purple heart" or "metal of valor" and feel, therefore, that we have won something. But who are these volunteers who are not really doing anything? What is the feeling of the Volunteer? What is their role? What is their contribution?

Separate arm of Jr. JACL for college students will be formed. It is a program that is only known by what we overlook for everyone. Their role is quite unimportant. Others were a little behind.

There are no JACLs, there would be some problem. If we adhere to the principle of unity, we shall solve the problem. But there is no JACL.

We are faced with many members from the Valley of the Sun and now it is time to establish the first in California. We can do it. We can fill the gap. The Junior JACL is a force to be reckoned with. It shall be established.

And we're still seeking volunteers to help. It is time for us to do it. We don't have much time. And we're still seeking volunteers to help. It is time for us to do it. We don't have much time.
