CCDC CONFAB

Drove down to Fresno with National Youth Commissioner Mike Suzuki for the CCDC Convention at the Hacienda through a remarkably fog free valley both ways.

I felt that the Saturday evening session provided a good vehicle for discussion and interaction among CCDC delegates and national staff and officers, on the general topic of civil rights.

I thought that Mike Suzuki put a basic philosophy across very well when he pointed out that JACL's active concern about the rights of all Americans was its idea of working for the well-being and protection of Japanese Americans.

The presence of Harry Honda enabled the CCDC to get first hand a view of the PC operation and feel anew the need for every district and chapter to hustle maximum Holiday Issue ads to help keep P.C. solvent.

James "Butch" Kasahara was a major contributor to the conference. As past National Membership Chairman, he reported on this very vital part of our program at a timely period of the year.

A timely and interesting panel and audience reaction type discussion, both youth and adults talking, was held by the youth. Revolving around Patti, Don Asakawa, Marian Okamura, and John Sugiyama and moderated by "Junior Adult" Alan Kumamoto, the session saw some pretty important issues covered.

Examples of questions — "How different are Nisei and Sansel?" "Is Racial Sensitivity a Good Thing?" "What is the Sansel position on the campus issues?"

The presence of Juniors from Northern and Southern California was good evidence of the vitality of the program. We have Harry Kaku to thank for a tough and lonely job of bringing the Jr. JACL movement in CCDC along to its present state.

I sensed that Mike Suzuki's spontaneous message to the CCDC business session on the Jr. JACL program was very well received. He is a professional social worker, holding a high ranking position in the State Department of Social Welfare, with an active JACL background, who can be expected to bring a top quality type of leadership to the National Youth Program.

The CCDC confab was highlighted by the mass installation of officers. I now have a unique memento—the key to the City of Fresno fashioned into an attractive tie-bar presented to me by Acting Mayor Wills.

I also had the chance to get better acquainted with Congressman B. F. Sisk, and Assemblyman George Zenovich.

Our National Director, Mas, did the honors with pin presentations to our CCDC leaders, while Harry Honda and Butch Kasahara presented Chapter of the Year and Membership awards. Congratulations to all recipients, and to Governor Tok Yamamoto and all his officers (also thanks to Tok for accepting a second term). It was my pleasure to introduce San Jose Vice Mayor Norman Mineta, who presented a thoughtful address on Nisei in politics and the urban crisis. CCDC stalwart, Fred Hirayama, performed a top notch job as Toastmaster.

Public interest still high on WRA camps

Special to The Pacific Citizen. SAN FRANCISCO — The audience is a typical one for San Francisco in the late 1960's, composed of middle class types, with sprinklings of hippie types. Yet all are intent as they listen to the recounting of an event, which took place 26 years ago and is almost incredible now in retrospect.

Though the date is today (Nov. 20, 1968), they are reminded that this event could easily happen again. Though the place is the First Unitarian Church, a lovely church on top of Cathedral Hill, Caucasians in the audience are made aware that many people from San Francisco, their neighbors in the Western Addition area, were involved in this event.

The event is, of course, the Japanese American evacuation of 1942. Copies of the "Instructions to All Persons of Japanese Ancestry" are distributed to members of the audience as a living reminder that it really did happen.

The panelists are members of the JACL National Committee to Repeal Title II of the Internal Security Act of 1950. They are Masao Satow, Edson Uno, Ray Okamura and Mary Ann Takagi. Their purpose is to urge the repeal of this Act.

Lived in Camps All of the panelists experienced the camps themselves. And this is what comes across to the audience. The panelists do not have the air of super-salesmen, out to convince with the glib use of words.

Instead there is the intense awareness that they have lived and experienced that of which they speak, and of the great cost in their personal lives. Three or four years out of one's life in the formative years may never really be recovered.

And so the audience tries to understand the experience of another, what most of them never personally lived or even can imagine. They try to understand the hurt and surprise and anger of these people who were separated out and uprooted from their ordinary lives and sent away to isolated areas.

Feeling Gets Across The background of racial prejudice that led to such governmental action is made real again through the relating of the climate of the times and specific incidents illustrating this climate.

The panelists leave little

JAL jelliner Shiga ditched, to re-fly

SAN FRANCISCO—Japan Air Lines announced its DC-8 62 Super Jet courier, "Shiga," which landed short of its destination here Nov. 22 in seven-feet of water in San Francisco Bay, will be repaired, refitted and returned to regular service in about six months, according to Chikanori Noda, JAL general manager of engineer.

Noda was one of 14 JAL officials who came here from Tokyo after the huge jelliner fell into the bay in a "miracle landing" in which none of the 107 persons aboard were even hurt.

The airplane was lifted out of the water on Sunday. It was brought into the United Air Lines maintenance building here Wednesday.

Fear had been expressed that the plane would not be worth salvaging and that it would be a $8.3 million piece of junk because of possible structural damage and extensive sea water corrosion of its thin aluminum outer shell.

Yen claimants raise tax issue

PORTLAND—The yen deposit certificates of Yokohama Specie Bank were frozen at beginning of World War II, and after 27 years and after many years of JACL work in behalf of the depositors, some are being paid back at the pre-war exchange rate of around 4 yen to a dollar.

There have been some inquiries as to reporting the proceeds, so as not to get involved with Internal Revenue Service and State Tax Commission as well as the case when evacuation claims were paid some years ago, according to Henry Kato, PNWDC governor.

doubt that the repressive actions were motivated by racial prejudice, nor do they leave much doubt that these were really concentration camps with barbed wire and armed guards with machine guns.

Why are the panelists speaking before this group, dredging up what is in the past? And probably should be left alone?

One gets the feeling that there is a deeper inner conviction on their part that it must not happen again. There were then too few voices speaking out in protest, too few friends who would endanger their own futures. People must be made aware of what really happened so should the situation arise again, they are informed and ready to speak out.

Since the Japanese Americans experienced concentration camps in America, they are the natural ones to speak out.

Rumors Today The panelists remind the audience of the similarities of the two times. Then, as now, there are fears and rumors of concentration camps in the affected communities. Then it was the Japanese Americans, now it is the Negroes.

Then, there were denials of such camps; now, there are the same denials. Then, there was the climate of war-scare and racial fear; now, there is the racial fear and a swing of the political climate to the right, opening up the possibility of more repressive action.

The constitution offered no protection then; many who admitted the Evacuation were unconstitutional approved of the Evacuation. Today, a law with provisions allowing a similar situation is on the books. This law is the Internal Security Act of 1950. Title II of it contains the offending provisions.

Probable It permits the Attorney General to apprehend and place in "detention camps" persons he suspects will "probably" engage in acts of espionage or sabotage. The word "probably" is used.

S. I. Hayakawa heads strife-torn San Francisco State College

SAN FRANCISCO—The change came swiftly: Dr. Samuel Ichiye Hayakawa, 62, professor of English at San Francisco State College, was named the third president of that strife-torn institution in the past five months.

About 90 faculty members who supported the student strikes that have wracked the college were in a meeting last week (Nov. 26) when news came from Los Angeles that Dr. Robert R. Smith had suddenly quit and that the Canadian-born Nisei had been named acting president.

A roar of laughter greeted the announcement but the group's mood changed to grimness. There were cries of "strike, strike" and one Sansei student, Miyo Ota, member of the Third World Liberation Front, charged: "He is a minority person but he's the highest order of an Uncle Tom."

Faculty Not Consulted The faculty group then voted to refuse to teach classes until the college is given the freedom to implement demands of minority students which have precipitated the campus turmoil. Said Dr. Leo G. McClatchy, chairman of the Academic Senate, "It's a sad day for the campus that President Smith should be dumped after he received the endorsement of his faculty."

McClatchy also condemned the state college trustees in session at Los Angeles and chancellor, Glenn Dumke, for failure to consult the faculty before appointing the internationally known semantist.

Smith resigned because of what he termed moves by the trustees to further restrict his "flexibility of action" on campus. Smith, who shut down the campus for four days on Nov. 14 and again for three days on Nov. 25 in the face of a strike called by the Black Students Union and the Third World Liberation Front, which represents other non-Caucasians, said the trustees wanted a guarantee that if he reopened the campus, he would keep it open.

Gov. Reagan who was attending the trustees meeting in his ex-officio capacity was reported by an aide as telling Smith that "those who don't want to attend college either to teach or study must be quickly removed from the campus."

"The governor," he said, "wants the situation brought to a head. One way to do that is to suspend professors and students who disrupt the campus—and there are certainly rules on the books for doing just that."

Hayakawa, as his first official act, cancelled the last in a series of student-faculty convocations called by Smith to discuss strike issues and extended the forced vacation through the Thanksgiving holidays.

Orders Classes Reopen Last Saturday, Hayakawa ordered the campus reopened for 8 a.m. Monday and that a state of emergency on campus be maintained until further notice. "Police will be available to the fullest extent necessary to maintain and restore peace when school opens," he explained.

"We have been warned that dangerous situations may arise," the first Nisei college president declared. He was referring to plans of irate students who would continue to strike if the campus reopens.

Hayakawa was also facing a court order if the campus remains shut. In a joint action filed by Jack Cramer, editor-publisher of the San Rafael Independent Journal, and his 20-year-old son, Frederick, a graphic arts student, they claimed school fees had been paid in good faith, expecting the college to fulfill its obligation to provide instruction. A Marin County judge promptly issued a show-cause order.

The distinguished semantics scholar said students or teachers accused of trying to disrupt classes would not be denied due process disciplinary procedures.

Faculty Resignations For members of the faculty, absent without authorization for five days, according to college regulations, is considered equivalent to resignation. "I intend to accept any such resignations promptly," Hayakawa said.

During the convocation sessions, which replaced classes, student strike leaders explained their position on the 15 BSU and Third World demands centered around the objective that nonwhite students be allowed a separate, self-governing school for ethnic studies. Hayakawa said he is sympathetic with the BSU objectives and would fight for the funds to attain them.

"But the students will conduct themselves with propriety and dignity, neither creating disturbances nor interfering with the work and study of others," Hayakawa added. "Students charged with disrupting classrooms or the orderly processes of campus life will be promptly suspended. Due process will be provided to any student so suspended within 72 hours of such suspension."

Campus Terrorism Hayakawa said he would not fall for tactics in which the campus is terrorized until police are summoned and then antagonism built up by some faculty who strenuously object to having police on campus. "Such tactics are well known from the histories of the Russian and Nazi histories. Their aim is to discredit authority in the hope of ultimately destroying the government."

He urged that police who may be summoned to the campus this week be greeted by faculty and students "in a friendly way, since they are there for our protection."

"If you treat the police as human beings, they are likely to respond in kind," he said. "If you treat them as enemies, loudly and persistently, they can be driven to act as enemies."

Expressing optimism about the reopening, he said the Committee for an Academic Environment, students for keeping the classes in session, and a group of Japanese American students would distribute blue arm bands to all who would wear them. The arm band symbolizes racial equality, including all legitimate strike demands, social justice, nonviolence and resumption of education.

Hayakawa appealed to all members of the college community to wear the arm bands.

On Self-Determination On the Negro demand for self-determination and the right to make their own determinations, Hayakawa pointed out, "Self-determination is not given, it is earned. Self-determination comes from having enough money to be your own boss, or from having enough intelligence and creativity so that others are willing to entrust great projects to you."

"Let me tell the members of the BSU and the Third World that I am on their side. I am not white. I want to be counted as an ally," Hayakawa said.

The new San Francisco State College president was born in Vancouver, B.C., in 1906, the son of Ichiro and Tora Hayakawa. The family moved in 1909 to Calgary. He received his B.A. degree at the Univ. of Manitoba in 1927, his M.A. at McGill and Ph.D. in English at Wisconsin in 1935. He translated the theories of semantist Alfred Korzybski into layman's language in his book, "Language in Action," in 1941 which gained him international renown. Hayakawa preached the message of self-improvement in this book and advanced the idea that in human relationships it is how you project yourself that counts for everything.

At S.F. State Since 1955 Dr. Hayakawa taught at the Univ. of Chicago and at San Francisco State since 1955. He is editor of ETC, a quarterly journal for the International Society of General Semantics. While in Chicago, he was columnist in the Negro weekly, the Defender.

Now a naturalized citizen, Hayakawa in 1952 publicly sided with those who felt the Walter-McCarran Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 was discriminatory to other groups, even though it eliminated race as a qualification for naturalization and immigration. He differed with JACL and urged the Congress wait at least another year for further consideration of the act in the light of the inequities for other minorities.

Elementary school with over 50 pct. enrollment of Oriental pupils big factor in high reading factor

SACRAMENTO — A school with over 50 per cent Oriental enrollment has topped all other grade schools in the Sacramento City Unified District this year in the Stanford Reading Test score.

Over the three-year span, Riverside School has ranked consistently among the highest, well above the national norm of 50. John Cabrillo School, with about one-third Oriental enrollment, is second.

Mrs. Elaine H. Stowe, language arts specialist for the city schools, explained, "Oriental parents place real value on education. The youngsters go to school with the feeling, 'I've got to learn'. This is important."

Frank E. Delavan, Sacramento's director of educational research services, also attaches significance to the role of parents in primary reading instruction.

"The public expects the schools to do it alone, but the schools can't do it," Delavan says. "They can only carry on from where parents leave off."

Hubert T. Rae, Riverside's longtime principal, attributes the school's success to a combination of factors—a "good school climate," a stable and congenial faculty, and a relatively small size.

"In a small group," he says, "we can pinpoint each individual. Each youngster can have an identity you can't have in a larger school."

Rae, one of the few Sacramento principals who may be interviewed in his office instead of on patrol duty in the school-yard, is quick to acknowledge the support Riverside receives from Oriental parents.

"We have fewer emotional problems here than in many situations, fewer behavior problems," he says.

"The classroom is not so much a disciplining situation. The kids come wanting to learn."

Motivation from Parents Riverside has "no big, large percentage of unusually bright students," Rae says, and the majority of the Oriental parents are not college-educated members of the so-called professions. Many operate grocery stores.

"But they're motivated, and it's this motivation and drive they tend to pass on to their kids," Rae adds.

"I'd say the World Book salesman has sold more books in this neighborhood than in any other area of the city."

Warren G. Ekness, Cabrillo principal, feels the Oriental community provides a stable factor at that school.

They are here this year and the next and their brothers and sisters come and go here and they're wonderful to deal with," Ekness says.

Parents in Charge Both Rae and District Supt. Paul B. Salmon believe that Oriental pupils get fewer distractions and interruptions from home than Caucasian pupils.

The two educators include in this generalization fewer hours before a television set and fewer pressures to conform, at a tender age, to today's subteen cult of dating and dances.

"The (Oriental) parents are still in charge," Salmon says. —Sacramento Union

Ex-All People's Church minister joins COO as information center director

LOS ANGELES — A new program to "reach the unreached" has been initiated by the Council of Oriental Organizations (COO) with appointment of the program's coordinator, Kay Kokubun, formerly a minister of All Peoples' Church.

Kokubun will direct his activities from COO's new Oriental Information and Referral Center, located at the International Institute, 435 S. Boyle Ave., phone AN 5-2606.

In operation since Nov. 4, the program will have bilingual counselors go out into the Oriental community to assist Chinese, Japanese, Filipino and Korean families.

The program is designed to help those who are apparently in need of assistance in matters of immigration, medical care, volunteer and social services.

Kokubun, of Japanese descent, is confident his knowledge of the Japanese language will help break the language barrier. He will be supported by a staff consisting of one Chinese and one Japanese counselor, and a secretary who speaks English, Japanese and Korean.

17-Year Ministry The program's new director comes from a background dominated by 17 years in the ministry. Although he delivered sermons at All People's Church, his duties also involved being a family counselor to those who sought his advice.

Much of his work has been done with senior citizens, which explains why Kokubun hopes to expand his new responsibilities to entail offering recreational facilities to seniors.

Kokubun, married and the father of two daughters, resides in South Pasadena where he serves on the South Pasadena Human Relations Council.

SATO REELECTED PARTY PRESIDENT

Washington

When Eisaku Sato was reelected to his third term as President of the Liberal Democratic Party on November 27, continued "good" relations with the United States for the next two years was assured as anything can be in international politics.

By winning his third consecutive two-year term as President of the ruling or government party, Mr. Sato also assured himself of reelection as Japan's Prime Minister, for in that country's parliamentary system the President of the party in power becomes the Prime Minister by election in the Diet.

The victorious candidate stressed the need for continuing friendly relations with the United States in trade and economic matters, while recognizing his nation's continuing necessity to depend upon the United States for security purposes. At the same time, he called for the "early" return of the Ryukyu Islands (Okinawa) to its homeland, as well as the reversion of certain northern islands by the Soviet Union to Japan too. He urged that Japan continue beyond its 1970-termination date the current Treaty of Mutual Cooperation and Security with the United States, though he suggested that it was high time that Japan, as the third major industrial nation on earth, should begin to build up its self-defense forces into a more realistic military establishment and assume a more influential and leadership posture in world politics and diplomacy.

He recalled his personal friendship with President-Elect Richard Nixon, whom he met seven years ago when his older brother Nobusuke Kishi was Japan's Premier and President Dwight Eisenhower was our Chief Executive. Mr. Nixon at that time was the Vice President.

In beating back his strongest challenge since he took office in 1964, when he succeeded the ailing Hayato Ikeda, the 67-year old "protege" of the late Shigeru Yoshida, Japan's Grand Old Man who served as Prime Minister during the Occupation and the early days of post-war sovereignty, garnered 249 votes—21 more than he needed—to retain the presidency of the conservative coalition Liberal Democratic Party.

His nearest rivals at the party convention, at which the election took place, were former Foreign Minister Takeo Miki and former party Secretary-General Shigesaburo Maeo, with 107 and 95 votes, respectively.

The party opposition had hoped to prevent Mr. Sato from securing a majority of the votes cast on the first ballot, thereby forcing him to reach an accommodation with either of the two principal challengers. The party opposition was based primarily on the thesis that Mr. Sato was too closely aligned with the United States and that such an alignment might well cause Japan to become a political and economic satellite of this country, as well as possibly a military base.

While Mr. Sato won about as expected, Mr. Miki's strong showing as the runner-up came as a surprise, since it had been anticipated that he would trail Mr. Maeo, the heir to the late Hayato Ikeda's faction in the ruling party. Now, it is believed that Mr. Miki will become Mr. Sato's principal challenge and the early favorite to succeed the present Prime Minister, perhaps in 1970.

In discussing the Pacific area, Mr. Nixon has placed great stress on the role of Japan, both as the leader of a possible new Asian defense arrangement to contain Communist Chinese power and as a bridge to help open new and friendly contacts with the Chinese mainland.

The President-Elect has indicated his belief that the Soviet Union poses a greater immediate threat to the United States than Communist China. But, he also feels that Japan is the key to the Far East, just as does Lyndon Johnson.

Premier Sato's victory, in the words of a New York Times editorial, "offers virtual assurance that Japan will continue to be led by a man who appreciates Japan's emerging role as a major world power and who can be counted on to exercise that power responsibly, in close cooperation with the United States."

At his first press conference after his reelection, Mr. Sato asserted that he was determined to secure the "complete independence" of Japan, which means the return of Okinawa and the former Japanese territories in the Kurile Islands now occupied by the USSR. He emphasized that the Japanese people should have the spirit to defend their own country with their own hands, but he would not go so far as to say that Japan should arm herself with nuclear weapons to achieve independence.

Recognizing that United States-Japan relations are entering into a new and sensitive era, JACL as its National Convention in San Jose this past August reconstituted its International Relations Committee and directed that it assume an active and constructive role in helping Japanese Americans understand those problems that cause tensions between the land of our ancestry and the country of our citizenship, and to advise the United States Government as to how Americans of Japanese ancestry feel about these same problems.

At the moment, aside from irritating trade issues, the two gravest challenges to continued United States-Japan friendship are the reversion of Okinawa and the continuance beyond 1970 of the Treaty of Mutual Cooperation and Security.

The problem of Okinawa's return to Japan is complicated not only by America's security requirements in the Far East, especially as long as the Viet Nam war continues, but also by Japan's reluctance to permit nuclear weapons on any all-Japanese territory. Then, there is the question of Okinawa's ability to survive and progress economically without vast American aid.

As for the Mutual Cooperation Treaty, it is known that the Communists, the Socialists, the militant students, and others will vigorously protest its continuance beyond 1970, even though its termination may well leave Japan defenseless in a troubled Asia.

JACL's International Relations Committee should soon begin to provide concerned Japanese Americans with information about these great issues, for as 1970 nears more and more Americans are going to ask them about their thinking and suggestions.

Poor Peoples Theater to stage play based on Dr. King's civil rights dream

NEW YORK—First of a series of special programs calling upon the joint efforts of two groups within the Japanese American United Church of Christ to become involved in the greater community will be the presentation of the Poor Peoples Theater tomorrow in a civil rights drama, "Beautiful Dreamer," at the West End Collegiate Church.

The theater is a company of 18 actors, Black, White, Mexican and Chinese, founded by Scott Cunningham and Trish Van Devere, to stimulate awareness of society today by focusing on the economically, politically and socially oppressed minorities.

"Beautiful Dreamer", which has been performed on daytime TV, at various churches, seminaries and Lewisohn Stadium, was premiered at Resurrection City last May 30. It is based on the civil rights struggle of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The Poor Peoples Theater will appear on the NBC Today Show on Dec. 10.

The two church groups are the Women's Fellowship, which is underwriting the performance, and the Business and Professional Club, which is serving a catered dinner prior to the performance. The Rev. S. Alfred Akamatsu is pastor of the church.

The project has scheduled the Rev. Dr. Harry Komuro, former resident of New York, next spring to speak on the status of Japanese American church in America.

Another lecture will feature a Czech professor to give his interpretation of what he feels is a revolution that is sweeping the world.

Flowers-Garden

Tranquility of the new Japanese garden at San Mateo's Central Park had a soothing effect upon a group of leather-jacketed, long-haired teenagers recently, reported park official Alan Hammer, who halted the youngsters who wanted to cycle through the garden. After telling them the garden was open only to foot traffic, they parked their bicycles and ran into the garden like the proverbial bulls in a china shop. But, observed Hammer, halfway they began to slow down and really took in the sights. The leader on exit exclaimed, "Man, that's something to see. You sure oughta be proud of the fact the city has a garden like that."

Press Row

Joseph U. Hamanaka, contributor to the Seattle NYC Newsletter, has joined the Seattle advertising agency of Ricks-Ehrig as production manager. Hokubei Mainichi employee David Eguchi was pulled out of work Nov. 19 by San Francisco police on the charge that his car carried a stolen license plate. He insisted it was his own and a police check with Sacramento Dept. of Motor Vehicles proved the police in error. He was released. "I was never so embarrassed in all my life," Eguchi said upon return. "And they never even said sorry."

Sports

Garnering All-Manner Bay League honors on the lightweight football team were lineman Bob Orava, quarterback Steve Yamamoto, of Salinas High. . . . Elio Uchiyama of John Muir High, Pasadena, was selected "most valuable player" on the varsity water polo team. He also rated on second team of the all-Poor-hill League football selections along with David Toyota. In the Kyushu Grand Simo tournament ending Nov. 24, Hawaiian-born Takamiyama finished with a 4-11 record, which may unrank him from his No. 1 Maegeshira post.

Ron Fujikawa of Long Beach attained the distinction Nov. 23 of being the first Nisei to play in the Big Game for Stanford against California. With 40 seconds remaining and Stanford leading 20-1, the third-string quarterback ran two ground plays before the final gun sounded.

From the Frying Pan

Bill Hosokawa

Denver, Colo.

BROTHER'S RETURN—Back in 1939, Kay Tateishi, a promising young Los Angeles Nisei newspaperman, placed an application with a Japanese scholarship program and was chosen to study in Japan for two years. The understanding was that at the end of that time the sponsors would help the scholars find work in Japan, or if they chose they would be free to go back to the United States.

In the summer of 1941, when relations between the United States and Japan grew more tense by the day, Tateishi and the other students were told they could take the next ship home if they wished. But, said a highly placed Foreign Office official, the chances of war seemed quite remote. The Nisei figured the official knew what he was talking about. He didn't. And so all the Nisei in the scholarship program found themselves caught in Japan by the war.

Some returned to the United States after the war. Kay was among those who stayed in Japan, working first for Time, Inc., and later for the Associated Press. Some weeks ago, Tateishi returned to the United States for the first time since he left 29 years ago, en route to an assignment covering the Olympic Games in Mexico City.

What are one's impressions on seeing one's native land for the first time in 29 years? This is the question we asked Tateishi, and the answers, while not profound, are interesting.

First, as his plane prepared to land, Tateishi was surprised at how brown and dry Southern California appeared from the air. Although he had spent his youth there, he had become accustomed to Japan's green, wooded landscape and forgotten how barren the southland appears in autumn.

Second, Tateishi was amazed by the Los Angeles freeway network. He had read about them, seen them in photographs, but he was unprepared for them. Not frightened; Japanese traffic had hardened him. He was simply amazed.

Third, Tateishi was astonished by the size and strength of the drinks his friends served. Celebrating his return was, no doubt, a big event.

Fourth, he was surprised and delighted by the integration of the Nisei into American life and their obvious affluence. Virtually every night he was in Los Angeles friends took him out to dinner, and each time it was to one of the city's finest places. Tateishi found they were not only accepted but welcomed at these places, a far cry from the way things were when he left for Japan.

REUNION—In Denver, Tateishi enjoyed a warm reunion with sisters Janet Endo and Rose Tanouye, and with another sister Mutsue Ogata who flew out from Seabrook, N.J., for the occasion with their mother. Later, all flew to Los Angeles to visit with brothers Willie and Steve Tateishi. It was the first time all of them had been together since Kay sailed westward across the Pacific in 1939 for what he thought would be two years of study.

The America that Tateishi left was a land of limited opportunity for the Nisei. He had shown a great deal of natural ability as a writer for the Los Angeles English sections, but was life as a Nisei newsman something to look forward to? He was in search of something more challenging, something more promising. The new dues are $9 single and $15 couple, according to Fred Abe, membership chairman.

Governor's Mission

By HENRY KATO
PNWDC Governor

Portland
Some Oregon lumber people were mystified a while back at Gov. Tom McCall's coolness toward proposed new restrictions, now authorized, on log exports to Japan.

One of the reasons for the governor's attitude may have been the impending trade mission to Japan which he is now heading.

Japan is a big buyer of Oregon products. The governor and his party hope to sell even more and to promote Japanese tourism here.

McCall knows that the Japanese are not happy about the log restrictions and that their attitude toward more trade may be affected by them.

ity opposition to the security treaty between the two countries, up for renewal in 1970. The issue may produce a crisis in Japan by that year.

A further problem is the growing demand for the return to Japan of Okinawa, now a U.S. military bastion. Okinawa recently elected a Socialist chief executive, who campaigned on a platform of "immediate and unconditional" return of the island. His Conservative opponent, favored by Japanese Premier Sato, has asked for "eventual return" of Okinawa, along with a reduction of U.S. military facilities.

Gov. McCall is aware of all these strains and the importance of his role as an emissary of both Oregon and the nation. He will make an impression, both by his physical stature and his colorful manner of expression. May his mission contribute to the important task of keeping this alliance healthy.

So far, the mission has encountered no signs the Japanese will retaliate for new U.S. restrictions limiting export of timber from federally owned lands.

San Gabriel Valley installs Dave Ito, urged to be doers

WEST COVINA — The San Gabriel Valley JACL honored incoming president David Ito, veteran Nisei postal employee, and his cabinet officers at an installation dinner Nov. 9 at Starks Restaurant here. Kay Nakagiri, secretary to the National JACL Board, was installing officer.

Past national president Frank Chuman of Los Angeles, in a stirring message, challenged the local chapter to be active in the community and make themselves known as doers.

Councilman Tom Gillum, representing the mayor, extended greetings. Impressed with the program and the organization, he approached the editor of the San Gabriel Valley Daily Tribune to comment on the JACL and the Japanese American Creed (see Nov. 29 PC—guest column) and it appeared in the Nov. 17 Sun-News.

Jeanne Okura, 17-year-old Saisei student at West Covina High, entertained with vocal selections. She spent three months last summer in Austria as an American Friends exchange student.

Nearly 100 attended the chapter's second annual installation. Frank Tanaka was the outgoing president.

Christmas Party

The San Gabriel Valley JACL women, under direction of Mrs. Henry Miyata, will have a Christmas party for children of the community on Saturday, Dec. 14, 7 p.m., at the Japanese Community Center here, 1203 W. Puente Ave.

Adding to the spirit of Christmas, children are expected to bring gifts, toys or food for the less fortunate in the community.

New chapter dues for 1969 revealed

(The National JACL Council at San Jose is raising the membership dues accruing to National from $5 to $8.50 effective 1969. Chapters are urged to write to the So. Calif. JACL Regional Office for membership kits.)

SAN FRANCISCO—The 1969 San Francisco JACL membership drive will commence with the selection of team captains to coordinate the campaign, it was announced by Wes Doi, new chapter president. The new dues are $9 single and $15 couple, according to Fred Abe, membership chairman.

OAKLAND—Oakland JACL has initiated its 1969 membership drive and the new dues schedule is: $9 single, $15 couple.

SEATTLE—To meet its national $6.50 and district 50 cents membership assessments, the Seattle JACL chapter dues for the coming year will be $8.50 single and $15 couple.

Parents booster club to aid Cleveland Jrs.

CLEVELAND—With most of the Cleveland Jr. JACL officers in the lower teenage bracket, it became essential to enlist the active support of parents to serve as chauffeurs, negotiators and advisers this year. Hence, a parents booster club was organized.

The officers are Fred Ikeda, pres.; Tomio Sonoda, v.p.; Helen Ono, sec.; and Alice Nakao, treas.

Japan's minister of agriculture and forestry, "We're not slamming the door in your face. We'll do our best to cooperate with you."

McCall indicated earlier he was unhappy with U.S. diplomacy on the round log export restrictions. A great amount of Oregon's timber is from federally owned lands.

Governor also discussed the imbalance of trade between Oregon and Japan in which Oregon has the favorable position.

RICHMOND—The Contra Costa JACL officers for 1969 will be jointly installed at the Hotel Claremont on Saturday, Jan. 18, it was announced, with Dr. Harry Kitano, well-known Nisei sociologist at U.C.-LA, as the principal speaker. New York JACL sets installation date

NEW YORK—At a dinner meeting held on Nov. 11 at the home of Mary and Murray Sprung, the New York JACL board decided to again meet in midtown Manhattan at Longchamps, 42nd Street and Lexington Avenue Restaurant. The chapter hopes to repeat last year's resounding success. Cost will be $8 per head. Guest Speaker, and further details are to be announced.

Salinas Valley to start scholarship

SALINAS—The Salinas Valley JACL will initiate a chapter scholarship program in 1969 with the award being made at its annual graduation party, according to Harry Shirachi, committee chairman. A scholarship screening committee will secure recommendations and records from local high schools before selecting the winners. The scholarship fund, in the meantime, has been founded with contributions welcome from the membership. A percentage of other donations and a benefit movie project are also sources for the fund.

CASHING OF CHECKS

Be wary of business and payroll checks since many forgers will burglarize a company on Friday night and pass stolen checks before discovery is made Monday.

'INSTANT' PARENTS PROJECT

LOS ANGELES—Progressive Westside JACL members became instant parents on Nov. 18 when they took 36 children to Disneyland in a service project headed by chairman Kenneth Izumi. The L.A. social director gave the Progressives names of children whose parents could not afford to take them to the land of fantasy and each member had to be fully responsible for each child. Louise Watanabe stated that the joy of the children was overwhelming! Jane Takabayashi indicated that taking care of one child took much energy and wondered how some parents can handle four or six children, especially at Disneyland. The children enjoyed the rides but their favorite was "It's a Small World." Hot dogs, Cokes and popcorn were essential to enjoy the land of many laughter. Next Progressive service project is the retarded children's Christmas party on Dec. 8 at Camarillo State Hospital.

Defenition camp -

Continued from Front Page reminds the Japanese Americans in the audience of why they were sent away—there was a "probable" danger of espionage and support of the enemy. These suspects will not have due process of law or trial by jury. Instead, they will be brought before a "Preliminary Hearing Officer" who will determine whether there is "reasonable ground to believe..." There is no requirement that the government prove the suspect is "probably" dangerous. The panelists remind the audience that such a law leaves open wide the possibility of another Evacuation. It did happen once before; it can happen again.

'What Can We Do?'

"Tell us," the audience responds, "Tell us what we can do to help." "We agree with you, and since you have started this thing, lead us." Members of the audience are asked to get out and spread the word about this dangerous law, and to use whatever political influence they can generate to repeal this law.

They pledge their support for the Japanese American campaign, with the conviction that this must not happen again.

Dec. 7 is Contra Costa 'Merry Christmas' day

RICHMOND—Contra Costa JACL's annual Christmas party—potluck supper, caroling and gift-giving—will be held this Saturday, Dec. 7, from 5:30-9 p.m. at the John F. Kennedy High School cafeteria. New Leveskis and Lillian Inouye are co-chairmen of the family party, assisted by: Natsuko Irei, Martha Ninomiya, food; Nellie Sakai, Teru Shibata, gifts; Sakai Brothers, sound; Kunio Shibata, tape recorder.

Placer County elects N. Nimura

LOOMIS—Nobuya Nimura, general contractor here, was elected Placer County JACL president at the election meeting of the chapter board of directors held Nov. 11 at the JACL Office at Penryn. He succeeds Herb Tokutomi of Newcastle. Nimura is among the young leaders of the Placer Buddhist Church. Tom Takahashi was named chairman of the installation dinner to be held in the near future.

Name of Kay Takemoto of Lincoln was inadvertently omitted (Nov. 22 PC) from the list of charter members present for the combined 40th annual and 28th annual goodwill dinner held Nov. 2. A past president, he and the late Tom Yego, first Placer County JACL president, are the only ones in the chapter conferred the JACL sapphire pin.

Los Angeles
I took a weekend trip up to Fresno for the annual Central California District installation-convention meeting. PSWDYC chairman Don Asakawa was nice enough to drive Alan Kumamoto and myself up. As usual, my schedule was crammed with meetings; although all were beneficial.

A Trip to Central Cal

Saturday afternoon, I had an opportunity to meet informally with three of my council members, Norman Ishimoto (EDYC) and Winston Ashizawa (NC-WNDYC) obligingly drove down from San Jose to attend. It was good to see Norman and Winston again. We hadn't been together since the national convention last August. CCDCYC rep. Marian Okamura was also present. The topic of discussion centered around the proposed biennial program and clarification of roles.

That evening, I ate dinner with the adult JACLers and attended their meeting. The basic issue of discussion was civil rights. I was invited to represent the youth's point of view on the matter.

Questions directed toward me expressed confusion along with a genuine effort on the adult's part in trying to understand the reason behind student riots in schools and cities.

A question also arose concerning a college organization called Oriental Concern. The main purpose of the group was to stress awareness of self and the issues confronting the individual in his society. There was a general feeling among the adults that there was no need for Orientals to band together for a common cause. Instead, they felt that it was more important to blend in with society. I pointed out that the youth have a strong urge to re-evaluate themselves and discover their identity. The only way to accomplish the goal would be to confront other Orientals.

All was not business that night. I managed to catch the last two hours of the dance that sponsored by the Reedley Jr. chapter. I enjoyed mixing and meeting the juniors in the district.

Sunday morning began with a short breakfast meeting with Alan Kumamoto, Jerry Enomoto and Mike Suzuki. Next came the DYC workshop on "Why Jr. JACL?" Out-of-town dignitaries such as Russ Oabana, Don Asakawa, John Sugiyama, NC-WNDYC vice chairman, Dennis Imazumi, chair, Steve Kitagawa, San Francisco president and their adviser were on hand to help lead the discussion groups.

The afternoon session was conducted in a control panel-buzz group arrangement. One point of interest concerned racial sensitivity. Most of the Sansei felt no bitterness towards the "fat Jap" issue; their reason being that they had never experienced discrimination. Another significant point was that the Sansei values and ideals were not much different from their Nisei parents.

The installation banquet was most impressive and many important local officials were present. My congratulations to district governor Tokuo Yamamoto, DYC chairman Steve Uyeda, and Jr. chapter presidents Scott Shiraga, Michael Yada, and Tim Kurumaji.

A special commendation goes to Harry Kaku, youth commissioner. He has worked for many years with the youth in Central California and has devoted many hours for their benefit. I know they will miss his guidance and support.

Oriental Concern: Pro and Con

Oriental Concern still incubating, says CSCLA student

By ELLEN ENDO

Los Angeles
All is not sublime these days as far as Oriental Concern is concerned. The collegiate group formed some months ago behind an assortment of goals and ideals, now appears to be having internal problems.

GUEST COLUMN

For one thing, according to Calif. State College student and part-time Rafu Shimpo employee David Kurakane, when the OC core group at State convenes for its weekly meetings, very little is accomplished because there doesn't seem to be a central idea or philosophy to bind the group together.

The "core" unit is that body of about 10 "non-leaders" who are charged with the task of directing Concern activities. They emphasize that they are not the "leaders" of OC and, for some reason, find it distasteful to be labeled as such.

We assume the non-leaders meet regularly to discuss the non-organization's non-plans for the non-future. The meetings, usually held at a member's home, are in the form of group discussions, more or less, with a free exchange of thoughts, ideas and opinions theoretically aimed at coming up with OC's policies and programs.

"The only problem," states Kurakane, who has participated in the discussion meetings on occasion, "is that there is such a diversity of opinion within the group, rarely is any basic philosophy for the organization reached."

He adds that, in his estimation, OC is still in its "incubation stage" and its leaders, or non-leaders, have endeavored to delve into too many different areas at once. For instance, there is the political aspect, which attempts to bring about legislative change, both on campus and in government. Second, there is the psychological aspect, which is designed to bring out the individual in the Oriental youth man or woman, through "sensitivity sessions" and other forms of group therapy.

Also, there is the community service aspect, which attempts to bring the OC membership closer to the community. Finally, there is the social aspect, which hopefully encourages a larger membership.

Taken one at a time, Kurakane states, each of these aspects has merit, but all together they only add to the uncertain atmosphere which already surrounds OC and confuses whatever purpose it might want to achieve.

This air of uncertainty has led observers to jump to various conclusions and some misconceptions regarding the reasons behind the formation of OC. Says Kurakane, "most non-OC members I've talked to immediately assume that it is a militant 'Yellow Power' organization. I don't believe that this assumption is true of OC now, but I DO believe that any tendency toward militancy would be utterly wrong."

The young Cal Stater was referring, in part, to recent suggestions that Concern should affiliate with various campus militant groups, such as SDS (Student for a Democratic Society), BSU (Black Students Union), and UMAS (Mexican-American faction).

"I am very much against forming any coalition of becoming affiliated in any way with these groups," he adds. "If only OC had one concrete theme or goal to unite its membership, then it wouldn't have to look to tie-ups with other, larger groups to become effective, according to Kurakane."

This columnist agrees, and we would like to point out that even BSU, SDS and UMAS have singular goals... they may be negative and unpopular goals to many, but at least the followers of these factions are bound by a common idea.

In conclusion, Kurakane said he sees good possibilities in Oriental Concern because, as he puts it: "The kids are really sharp... intelligent. They have a lot of things on their minds and they have a lot to say."

ORIENTAL CONCERN EMPHASIZES AWARENESS AND PARTICIPATION

LOS ANGELES — "Our primary goal is to make as many Oriental students as possible aware of the issues which face them," said Tom Takenouchi, speaking about Oriental Concern at Cal State (Los Angeles).

The newly-formed Oriental group, which has chapters on most Los Angeles area campuses, is trying to "reverse the trend of alienation and dehumanization within our society," said Mori Nishida, another member of the organization.

According to members, Oriental Concern will align itself with other campus organizations on issues which affect them together.

Oriental Concern holds a Brown Bag meeting each Monday at noon in the CSLA Fine Arts Patio.

The Brown Bag meetings are information disseminating discussion groups. Work projects come out of these meetings, said a member of the group.

"We are establishing dialogue and communication with all campus organizations, the A.S. Board of Directors and the outside community," said Stephanie Lee, another member.

No Officers
Because of the nature of the group, Oriental Concern has no formal set of officers. They have expressed dissatisfaction with the college requirement of having to fill out officer cards to become a recognized campus organization.

Some of the programs which Oriental Concern has either started or plans to start include sensitivity sessions, projects for youth, race relations, a senior citizens program, a newspaper and an Asian-American studies program similar to the minority studies program begun this year in the areas of Afro-American and Mexican-American Studies.

KAREN'S KORNER:

Welcome!

BY KAREN L. SUMIDA
Youth Editor

Welcome to the Jr. JACL Youth Page; our first issue for the biennial.

The Youth Page will serve as a means of communication with the National Youth Council, the District Youth Council, Jr. JACL chapters and fellow youth. Giving the young people the opportunity to share their thoughts and experiences, and informing us on the latest happenings. For all to become better acquainted and to have unity. To have this Youth Page serve as youths' "VOICE."

As Publicity Chairman for National Jr. JACL, these past few weeks have been memorable—memorable in that I won't forget the odd hours that passed as I punched away at the typewriter... writing introductory letters to the National and District Youth Councils, Jr. JACL chapters and various individuals informing each about the youth section and asking for any contributions they may have to be included in the youth section, which will appear bi-weekly in the PC.

Well, the response wasn't as assuring as I had hoped for. With only a few of the many submitting any material for our new issue. So—once again the odd hours passed, trying to compile a variety of articles which would be of interest to the readers. And how can I ever forget the mad rush/near-panic to meet the deadline (which is some discipline...).

This is really some experience for me—not knowing exactly where to begin. So... I started at the beginning!

I hope for the Jr. JACL to have an interesting and informative paper. Only with the full support and co-operation from everyone can the Youth Page be a success.

So! All of you out there in "reader's-ville"—take advantage of the Youth Page. Speak your mind! Let others know who you are! Send in your articles, your ideas, comments, any news or gossip you have or... whatever! The Youth section is there FOR YOU!

One youth feels organizational ability lacking

(Except for the single letter from a reader to Miss Endo's column at left, comments received at the Rafu Shimpo were verbally in agreement. The letter, reprinted in "Open End-O" Nov. 23, follows.)

By writing on the Oriental Concern's problems, I am sure you knew about the Oriental rally held at Griffith Park about 5 or 6 weeks ago.

I am an evening student at LACC, working a full-time job days. Therefore, I do not have a chance to attend OC meetings on campus, if there are any.

I attended the rally at Griffith Park and was told that by turning in my name and address I would be kept informed on the latest happenings. Well, like I said, it's about five weeks since the rally and I have received no information whatsoever. I also gave my phone number to the addresser.

This just goes to show that Oriental Concern is probably not concerned with Orientals at all.

Salt Lake Juniors win IDYC chapter achievement cup

POCATELLO — Using a point system to judge the activities of the chapters this past year, the executive board of the Intermountain District Youth Council awarded its chapter achievement award to the Salt Lake Jr. JACL.

The presentation was made here Nov. 6 during the fourth quarterly session.

Reports of the National Youth Convention were given by various IDYC delegates: Dan Sakota, Rexburg, on the civil rights workshop; Doug Sakota, Rexburg, on the NYC meetings; Terry Yamada, Boise Valley, on the DYC chairman's activities.

Alan Kumamoto, national youth director, reported on the youth manual which was initially distributed at the San Jose convention.

It was also recalled two Intermountain candidates were successful in the San Jose convention competition: Nancy Yamashita of Boise Valley was the first runner-up in the Miss Jr. JACL contest; Wayne Horuchi of Salt Lake, won third-place prize in the oratorical contest.

Karl Endo of Pocatello was designated by Miss Yamada to be the national Jr. JACL membership committee.

Chapters also turned in their money from the sale of felt pens, IDYC fund-raiser this year.

Bob Kawa of Salt Lake was elected IDYC chairman. He and other officers were installed during the banquet by Kumamoto. A dance followed at the Holiday Inn.

The 1969 first quarterly session will be hosted by the Salt Lake Jr. JACL in January.

The Long Beach Nisei Mixed Bowling League, one of the most congenial in Southern California, has been in existence for nearly two decades. This year, in addition to their migration from Red Fox Lanes to Crown Bowl, the league has instigated a unique idea to supplement the excitement of their weekly competition.

THE FOUL LINE
Prior to the onset of league competition, each league member has the opportunity to join the "7-in-a-row" club. If a bowler decides to become a participant in this added event, he is assessed 50 cents per week or $14 for the entire 28-week season. These monies are payable either weekly or in one lump sum and the bowlers' contributions are recorded respectively.

The League, has 44 depositors into this fund. It represents a weekly income of $22. Each week, $9.00 of this income is accumulated into a special prize fund to be paid at the season's end on the sweepstakes night. Already, these bowlers know that they will be shooting for an additional $252 on the final night.

Weekly Payoff
The balance of their weekly income, or $13 each week, is accumulated in a different manner. The league schedule is segmented into quarters and $91 is allotted for every seven week period. This money is won by any bowler of the league who connects 7 consecutive strikes in one game. The exact amount of his winnings is dependent upon the number of weekly accumulations to date.

For example, should a bowler string the required number of strikes on the first night of the league, he would receive $13. Now, let us assume the league has bowled for an additional 6 weeks and finally another bowler accomplishes this feat. This second kegler is entitled to receive $78.

If, however, any 7 week period passes without the 7-in-a-row being shot, the payoff remains at a maximum of $91. To exemplify this situation, let's say that 10 weeks have passed before a bowler gets the required number of consecutive strikes. On this tenth week, if a bowler comes through with the seven bagger, he would be awarded $91. Also, on the same night in the following game, another man gets 7-in-a-row he would receive $39 for his efforts. Mathematically, it is simply (10-7)
