By JERRY ENOMOTO
NAC JACL President

Had a chance recently to get a few words of my chest out by feelings regarding JACL leadership and the proper place of our organization in today's society, particularly in relation to youth and divided communities. The San Francisco JACL gave me the opportunity by inviting me to speak at its installation dinner.

JACL in San Francisco

The crowd was small, but interested, and the presence of several adults prominent in Chapter affairs was indicative of a sincere wish to support and understand the youth. We were able to get a little interesting going, following to participate with a number of youth and adults particularly. Some typical controversial items, which often produce "generation gap," were discussed in a general atmosphere of acceptance and good will.

Unhappily, there has been an absence of constructive dialogue and too much ill will around the controversies surrounding campus troubles. We badly need JACLERS, young and old, who can respect each other's differences of opinion and still move forward together.

Cheryl Yoshimura, columnist of "Sane Society," asked the question of "big questions" of how do we get any where when diverse views cannot be reconciled. The reality of human interaction is that there are times when people just cannot agree. Whether anything positive ever results from such situations depends on the way upon "keeping our cool" and, if necessary, being willing to compromise.

Compromise is not a dirty word. Most advances in human relationships have resulted through a little giving and a little taking. A well known question is that of one "politely" giving up of compromise. To some that makes politics dirty word, to me it does not. More progress can be achieved when all of us are agreed that we are willing to compromise. Self-righteous arrogance that defers any kind of understanding is not the way.

To me it was significant that the JACL President stated that their intention at installation was a "protest" against the Chapter's failure to install them in an earlier installation decision. The Chapter President, in response, acknowledged the truth of this oversight and asked not to recall it. This might be the simple start of a healthy and constructive alliance.

CENTENIAL
The hard working Wokamachi Central group is rapidly getting in gear for the climactic dedication ceremony on June 7 at Columbia. The JACL chapter in the 33 Division in Sacramento, and the follow-up committee of the National Center for the celebration of the first one hundred immigrants from Japan to the United States.

We urge all JACLERS in this area to support our efforts to raise $10,000 for this project. We are far short of our goal yet and time is most on top of us.

It is now quite possible that in a day may be dedicated to the Centennial at El Dorado (California State Fair) this summer. A full program of cultural exhibits with a multi-national audience of thousands, can provide an other exposure for the Centennial. I hope that districts and chapters, particularly those outside of California, will plan some appropriate programs to celebrate the Centennial.

NO GLASS
I was glad to see some of the media in Southern California commenting upon the "navel" treatment given to Thomas Nagasaki, transferred from his job as Los Angeles County Coroner, "Terry" has been in the news for otherwise misbehaving a delicate personnel matter, bring the country administration under justifiable criticism.

Let it be that Dr. Hiroshi Japanese nationality brings his plight closer to us. Remember that the person should be according the treatment he received. I commend upon the fact that racial bias was involved in this, or not, because I don't know. Suffice it to say that the "establishment" in Los Angeles County ought to take a hard look at its present practices, entirely outside the issue of race.

HR commissioner supports Evacuation

SAN JOSE — Memories of Japanese-Americans being evacuated from their homes and camps evoked here by the San Jose Human Relations Commission on Mar. 12. By a 6-1 vote, the commission passed a resolution urging the City Council to urge the Executive Order, Title II of the Internal Security Act of 1950, to prevent a similar catastrophe for black Americans. James Oso, attorney and president of the San Jose branch, argued in favor of the resolution.

"We as an organization do not want it to happen to anybody else," said Oso. "It is fitting that the Japanese Americans lead this fight. We, Americans, should not have any part in it."

Oso cited Mr. 1965, report of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in which the committee chairman Edwin E. Willis (D-La.) stated that the Japanese "essentially defied the law."

He said that the Japanese "essentially defied the law" and that the Japanese "essentially defied the law" and that the Japanese "essentially defied the law."

"We did what we had to do, and we did it with humanity, consideration and respect. Perhaps it was well. For if it was not, it would be better for the United States to have a good citizen of Japanese race than a bad one."

relationships with those of Japanese ancestry

As the Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in the European Theater in World War II, he was also the commander of the American troops committed against the German enemy. In that capacity, he came to know and respect not only the 442nd Central Postal Directory, but also the 442nd Central Postal Directory's Combat Team of Nisei volunteers but also individual Japanese-Americans who served with various outfits in the ITO.

Although we do not recall that General Eisenhower ever contacted the 442nd directly, we do recall that at one time in a press conference he likened the Nisei GIs to the Marines for their esprit d' corps and their combat spirit. We also remember that—as a native Californian—we are aware that the 442nd had rescued the Lost Toes Battalion of Japanese soldiers in northern France just before the Battle of the Bulge.

And, from our personal experiences in Washington, we know that as President of the United States for two terms, he always indicated a concern for the problems of Japanese Americans and insisted that they be given the same consideration as the Japanese as helpful as possible to JACL. We also remember particularly the cooperativeness of his two Cabinet Secretaries—Maxwell Baab and Robert Gray.

In his four messages to National JACL Conventions in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Salt Lake City, and Sacramento, from 1954 to 1960, respectively, President Eisenhower noted the citizenship programs of the organization and called upon members to more actively participate in the civic affairs of the larger community.

In his first message to the 13th Biennial National Convention in 1954, for example, President Eisenhower wrote, in part, "I am told, and am glad to hear that, that even before Japanese nationals could gain American citizenship, your League was instilling in them a sense of responsibility in respect to their rights and obligations such citizenship entails. May this help encourage your members in the coming years to engage actively in the civic affairs of their communities. In this way, they will enjoy the full value of citizenship. Also in this way, they will contribute their share toward strengthening those practices of government in our country which help to keep us free."

Though the moderate conservative Eisenhower may not have intended it that way, his appointment of California Governor Earl Warren as Chief Justice of the United States probably contributed more to the meaningful advancement of civil rights in this country than any Chief Executive before him.

The so-called Warren Court has handed down so many landmark decisions nullifying racial segregation and persecution, extending the rights and opportunities for all Americans, expanding individual prerogatives and privileges, enhancing the value of the franchise and citizenship, etc., that it became the leading advocate for civil rights, liberties, and equality of all three branches of government. The 1954 Supreme Court ruling that the "separate but equal" doctrine was unconstitutional is often cited as the beginning of the current social revolution by removing the legal underpinnings of segregation.

It was in his Administration that the Congress passed in 1957 the first civil rights statute since the post-Civil War Reconstruction Era almost a hundred years earlier. It was a voting rights bill. It was also the one who first sent federal troops (to Little Rock) to enforce the right of Negroes to be admitted to public schools.

It was in his Administration too that the President's Committee on Government Contracts was organized. Under then Vice President Richard Nixon, the first effort on the part of the national government to assure equal employment opportunities in companies that enjoyed federal contracts.

The Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952 became effective in the Eisenhower Administration's first years. And, the liberal interpretations of the Immigration and Naturalization Service were helpful to the Issei who became eligible for naturalization for the first time in United States history and to the Japanese immigrants who were to enter into this country for permanent residence for the first time since the 1924 American Immigration Exclusion Act.

And the Japanese American Evacuation Claims Act of 1948 moved into high gear and the adjudicative phase of the claims program was completed by 1956 of the Eisenhower Administration. Some $7,000 claims for more than thirty million dollars.

Hawaii too finally gained Statehood in the last years of the Eisenhower Administration, a status that he, five-star General long advocated for that deserving Territory. Among the reasons he gave was its Japanese American population, which he remembered from the World War II exploits of the 100th Infantry Battalion and the 442nd Central Postal Directory.

It was in the Eisenhower years too that Japan regained her sovereignty as an independent nation and started on the long road back to that of a Pacific power.

John Foster Dulles, the strong-willed Wall Street lawyer who had been the principal American negotiator of the Japanese Peace Treaty that came into force in April 1953, became the General's first Secretary of State. It was President Eisenhower's good will and cooperative attitude that contributed in large part to the amazing "comeback" of Japan, which today ranks as the third major industrial complex on earth.

It was more than coincidence that Nobusuke Kishi represented Japan at the official funeral rites on March 1, for this older brother of current Prime Minister Kato was himself the Prime Minister of Japan when the Mutual Security and Cooperation Treaty was promulgated in 1960 and student riots forced the cancellation of President Eisenhower's projected trip to Japan.

With the passing of General Eisenhower, another of the giants of World War II has gone on to a greater reward. And, persons of Japanese ancestry, both here in the United States and in Japan, have lost a great and good friend.
