Japan. It seems particularly appropriate that, at a time when many Sansei and others are clamoring for Asian do American ethnic studies, the Japanese Immigration Centennial will be celebrated, recalling not only for those of Japanese origin but also for others the epic history of the Japanese in this country. ware

While some Japanese, including shipwrecked sail-ors, visited the mainland United States more than a century ago, and there are some stories of an earlier settlement in Alameda County, there is little question that the Wakamatsu Colony represented the first sig-nificant effort on the part of Japanese immigrants to establish permanent residence in this nation as their educted land. adopted land.

Unfortunately, the Wakamatsu Colony did not grow adopted land. The small band that comprised the original con-tingent of Japanese immigrants entered the United States through the Port of San Francisco on May 27, 1869, proceeded by riverboat to Sacramento, and then by wagons to Placerville and Gold Hill, where on June 8, a hundred years ago, the short-lived Wakamatsu Colony was established. But, from this ill-fated venture, its few residents and thousands of other immigrants from Japan who subsequently followed their lead and came to these shores pioneered in almost every section of this vasi and growing land and contributed in their own way to the miracle that is the hallmark of the nation. In most places, they met with hostility and hatred, legal bigotry sanctioned in federal, state, and local laws and ordinances. With no background in the cui-ture or the language of this new frontier, they toiled by a racist law, they lived exemplary lives and imbiend their children with loyalty and allegiance to their adopted country. And, in spite of unprecedented injustice and mis treatment in World War II, when they were suspective the United States remained steadfast in their devotion to the country that caused them so much humiliation. Today, most Japanese Americans—we believe—are adopted and travall. Today, most Japanese Americans—we believe—are

We are keenly aware that in some circles nowadays there is a tendency to try to downgrade the general and individual accomplishments of those of Japanese ancestry in this country, that it is popular in certain quarters to suggest that the "success story" of the Japanese in America is a myth conjured up by racists and that what they have achieved and what they enjoy are only at the temporary sufferance of the so-called establishment and white majority. But, the struggle of the Japanese for the past cen-try to overcome the many legal, economic, and social obstacles is not fiction, and their place in American na-society is not one to be ashamed of. A TIME FOR MEMORIES—The warm sun of the B last few days has accelerated the iris. By Memorial Day, which is tomorrow as this is being written, they will be in full bloom in all their magnificent color. The forecast is for continued fair weather, and that will help ease the heaviness that always is a part of visiting the resting places of those who have gone.

In Denver, there will be the usual ceremony at the Nisei War Memorial, erected by public subscrip-tion a few years ago. Its granite tablets stand tall and proud in the midst of the greensward at Fairmount Cemetery. The monument is easily visible from the highway that circles the grounds and sometimes when I'm in the neighborhood I take that route just to see it.

Memorial services have a way of becoming per-functory as the years pass, recollections grow dim and other duties assume a greater importance. Fortunately this has not been the case so far in Denver. The fel-lows at the Cathay Post take Memorial Day very seri-ously. Solemnly and with dignity, they pay tribute to the memory of comrades in arms who gave their lives for nation and honor, and it is a cleansing sort of experience to take part in the ceremonies even if the role is no more than that of spectator.

LIVING MEMORIALS—A few years ago when the dividend to solicit funds for the war sum memorial. I was among those who counseled a living war tribute in addition to a monument of cold stone. The plan living memorial has taken the form of a scholarship to a deserving high school graduate. The sum is not addition to the dividends that accrue on surplus funds which were deposited after the monument was paid for. The provide the presented at a community banquet com scholarship will be presented at a community banquet on June 14 at which other organizations such as the Denver Buddhist Church, Simpson United Methodist Church and the Mile-Hi JACL Chapter also present scholarships

As splendid as those scholarships are, it's reassur-ing to have the stone monuement also. It stands as a tangible, enduring monument to the sacrifice of many fine young men. It serves as a focus for the com-munity's dedication on Memorial Day and is a per-petual reminder that the deaths must not have been in vain.

CONTRAST—I don't know whether any Nisei GIs died on Okinawa, but it is certain that island about midway between Japan proper and Taiwan will be much in the news in coming months. A few weeks ago we reported that Mas Ogawa, Tokyo editor, pasesed through Denver and sounded out local opinion on the issue of whether the U.S. should return administrative control of Okinawa to Japan. Soon afterward, Counsel-lor Shun-ichi Yamanaka of the Japanese Embassy was here to speak about Okinawa. Now this week an Oki-nawan labor leader and an official of the Japan Social-ist Party were here, also to urge that Okinawa revert to Japanese control. to Japanese control.

The gentleman from Okinawa said that a general strike has been schedule for November to underscore Okinawan determination to remove the U.S. presence. Since Tokyo has announced that Prime Minister Sato would be visiting President Nixon to seek the return of Okinawa, we asked the Okinawan gentleman if he was assuming that the Japanese mission was foredoomed.

He did not make a direct reply, but he indicated that whatever the United States was prepared to do would not be enough to satisfy him. So it would seem that regardless of whatever concessions Sato is able to gain from President Nixon, there is going to be a lot of fussing and speech-making and rock-throwing in Tokyo and Naha and elsewhere. That, along with football games on TV, is something we can look for-ward to come fall.

A TIME TO STAND UP AND BE COUNTED

Any American worth his salt—after reading the statement below—should find his calm shattered. That to is the intended effect, though the language in the statement is constrained. It con-cerns the basic principle of fair play, justice and equal hi opportunity. It means no political skulduggery. It means public awareness of one's rights. Right Here and Now

We have been expressing the established fact that if one opens their eyes on the Japanese American community, they will see movement. This movement is currently generated predominately by those "who have come of age". Now "age" here isn't exclusive to have come of age". Now "age" here isn't exclusive to eginas with a social conscience, young adults acting out, a scattering of "elder statesmen", some old and the not-so-old. This new thrust, unbounded by genera-tional or age differences, has joined hands on issues and philosophies.

So discarded are such questions: How do we get started? Where is the problem? and the like. Right here and now, something can happen. Something can not only happen but you can be a part. But how do you find that thing—that something? An investment on your part to look, to read, to get involved, etc. are the mere ingredients.

Your first mission may be trial and error at best. The major emphasis is for some eye-opening. As you embark on your new adventure you will find your self, a twentieth century Rip Van Winkle moved along an accelerated time capsule. Indeed time has not stood still for some. And if your particular community still has no problems, reach out for comparisons. Fact finding is perhaps the most crucial aspect of a fill We can see problems, even distinguish them, but getting to the truth or the real facts may be a more time-consuming task; i.e., students are always in the sews today. Are their cases just; what are the issues; to we believe all the news we see and read?

do we believe all the news we see and read? Then a very personal part of the process enters in, as you and only you, decide (maybe with some prod-ding and pushing by others) what you are going to do. You've seen changes, gotten a few facts and so now what? Are you going to get involved or say, "I'm not a 'dogooder', let me find seclusion, and be left alone. Let me ignore change; things don't involve me. I feel no responsibility." If you find you want to get active, then the deci-sion-making begins anew as you seek ways of doing what you feel are important to do, individually or col-lectively. There are things you can do by yourself as what you feel are important to do, individually of col-lectively. There are things you can do by yourself as an individual freely and unrestrained. Yet you may want the security or comfort of "doing your thing" with others. These others may join in coalitions with various groups and you may find yourself with a move-ment of people.

Of course, in our books it's not so important wheth-er you work alone or with others. We do hope that you do get involved, participating, and seeking that better tomorrow for all of us. In this endeavor it may be your particular effort that introduces a new way, a new direction, right here and now.

14-So far as possible, committee programs should be the product of careful planning on the bases of ascertained facts rather than an expression of guess work, hunches or mere trial and error.
15-The fullest possible use should be made of existing with rights or human relations resources before creating new resources. It is often necessary to establish a new service, a new program or a new committee or organization but to burden of proof is upon such a propose.
16-A committee project or program should be such a size as to be an efficient and economical project, program, operation. So far as possible, the committee should be containty viewed builted to an area in which it can give effective service.

They should seek to achieve effective, efficient and economical composition of civil rights or human relations resources, meeting social needs as fully and effectively as possible and eliminating duplication of programs or service.

Possible and eliminating duplication of programs or services. 20—The civil rights or human relations services of an area should be distributed among the whole population of the area in proportion to their needs. Special care should be taken to see that facilities and services are made available to members of minority, racial, nationality or other groups and to neighborhoods and communities with special problems in proportion to their needs. 21—Both governmental and voluntary civil rights and human relations groups are needed in the field of civil rights and human relations. Governmental agencies should normally provide civil rights or human relations services which have a scoepted by the public as a whole, those which involve permanent or long time care, extensive programs or large financial outlay, and those which involve the use of authority or compulsion. Voluntary civil rights or human relations groups should provide such services which seek to "bridge the gap between need and statutory provision for need," which are accepted or understood by only limited groups within the community, which serve special sectarian.

In any organization, there is a demand that some proce-dure be followed in order to conduct its affairs efficiently. Therefore, I would suggest that each JACL Civil Rights or Human Relations Committee start immediately by using parliamentary procedure in all of its meetings. The use of parliamentary procedure means that you will use a system of rules designed to help you conduct a business meeting in an orderly manner.

of mile designed to help you conduct a business meeting in an orderly manner. The purpose of parliamentary procedure is to protect the fights of the majority as well as the rights of the minority. Thus, it is suggested that each Civil Rights or Human Relations Committee chairman secure a copy of the 'Rob-ert's Rules of Order'' or some condensed version that will outline the basic steps in parliamentary procedure. Each Civil Rights or Human Relations Committee should have at least a chairman and a secretary. The primary responsibilities of the chairman are to: (1) designate the periodic dates of the meeting, (2) begin and foises the meeting on time, (3) conduct the meeting expedi-tiously, (4) provide for the presentation of problems, the discussion of problems, and the possible solution of prob-lems, and (5) designate projects or programs with definite goals and deadlines.

goals and deadlines. Any chairman knows the importance of a good secre-tary. She should (1) report accurately and rapidly the con-duct of the meeting, (2) have a list of all the members, their addresses and telephone numbers, (3) see to it that each committee member and ex-official member receives a copy of the minutes in a timely manner so that assign-ments will be carried out without confusion or delay, and (4) help the chairman prepare agendas for the coming meet-ing and carry on necessary correspondence.

2. There should be an appropriate selection of members.
a. Number—there should be adequate committee members to do the work but not too large to make it unwieldy.
b. The members should be reasonably well-equipped for the work of the committee in terms of education and experience, knowledge, skill and other qualifications or the necessary level of competence through reading, studying, observation, faithful attendance, and service on the committee itself.
c. The members of the committee should be interested

5—The committee should have its roots in the community.

5—The committee should have its roots in the community.
6—Every committee should be based upon the understanding and moval or financial support of a substantial body of the organization.
7—So far as possible, every committee program should enlist active and vital citizen participation and leadership.
"Self help" by citizens or other groups should be encouraged and fostered.
8—Fundamentally, the role of the committee chairman is to provide professional skill, assistance, and creative leadership in enabling citizen groups and organizations to achieve civil rights or human relations objectives.
9—Voluntary cooperation is a key to effective community organization.
10—The spirit of cooperation rather than competition and the practice of coordination of efforts should characterized by coordinated and sustained programs attacking major problems rather than by a series of separate and unrelated efforts.

efforts. 12-Invoking the application of auhority or compulsion will sometime be necessary in implementing programs, but it should be used as little as possible, for as short a time as possible, and only as the last resort. When compulsion must be applied it should be followed as soon as possible by resumption of the cooperative process. 13-Committee programs should be based upon and re-sponsive to needs. Such programs should be initiated, de-veloped, modified and terminated on the bases of the availability of other comparable services. When the need for a service is passed the program should be modified or and numan relations services anound the ample as part-ticable. 24---If the civil rights or human relations service can be equally well administered by the agency on a lower or higher geographical level, local administration or admini-stration on the lower level is to be preferred because it is closer to the people who will receive the service. In the case of most locally administered civil rights or human relations services there should be statewide leadership and supervision united with local administration. 25--The federative principle is widely applicable in civil rights and human relations organizations. Federation means united effort for doing those ethings that can best be done together. Federation implies a large degree of individual autonomy with voluntary joint efforts in relation to com-mon concern.

Aloha from Hawaii by Richard Gima

A Special Point The bowling banquet at the Disneyland Hotel climaxed this 17th annual JACL Bowl-ing Classic and before the evening was over, I made a special point to convey my best wishes to Sock and to offer my hopes for a pleasant return trip. He reciprocated by congratulating me on my bowling and by wishing me the best of luck during the following year. Again I ex-perienced a tremendous feel-ing of sincerity and honesty. I don't know if it was the tone of his voice or the ex-pression on his face, but I sensed that he really meant what he had said.

Zen Center A Zeo training center, which would help those who have dropped out of the main-stream of society, soon may be opened on Maul. Robert B. Atken, a Kapiolani Commu-nity College teacher, appeared before the Maul County Board of Adjustment and Appeals May Ia and detailed his plans. Atken, who first became in-ferested in Zen while Interned in Japan during WW II said, buly and would bring with huly and would bring with im a Japanese Zen teacher tor Honolulu.

1969 QUALIFYING AND LIFE MEMBER

Million Dollar Round Table

OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LIFE UNDERWRITERS

For the 12th consecutive year, our representative has received this high national recognition. It is accorded those members of the life insurance profession who produce over one million dollars in new sales during a calendar year. Mr. Yamashiro is the only Nisel in the continental United States to have been accorded this high industry honor for so many consecutive years. We congratulate him upon this outstanding achievement.
