National JACL President

It is nice to see the way that the redevelopment of "Little Tokyo" in Los Angeles is coming along. Although still on the drawing boards, the attitudes and actions of interested community people would appear to auger well for the project's future.

A very well attended and impressive annual dinner of the Little Tokyo Community

Redevelopment

Development Advisory Committee, at the Biltmore Hotel, gave me this current impression. Previously I had some idea of the undertaking from its principal staff man, Kango Kunitzuka. National JACL has some stake in this plan because we have expressed an official interest in possibly occupying a part of the area, as a future home for Headquarters.

Mr. Toshikazu Terasawa, an architect, and member of the Advisory Committee, gave a very enlightening, and perhaps even inspiring, talk about the Project, and the hopes that it reflects. The picture of Issei, Nisei and Sansei working together in a common cause, for community betterment, is most encouraging in these troubled times. JACL extends its heartfelt wishes for the early and successful culmination of this important project.

PACIFIC SOUTHWEST

I found the quarterly meeting of the PSWDC not without its stimulating and controversial moments. Leaving it to others to report the proceedings, I will share with you some of my observations. One of the chronic beefs being presented, for which insufficient groundwork has been laid, despite my already expressed view of the responsibility of delegates to make decisions without being specifically instructed by the chapters, I do feel that the complaint is understandable.

To the extent that an issue leads itself to the preparation of a written resolution and its duplication and mailing to chapters a couple of weeks earlier, this should be done. However, there should also be an effort to understand that the issues of today often don't permit such preparation, and that perhaps some credit is due concerned JACLers who raise controversial subjects, as matters of conscience, despite their "risk" or unpopularity.

Hardly profound is the observation that the greater the emotional content and stormy background, the greater the flak and turning-off occurs on an issue. As a veteran of many such experiences in JACL, I also know how tough it is to get people to serve on committees who will work. When we get a working committee to receive its report, it seems to me that the report stands on its merits, as the considered recommendation of that committee. It should not be called a "one-sided report," nor should emotional words like "railroad" be used. Any committee can be abolished and a new one created. Of course the report of that committee is bound to be "one-sided" and so on to infinity.

ACLU

I had the privilege of representing JACL as one of several speakers offering brief testimonial to the tremendous service rendered by Abraham Lincoln Wirgin, the dynamic counsel of the Southern California American Civil Liberties Union. A spirited crowd gathered at the International Hotel to demonstrate their affection and respect for the man and the organization. The program was moved along by Steve Allen, long an advocate of civil liberties.

It met George Ozawa, Vice President for Operations of the South Bay Chapter of ACLU, who was glad to see the visible turnout of JACLers. He commented that it would be well for JACL and ACLU to be more together, and in dialogue, than seems to be the case, on an ongoing basis.

It seems to me that an outfit like ACLU puts one to the test of how much you believe in America. It does so by insisting that the full measure of the Bill of Rights must be accorded every American, no matter how distasteful his or her views may be. Melodramatic though it sounds, the saying that goes like, "I may not agree with what you say but I will defend your right to say it with my life," would appear to be a living testimonial to the ACLU, and men like A. L. Wirgin.

Human Values on Rise

Just by being alive, you're worth a lot more now than you used to be. Because we have a better appreciation of human values? Don't be silly—you're just a living example of inflation. Thirty years ago, says Dr. Donald T. Forman of Northwestern University Medical School, the chemicals in your body were worth about 98 cents. Today, you're worth about $3.50!

OAKLAND MUSEUM TO PREMIERE
PHOTOS ON JAPANESE EVACUATION

OAKLAND—A photographic record of the 1942 Evacuation and life in the wartime relocation centers will be placed on exhibit late this fall or early next year at the Oakland Museum.

The exhibit is being compiled by Richard Conrat, Oakland artist and professional photographer who started his research of evacuation period photographs two years ago after being granted an $8,000 Guggenheim Foundation fellowship to undertake this work.

In compiling photographs, Conrat visited the National Archives for official War Relocation Authority and army photographs and the Library of Congress in Washington, Associated Press and United Press International picture libraries in New York, JACL Headquarters in San Francisco, the Los Angeles Times and Toyo Miyatake, noted Southern land photographer, to locate suitable photographs.

Conrat said his interest in this subject grew out of his association with Dorothea Lange from 1963 until her death in 1965. Miss Lange served as a WRA photographer.

To Show 100 Pictures

Some 100 pictures will be shown in the Oakland Museum exhibit which will probably be shown in the new museum's history department Memorial exhibition room, Conrat revealed.

The target date for the exhibit at present is Nov. 15, Conrat added, but arrangements are still under study as the official decision to exhibit this show was only made May 14 by the Oakland Museum's advisory commission.

Approval of the exhibit portraying the ordeal of the Japanese-Americans wartime internment camps was given by the commission after almost one hour of debate.

Conrat had received help from the Oakland Museum in his research on the promise that the local museum would be permitted to hold the premiere showing of the completed project.

However, when the exhibit was presented to the advisory commission as a future display, the commissioners turned down the offer.

Commissioner William Bowser, who as an attorney had handled many Evacuation claims cases more than a dozen years ago, felt that the exhibit "had a negative approach" and many Japanese Americans would resent such an exhibit.

Cites 'Bitterness'

One of the new commissioners, George Kondo, agreed with him at the time, after pointing out that he had been involved in the Evacuation and expressing opposition to the exhibit because "it shows bitterness."

Kondo said he thought the Evacuation and events leading up to it should be taught thoroughly in schools, but he was opposed to reopening the subject in a public display.

These views were reviewed at the opening of the discussion of May 14, but this time those supporting Conrat were prepared to back him up.

Backed by Oakland JACL

Expressing their strong endorsement for the exhibit from the Oakland JACL were Mrs. Mary Anna Takagi, chapter president, and Mrs. Yave Maru, who presented a statement from the chapter calling for approval of the exhibit.

Broker Ken Matsumoto, a member of the old museum advisory commission, conceded that there may be a certain amount of opposition for such a display, but declared that the Oakland Museum would gain in stature and respect if it scheduled Conrat's exhibit.

Two members of the museum staff, Hubert Dafoe of the natural sciences division and I. Thomas Frye of the history division, both came to the support of Conrat.

Frye said "it would be a great mistake" not to show the exhibit. Dafoe said that just because it might "cause some uneasiness in city hall" was no reason not to show it.

As a result of the strong support for Conrat, the commission changed its original decision by voting unanimously to approve a resolution for the exhibit introduced by Commissioner Bowser.

4 MEN NAMED RECIPIENTS OF 1970
JACL-JAPAN AIR LINE FELLOWSHIPS

SAN FRANCISCO — For the first time since the program was started in 1967, the four recipients of the JACL-Japan Air Lines summer fellowship this year are male. They are:

Howard S. Henjiyo, 25, of Portland, medical student at Univ. of Oregon (Portland JACL).

Wayne Maeda, 23, of Sacramento; graduate student in Asian American history, Sacramento State College (Sacramento JACL).

George H. Takei, 33, of Los Angeles; actor (Whittier JACL).

Booker T. Washington, Community Center; Yukio Kumanoto, executive secretary, Japanese Chamber of Commerce of Northern California; Zenichi Motomura, deputy consul general of Japan; Yone Satoda, national JACL treasurer; Tomochi Tsuzi, district manager, Japan Air Lines.

Medical Extern

Henjiyo, who wrestled on the Harvard varsity during his undergraduate years, is now a medical extern at the Multnomah County juvenile detention home. He hopes to learn in Japan the methods by which concepts of Buddhism and Bushido are taught children, which may provide meaningful guidelines in the American home.

Son of a Buddhist minister, Henjiyo describes Buddhist concepts as "sense of calm trust in fate, a quiet submission to the inevitable, that stoic composure in sight of danger or calamity, that disdain of life and friendliness with death," quoting from Nichiren's "Bushido." The concepts of Bushido, according to the young medical student, include "courage — spirit of daring and bearing; politeness — outward manifestation of a sympathetic regard for the feelings of others; benevolence; honor; self-control; rectitude and justice; veracity and sincerity."

Asian Studies

Maeda, who is preparing an ethnic studies curriculum for the fall at Sacramento State, hopes to study, not only the Japanese language, but the cultural heritage of the Issei as developed during the Tokugawa and Meiji eras.

In studying the cultural history, one cannot only understand the ways of the Issei but also learn to understand what values drew the Issei to succeed in America," he explained.

ing with the Educational Opportunity Program and intends to teach.

A professional actor for the past decade, Takei has been involved in the communications media within the community. Of his forthcoming studies in Japan, theater arts and architecture hold prime interest.

"What particularly intrigues me," Takei added, "is the degree of creativity one senses in contemporary Japanese theater and motion pictures. Here we see a wealth of experimentation and pioneering that is in many years leading the world."

In architecture, Japan has a long and impressive history and a future that promises significant contributions," Takei said.

Son of the Takekuma Takeis, he holds both B.A. and M.A. degrees from UCLA and a certificate from the Shakespeare Institute in England, is a volunteer teacher for the Inner City Cultural Center and cultural committee chairman for the Pacific Southwest JACL District Council.

Cultural Promotion

Yasui, in March 1942, initiated the first test case contesting the validity of military orders affecting Japanese Americans. Active in JACL since his youth in Oregon, he served as JACL regional director in JDLN, selected Nisei of the Biennium in 1952, Mountain-Plains district governor, helped organize student groups, set up scholarship programs and assisted the Issei History Project in the area.

As director of the Denver Commission on Community Relations, he hopes to promote an accurate knowledge of the Japanese and Japan as a result of his fellowship. He is also consultant on Asian American studies for the Denver public schools, and involved with Sister City programs.

He graduated from Oregon Law School in 1939, a member of the Phi Beta Kappa and a host of other civic groups including the ACLU, Urban League, Boy Scouts of America, Red Cross, and more recently appointed chairman of the Denver Opportunity, Inc., the war-on-poverty program dispensing some $10 million annually.

Title II hearings expected to conclude by next week

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)

WASHINGTON — House Internal Security Committee sources expressed hope to the Washington Office of the Japanese American Citizens League that the Nixon Administration, through its Department of Justice, would testify concerning its recommendations on legislation to repeal Title II of the Internal Security Act of 1950 early in June, possibly by the week-end of the fifth.

Since the Deputy Attorney General has already written the Committee that the Department recommends repeal of the so-called emergency detention provisions, it is not anticipated by either the Committee staff or the JACL that the Administration has changed its official position.

At the same time, however, since the Justice Department has approved enactment of the so-called preventive detention and "no knock" crime control bill for the District of Columbia, the Committee plans to ask questions concerning the consistency of its positions.

In any event, last week (May 21) HISC heard two more witnesses as the Committee reached its final stages of its public hearings phase. Following the government's testimony, the Committee is expected to decide at executive sessions whether to proceed on the repeal legislation, and if so how.

The two witnesses were Professor Joseph Bishop of Yale University Law School and Lawrence Speiser, Director of the Washington Office of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Yale Professor's View

Professor Bishop argued that Title II was constitutional, in that the state had the right, and the duty, to protect and defend itself from destruction. He declared that the Supreme Court in a number of cases had held that preventive detention was lawful, and the President and the Congress should act together in times of national emergency that threatens the continued existence of the country in times of war, invasion, or insurrection. He said that such screening procedures as provided in Title II protected the individual rights of citizens.

He added, however, that he favored an amendment providing free counsel to the poor during the administrative hearings and the court appeal, which are set forth in the statute.

He said that he agreed with Professor Rosen and other constitutional authorities that, even if the Congress repealed Title II, the President under his war powers could act as the Commander-in-Chief. He thought that Title II, or similar legislation, would be a limitation on the executive's power by requiring him to use the procedures provided by the statute.

In response to Chairman Richard Ichord's question as to whether the Congress could preempt the President's war powers, Professor Bishop replied: "I'll give you a short answer to that. I don't know."

NISEI MEMORIAL DAY

rites SCHEDULED

SAN FRANCISCO — Chief Warrant Officer Melvin C. Amerman, U.S. Army, will address the annual Nisei Memorial Day Service May 30 at Golden Gate National Cemetery, Section R (northeast area), starting at 10 a.m.

Program is co-sponsored by the Golden Gate Nisei VFW Post, MIS Veterans, San Francisco JACL and NC-WNDC JACL.

Mr. Amerman has served in the Marine Corps and Air Force as enlisted personnel for 12 years until his appointment in 1967 as personnel officer in the Army. He served in the Pacific theater, Greenland, Germany, Vietnam and is now at Presidio of San Francisco, Hq. 6th Army.

Rev. Mayeda making 25th annual trek for Memorial Day rites at Manzanar

GARDENA — The annual pilgrimage to the former war relocation campsite at Manzanar will again be led by the Rev. Sentoku Mayeda of Gardena Buddhist Church. Memorial Day services will be conducted at the cemetery there on May 31 at noon.

Both Buddhist and Christian ceremonies will be conducted in front of the cenotaph for some 250 persons who died at Manzanar.

Reverend Mayeda said he will be joined in this year's

Under further questioning, the witness conceded that the repeal of Title II would have the country "right where we were, when the Japanese Americans were ordered evacuated and detained, with no procedural safeguards at all."

ACLU's View

Lawrence Speiser, who grew up on the West Coast and graduated from the University of California Law School, declared that the ACLU "believes that this Act is unconstitutional on its face, should never have been passed, and is long overdue for repeal."

The ACLU Washington Office Director said that "Title II gives virtually unlimited powers to the executive branch of this government to round up dissidents and to place them in concentration camps for unlimited periods of time—all without any due process and in the absence of any meaningful judicial review."

The one-time Californian declared:

"The constitutionality, or lack of it, of this Act has never been tested in court. Perhaps, we should be thankful that no one has ever tried to implement it, making a court test necessary. An unfortunate corollary is, however, that the Act remains on the books—untested but a threat to many."

Supporters of Title II rely on Hirabayashi and Korematsu cases as justification for the constitutionality of Title II. They could not be more wrong.

First, their reading of these cases does not support their assertion. Whatever these cases may have said about the increased powers of government in time of war to order curfews and evacuation of citizens, they do not sanction the detention of a citizen of Japanese ancestry conceded to be loyal.

But much more importantly, the placement of these citizens in concentration camps is one of the most shameful events in our history. The Hirabayashi and Korematsu cases, which surrendered to the twin pressures of wartime practices and racism to give judicial approval to aspects of this terrible injustice, represents a low mark in the history of our courts. Decent men everywhere have recognized that this tragic mistake must never be made again. And yet this Act is a tariff.

JACL remembers

Nisei war dead

at Arlington

WASHINGTON — Members of the Washington D.C. Chapter will gather in Arlington National Cemetery at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, May 31, to pay tribute to all of the Nisei war dead of World War II. Korean and Vietnam Wars, it was announced by Ira Shimazaki.

The services will take place at the grave of Pfc Roy T. Morihara, a member of the 442 RCT, Harry Takagi, a 442 veteran, will officiate. The principal speaker will be Lt. Col. George S. Kent who served with the Headquarters Battery of the 522 Field Artillery, a unit of the 442 Combat Team.

After the services, groups will place a floral wreath at each of the 25 Nisei graves in Arlington National Cemetery.

On Memorial Day, May 30, Chapter Chairman Toro Hirose, also a 442 veteran, will place the JACL wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns. It might be noted that the JACL is the only non-veteran organization participating in these services and have continued to participate each year over the past 23 years.

Rose Hills site of two May 30 rites

WHITTIER — Members of the Japanese American community will gather again at Rose Hills Memorial Park here on Memorial Day to conduct two special programs in the Japanese Garden area.

The East Los Angeles Nisei Memorial VFW Post 9902, and the Los Angeles Buddhist Federation, will be conducting two of the four Memorial Day services at Rose Hill.

The Samsel who went last Christmas-New Year break to cleanup the cemetery are being urged to join the trek.

ing reminder of the willingness of some to compound our errors of World War II by just this repetition. The Act is unconstitutional on its face. It violates the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly, freedom of association, and the right of citizens to petition their government for redress of grievances, all of which are guaranteed by the First Amendment.

Its overboard sweep inhibits and deters the exercise of these rights. The dragnet sweep of its provisions creates a chilling effect upon the exercise of them.

The Act violates the Fifth Amendment by authorizing deprivation of liberty not for commission of a crime, but only on suspicion that one probably will engage in criminal conduct.

Further it authorizes imprisonment solely because of membership in a political party or other association. In permitting imprisonment as the result of a legislative act, it violates the Constitution's little-invoked prohibition against bills of attainder. Lastly, the Act imposes cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment by providing for indefinite detention without restriction of time, although no crime has been committed.

As so often seems to be the case with legislation aimed at eroding substantive constitutional rights, this Act purports to enact procedural guarantees to protect individuals brought within its sweep. However these procedure "guarantees" are unconstitutional defects that cannot be cured, moreover, do not compensate for the basic infringement of the substantive constitutional rights outlined above.

ADL's Stand Told

Following the public hearing last week, the Washington JACL Office disclosed that among the latest national organizations to write HISC urging repeal of Title II is the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Its Washington Director, David Brody, recently wrote Chairman Ichord that this influential Jewish civil rights organization favored repeal aside from its historical and civil rights implications for the reason advanced by the Department of Justice, that "the repeal of this legislation will allay the fears and suspicions—unfounded as they may be—of many of our citizens."

The benefit outweighs any potential advantage which the Act may provide in a time of internal security emergency.

At the same time, the Washington JACL Office also disclosed its continuing official opposition to the preventive detention and "no knock" provisions of the District of Columbia Crime Act, which is currently in Conference to reconcile differences in the versions passed by the House and the Senate recently.

"Preventive detention," no matter what the reasons, based upon mere suspicion of what a person might do, is particularly repugnant to those of Japanese ancestry because it is identical to what Title II of the 1950 Internal Security Act authorizes under certain other circumstances, and is the subject of JACL's major congressional effort at this time. The "no-knock" provision is equally obnoxious because it too is based upon mere suspicion and denies due process to the accused in that it authorizes officers to enter a home without search warrants or other clearances based upon the probability that certain illegal matters may be hidden or retained therein.

7 WEEKS 'TIL

Capital Comments

Perhaps the most important news in the nation's capital this past week was Speaker of the House John McCormack's rather dramatic announcement that he would not seek re-election this November to the Boston, Mass., seat he has held since 1927. The 78-year-old Irishman, who may well be the last of his "breed" as a New England politician, was expected to seek re-election to his 22nd consecutive House term this fall and also to seek re-election as the Speaker, if the Democrats retained control next session, to vindicate himself after charges were made earlier this year that a top assistant for many years had misused the Speaker's Office for personal profit.

While the Speaker in the past few years has come under attack for his alleged lack of leadership from the younger and more liberal elements of the Democrats in the House, as far as Japanese Americans and JACL are concerned he has been a consistent and cooperative supporter of legislative objectives.

Particularly when he was the Majority Leader, under Speaker Sam Rayburn, in the years immediately after World War II, he helped provide the needed votes for many of JACL's corrective and remedial bills. A liberal of the old school, he was a champion of the New Deal, a patriot in the old tradition, and a strong believer in the party system of discipline in the Congress, as well as its seniority prerogatives.

At the moment, it appears that the next Speaker, if the Democrats continue to control the House, will be Oklahoma's Carl Albert, a 62-year-old Democrat who is currently the Majority Leader of the House. Considered a moderate on most counts and a Congressman in the McCormack mold, he has been particularly friendly and sympathetic to most JACL aims. A Rhodes scholar, at Oxford, the diminutive Oklahoma served briefly in Japan during the Occupation. A personal friend of the Masaokas since he first came to Congress in 1947, he has generally supported with great political courage as a border state Congressman civil rights and other humanitarian legislation that have been the hallmark of recent Congresses. Recent National JACL Presidents who visited Washington found Albert to be a most engaging personality.

Last week, the preliminary skirmishing on the Cooper-Church amendment to provide certain military funds that would, in effect, withdraw appropriations for the Cambodian incursion adventure of President Nixon after June 30 began, with the Nixon Administration and the Republican leaders attempting to rally enough support to defeat the proposition, which is backed by Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, who is also the Chairman of the Far East Subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee, and George Aiken of Vermont, the senior Republican and ranking minority member of the same committee, among close to a majority of the Senators at this time.

Advocated by Republican John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and Democrat Frank Church of Idaho, both members of the Foreign Relations Committee, the amendment is proving so popular with most of the lawmakers that the Republican leadership is trying to work out an acceptable compromise—acceptable to both the doves and the hawks.

We personally—since the JACL cannot under present restrictions—hope that the Cooper-Church amendment will not be compromised to the point that it will not effectively emphasize to the President senatorial prerogatives in the field of foreign relations but also make clear to the Commander-in-Chief and the military that they must live up to their pledge to withdraw all American troops from neutral Cambodia by the end of June.

Following the traditional Memorial Day recess, the House is expected to take up the Senate-passed voting rights bill that would provide the national franchise to 18-year-olds. The President, who claims to favor the lowering of the voting age to 18, has suggested that this matter should be referred to the people by means of a constitutional amendment. The Senate, which added this 18-year-old authorization to a bill that would extend the Voting Rights Act of 1965 for another five-year period, is said to be faced with a filibuster against this bill if the House does not accept its 18-year-old voting amendment.

Along with the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the JACL is among those urging all House members to vote for the bill as passed by the Senate. JACL, and the others, not only believe that the extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Law is that important to continue the liberalized registration and voting of more and more of the formerly disenfranchised especially in the Deep South, but also that the present generation of young people are so much better able to vote intelligently than many in the older generations that they are entitled to vote for lawmakers who will mold the future that they will inherit and have to live through.

JACL concedes that this younger generation is generally more mature, better educated, and more aware of the social, economic, political, and other needs of the country than most of the older generations. Moreover, many are serving in the armed services and in other government activities, including the civil service, that would seem to entitle them to vote on the proposed programs of this day and of the near future.

Last week, too, the House Ways and Means Committee continued its public hearings on trade legislation. And, since Japan is the major overseas customer and supplier of the United States, it seemed to many that it was the principal focal point of congressional attention and public testimony.

Japan enjoys a favorable trade balance of almost a billion and a half dollars over the United States, exports many products that compete with American manufactures, and imports more in the way of American agricultural goods than any other foreign country. So, it would be natural that Japanese success would result in some demands that Japanese merchandise be placed under restrictions, including strict and arbitrary exports or import quotas.

Nevertheless, to some who have been auditing trade hearings for decades there seems to be a bitterness against Japanese imports that never existed before, that is since the end of World War II. In fact some detected racial overtones to some of the criticism of Japanese trading policies and practices.

We are hopeful that these sensitivities are not indications of what may come in the immediate future, when there is no doubt that trade and economic relations between Japan and the United States may become more and more troublesome. What we are hopeful of is that Japan will be considered and treated in the same way and manner as all of the other allies and trading partners of the United States.

OVER 500 ATTEND YOUTH-SPONSOR TEACH-IN ON WAR

Organized by JACL
Field Directors
at San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO—Over 500 persons attended the community meeting May 15 at the San Francisco Buddhist Hall arranged by Bay Area young college students and the five-man team of JACL field directors, special project, to express their concern over the developments in Cambodia.

First announced as a "teach-in" and later referred to as "reaching out," the program, including the majority of the speakers, the film and slides shown, could more aptly be described by the original title.

Though the sponsors had hoped to "reach out" to those of their parents' age, much of the program was geared for the young people.

And apparently the 30-and-over Nisei are not too interested in this type of community meeting as only 75 of them were present.

2 Veterans Speak

Many young people from the East Bay cities and the Peninsula area down to San Jose joined the local college students to make up most of the near capacity crowd.

Effective because of their sincerity were talks by two young veterans back from Vietnam, Ted Imura and Michael Sugawara.

Arn Kawano, a Chinatown and Manilatown anti-draft counselor, and Floyd Huen, U.C. Berkeley Asian Studies instructor, opened the evening and Rev. Roy Sano, Mills College chaplain, closed the program with talks which labeled the fighting in Vietnam as primarily a racist war against Asians.

No Resolutions Offered

As announced earlier in the week by JACL field director Glenn Watanabe, chairman for the program, no attempt was made to reach any conclusions or pass any resolutions at the meeting.

The young people had said this session was purely informational, Watanabe pointed out, but for those who want-

Fong backs Nixon decision to clear enemy sanctuaries

WASHINGTON—Sen. Hiram L. Fong, (R-Hawaii) lashed out May 20 at the so-called Cooper-Church amendment, contending its adoption would endanger the lives of more than 400,000 American troops in South Vietnam.

"I am as concerned as any other Member of (the Senate) about the risks involved in the President's decision to clear out the enemy sanctuaries in Cambodia," Fong declared, "but (we) . . . should take no action that would jeopardize our forces under fire."

Fong repeatedly pointed to President Nixon's promise to withdraw all U.S. forces from Cambodia by July 1 and said he would "not be a party to undermining the credibility of the President before (he) has had an opportunity to fulfill his pledge to the American people."

"By adhering to his announced schedule, the President will not only be keeping faith with the American people and the United States Congress, but he will also be establishing his credibility with the entire world, including the enemy," Fong said.

In one of his most passionate addresses during 11 years in the Senate, Fong declared in an hour-long speech: "I hate war. Hawaii is the only State that was attacked in World War II. I served in that war . . . my eldest son has already served in Vietnam. He could be called back again. I have two younger sons who could be called to duty to serve in Vietnam."

But he added: "As long as (our American men) are under orders to serve in Vietnam, I do not propose to endanger their lives by any proposal such as the Cooper-Church amendment."

"The Senate of the United States is in no position to direct battlefield operations. The Senate . . . is in no position to anticipate every situation, every contingency, every confrontation in a war . . ." Fong contended.

Chicago JACL introducing changes in Convention

By ROSS HARANO
Convention Board Chairman

Friday, May 29, 1970

PACIFIC CITIZEN—3

The 21st National JACL Convention promises to be the most important meeting of JACL in many years. Delegates from 32 states and 92 chapters will determine the direction of JACL for the future.

Recognizing this situation, the 21st National JACL Convention Board has attempted to minimize the time spent at social functions and maximize the time allocated for business sessions.

Instead of an all-day Convention Outing, for example, we have set aside time for business sessions. Normally a National Convention has only 9 or 10 scheduled hours of business sessions, however the Convention Board has set aside 15 hours for the National JACL Council meetings with additional time for committee meetings and a district caucus.

Just in case the delegates get into some heated discussions, we have reserved the National Council meeting room on Friday night to the wee hours of the evening.

One Official Luncheon

The Convention Board has limited the official luncheons to one—the President's Recognition Luncheon, "Thanks and Thoughts by Jerry", where you will hear a summary of Jerry's impressions while he has been the National JACL President. The JACLer of the Biennium award will also be presented at this time.

The two official banquets of the convention will include one paying tribute to the lifetime work of Mike Masaoka on behalf of JACL and Japanese Americans as a whole, with the final banquet recognizing the Nisei of the Biennium.

For those interested in the lighter side, the Whing Ding will provide an atmosphere of fun and relaxation. This optional event, not a part of the package deal, will highlight the famous Gaslight Girls.

Planning Session

The National Liberation Caucus has requested one hour of business time at the National Council to present their views on the future direction of JACL.

The agenda for the first business session of Wednesday includes this item as well as others concerning JACL plans for the future which should provide for one of the most interesting sessions of the convention.

Very soon, delegates will be receiving reports on issues to be discussed at the National Council Sessions.

We urge you to do your "homework" prior to the convention so that it may be a fruitful meeting providing a positive and meaningful direction for JACL in the next decade.

QUOTE—John Canaday in the New York Times: "Things will never be quite the same again for countless Japanese farmers and villagers who are being exposed to a world they could not have imagined, a world recognizing none of the traditions they have lived by, including the traditions that have made them a powerful conservative group in Japan's politics. Every day the country people pour into Expo in dozens of organized groups running up to 500 each. For many, perhaps the majority, a visit to a large city is a once-or twice-in-a-lifetime experience, and some have been saving for years to make a trip. . . . They arrive in chartered buses, each group a community project. Descending en masse, they follow a leader who carries high a banner visible from a distance by any member who gets separated from a flock. . . . Immersed in sights and sounds they have never known, they crowd through pavilion after pavilion. . . . For these country people, Expo must be one vast transfiguring phenomenon that, once encountered, cannot be put aside. The more you see of the fair, the less presumption is involved in the conclusion that years after it closes and an assessment is possible, its effect on these people's way of thinking about the world must surely turn out to be Expo's most potent contribution—whether for good or ill."

EVALUATION—The above certainly must be considered a thoughtful observation on a side of Expo that few are aware of. But rural Japan is changing and has been changing ever since the end of World War II. I can see it in what's been happening to my cousin, Michizume Fukuda, who lives about an hour's ride by bus out of Hiroshima. I first met him in 1950. He was, to put it bluntly, hardly more than a country bumpkin even though he had enough education to be a rice inspector in the department of agriculture. Good-hearted, good-natured, good to his family, but almost totally unaware of the world outside of his little village.

I saw him again a year ago. He owns a television set and he had been watching it, the educational programs that Japanese TV excels in as well as baseball and sumo wrestling and American Westerns with the dialogue dubbed in, and the samurai dramas of deriding-do. He was more sophisticated this time. He could even talk politics, and he would argue with his son who, like a good young Japanese, was disillusioned with the conservative Sato government and saw promise of a political Utopia in the left.

Both Fukuda and his son knew what was going on in the world, the boy more than his father. They were aware of events abroad that would affect their own lives, of the explosion of nuclear devices in Red China and the development of Chinese rockets which would put their home in the shadow of nuclear death.

They talked vaguely of perhaps going up to Osaka to see Expo '70, but not with any great enthusiasm because they knew the fair would be crowded and they are country people not particularly fond of congested places. But they knew others who were planning to go, and it is likely that when their friends returned from viewing the bright lights and the wonders of the pavilions from around the world, they would sit and talk and be impressed. And, as John Canaday indicates, rural Japan never would be quite the same after Expo. But Expo would only be accelerating a process already well under way, part of a world-wide movement launched by the magic of radio and the wonders of instant visual communication through television. And whether all the information now available can be absorbed and digested and understood, and utilized for the betterment of our society, is something we won't know until a lot of time has passed. And what happens over there inevitably must affect us over here.

Shades of Homecoming

By KUMEO YOSHINARI

It seems like only yesterday when the 11th Biennial National JACL Convention was held in Chicago. (Actually, it will be two decades in October.) Now come July 14-18, 1970, the Chicago Chapter will be hosting its second national conclave—the 21st Biennial. The advent of this occasion certainly should recall some fond memories of those who attended the gala 1950 convention festivities.

It is hoped that by reminding you of those memorable events 20 years ago, many who were present then will feel the nostalgia of wanting to return here for the homecoming to meet old friends and see new scenery.

Who can ever forget the first full-blown postwar convention! It was held at the world's largest hotel (the site of this year's Mike Masaoka Testimonial Banquet) where one could sleep in a different room every night, and take nine years to complete the circuit.

From the opening moment of the convention, the air was electric as throngs of delegates swarmed over the hotel premises. The convention was a mecca for the Nisei who were then young and the foremost thing on their minds was to see and meet other Nisei from throughout the nation. This was the period when Chicago had its greatest Japanese American population because many had not yet returned to the West Coast after evacuation.

We Remember

There's no doubt that each conventioneer to the 11th Biennial has his favorite moment to remember, but let me enumerate a few that stand out for me. I'll always remember the rousing mixer on opening day—"Maze Mo!" The M.C. was the Rev. Perry Saito who concocted many ice breakers—totally breaking down inhibitions, even of the most timid delegate. In the end, everyone was an extrovert, fully enjoying himself and the companionship of his fellow delegates.

Recently, at the MDC meeting in Milwaukee, Rev. Saito, who is the pastor of Eau Claire, Wisconsin Methodist Church, was the keynote speaker. (He still has the glitzy knack of making people feel at home, and now with maturity, he has acquired the added technique of driving home the "message.")

As a result of the "getting to know you" mood established at the mixer, a friendly atmosphere prevailed throughout the week-long affair making it an experience that no one who attended will ever forget. Do you remember?

Innovations Galore

There were many innovations instituted at this convention which have become regular format for all subsequent conventions. The one which women will particularly recall was the Tea and Fashion Show held in the elegant Gold Room of the Congress Hotel. Whenever I glance at the convention booklet of that day, or see someone's personal album containing pictures of the event, I cannot help but admire how beautiful and charming our Nisei girls were in those days. Among the other unforgettable functions, I'm sure you'll agree, was the glitter of the JACL-ADC (Anti-Discrimination Committee) Testimonial Banquet. Heretofore, what convention could boast the array of political dignitaries that sat at the head table?

Impressive as the banquet was per se, I'm constantly reminded by West Coasters who vividly remember when the house lights dimmed and a corps of waiters wheeled in by candlelight a parade of sculptured ice from which the dessert of the evening was served. This unique display brought many ahs from the crowd.

Chicago is not endowed with the geographical setting befitting an outing; however, the selection committee did an excellent job in picking out a site comparable to Knott's Berry Farm.

Who can forget the scene where the blindfolded participants were feeding each other and upon unveiling, hilariously laughing at each other for having been fed charcoaled marshmallows.

Nisei Air Derby

The 1950 convention had national news coverage because of the much ballyhooed air derby sponsored wherein a number of Nisei aviators participated. Do you remember the anxiety created when Henry Ohye, leading Nisei pilot of the day, was lost en route to Chicago? How relieved the delegates were when it was later learned that Henry was forced down, but was able to later continue on to Chicago.

We also recall when the chartered flight of West Coast delegates were met at the old Midway airport. Who'll ever forget the send-off of this same plane on its return flight. We assembled for farewells at the airport around 11 p.m. and at 3 a.m., the plane was still on the ground. Finally, we Chicagoans left the scene out of sheer exhaustion—we never did learn when the plane actually took off. (Maybe it's still sitting there.)

Of course, those of us who labored so hard under the inspiring leadership of the late Randy Sakada, then convention chairman, still believe the 1950 convention to be the greatest ever held to date.

Convention Queen

The truly memorable highlight of the gathering was the coronation of the queen. I still can see the late Franklin Chino, who chaired the contest, eloquently introducing the Master of Ceremonies, the gracious and white-haired Congressman from Pennsylvania, the Honorable Francis Walter. It was enchanting to see each contestant parading down the aisle in her long gown and moving up step by step to an elevated court platform where she was welcomed by Congressman Walter.

TO JR. JACLERS HEADING FOR THE CONVENTION IN CHICAGO

Dress Code: GRUBBIES—Cut offs, sweat shirts, tennis shoes, etc.; CASUAL—Sportswear (shorts, skirts, slacks, etc.); INFORMAL—Sportcoat, suit, tie, luncheon dress.

CHICAGO—As the Junior convention starts officially on Tuesday, July 14, (the Opening Ceremonies are to be held Wednesday), the youth should come Tuesday. The registration desk at the Palmer House will be open from 3 p.m. to 8:30. The mixer, "I'd Like to Get to Know You", from 9 to 1 a.m. will be in two sections: mixers and a band dance. A jazz-rock group of nine, the United Nations, will belt out the music, Casual Dress. And until 2 a.m., a "rap" session takes over for complaints about the convention, suggestions for the rest of the week, current events and some EGAD matters. Dress Casual or Grubbies.

Wednesday

Eight contestants will compete in the National Oratorical Contest Wednesday morning during the opening session between 9 and 12. Dress Informal. Steven Goodman, a folk-singing guitarist will entertain during the luncheon. No head table is planned, so "Guess Who's Coming to Lunch?" Dress Informal.

Rest of the afternoon is set up for business sessions for delegates and a sensitivity session for boosters, "Everything that Touches You" from 3:15 to 7:30. Ron Masumoto of the Pacific Southwest DYC will chair the workshop. The dress is grubbies.

Dinner is on your own afterwards and the Chicago Boys' Club will be open from 10 p.m. for relaxing, swimming, ping pong, volleyball, etc. Pop (at 5 cent per) and potato chips will be available. Back at the hotel, another "rap" session is scheduled till 3 a.m.

Thursday

Business sessions resume at 9 a.m. Thursday. Each district at 10 will caucus or rap on what has been discussed thus far and plan on what they want to talk about. At 11, the delegates reconvene to spell out more programs till lunch on your own at noon.

Throughout the same morning, each DYC will conduct its "Who Will Buy?" at the DYC trade mart. Since cooking will not be allowed, food items must be pre-packed. The mart gives the juniors a chance to raise funds.

Between 2 and 5:30 p.m., a variety of skits is being prepared to emphasize cultural heritage.

On Thursday evening, the youths join with adults to honor Mike Masaoka. Not enough kids know who he is and what he has done for Japanese Americans—and this is the best time to find out, the committee felt.

From 9:30, if enough interest has been garnered (at least 300), the youth plan to see "Second City" at Old Town, Chicago's answer to "The Committee" on the West Coast. It's a satirical, witty review. Dress Informal. And

By JEAN SAKAMOTO

CHICAGO—Having just had the immense enjoyment of reading "Shades of Homecoming," written so nostalgically and pleasantly by a good friend, Kumee Yoshinari, (printed elsewhere in this paper) brought to mind that this person also had a glimpse of that glorious national convention Chicago hosted in 1950.

Far be it from me to tell you exactly how old we were then, but suffice it say that we were too young to be a full-fledged member of that energetic organization called the JACL, but beyond the age today where one qualifies for the Age of Aquarius.

We've always belonged to that in-between stage, sometimes known as the Twilight Zone. Having had the questionable status of working on the fringes of that convention, we were rewarded by being allowed to poke our heads in through the entrance of that grand and imposing International Grand Ballroom of the then Stevens Hotel to watch the glittering proceedings of the Sayonara Ball at the time the queen contestants were looking their most radiant and beautiful for the judges. It must be wonderful to be so poised, and beautiful beyond words we thought!

Chicago in the '70s

It's 20 years later now, and CHICAGO '70 looms on the horizon. Like the August Moon, we've become a little older, but this time we'll be on the other side of that door actually participating to the fullest degree in all the splendors of a new convention in a new era.

You won't be disappointed, Kumee and all of you who came to Chicago a score ago. This convention won't have the fanfare and hoopla of the days gone by, but we'll have our own innovations. It'll sparkle with the streamlined, revved-up mood of today—I mean, it'll really turn you on!

To wit—on Tuesday evening, July 14, we've planned a mixer that isn't a mixer, "What's Going On?" It's a cocktail hour, a travelogue, a swinging dance, and a fashion show entirely unlike any you have seen, all at once. And the scene!

Nothing but the best for Chicago—the exclusive Furniture Club where you can gaze at the gorgeous Lake. It'll be groovy, happy, sophisticated. What's an inhibition? You'll forget you ever knew the word.

Opening Ceremonies

There's always tradition, of course, and on Wednesday, July 15, the 21st Biennial National JACL Convention formally comes to order with the Opening Ceremonies.

Who says Chicago's running out of leadership candidates? We've got one of them, young Jr. JACLer, Chris Takemoto, to do the honors as Master of Ceremonies for the impressive event when we meet and hear, for the first time, nominees for the office of National President as they address themselves to the convention theme, "Understanding,"—something we need more than ever today.

The finalists for the Oratorical Contest will vie for the grand prize, and we get younger and more brilliant by the year. The winner of the Essay Contest will be announced then, too, and we'll be so proud of the youngsters, we'll get a little misty-eyed while applauding.

Later that evening, get set for a real fun-in at the frenetic 1000 Club whing ding, "It's a Gas!", where food will be superb, the "scenery" tall and beautiful. The Gaslight Girls will be there in all their glory, with their own Roaring 20's Band. The famous Gaslight troupe will have you dancing even if you have two left feet and singing at the top of your lungs even if it's off-key. The end result? Fun!

Masaoka Testimonial

Thursday will go down in JACL history as a day to remember. Even Washington in '72 can't possibly top this! An evening of thanks for the man of the hour, our own Mike Masaoka.

Look at the line-up: Congressman Spark Matsunaga, toastmaster; Undersecretary of State Alexis Johnson, speaker; Congressman Sidney R. Yates, speaker; NAACP

Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins, speaker; ACLU speaker, Edward J. Ennis, speaker; Past National JACL President, Chicago's own Shigeo Wakamatsu, speaker; And chairman for the whole glittering affair? Who else, but Kumee Yoshinari.

You'll hear "Thanks and Thoughts by Jerry" (Enomoto, that is) during the President's Recognition luncheon. Where else but in Chicago would you find such an eloquent, charming and ultra-poised up-and-coming young adult like Miss Karen Suzuki to serve as Mistress of Ceremonies for such an occasion?

You'll want to be there to shake the hand of the "JACLer of the Biennium," and to show you how understanding we are, we won't even demonstrate if the winner turns out to be a non-Chicagoan. (That's the way we are in Chicago!)

If you were smart enough to bring along your fringed-suede vest and leather suit, what're you waiting for—put 'em on, grab a couple of fast-selling tickets, see the famous tribe in America's love-rock musical "HAIR," then jump on the stage and join the cast in its finale. It's all part of the show, and you can say you saw it in Chicago.

Convention Finale

Saturday, the final day of the convention, will arrive all too quickly. Finally, the women can tenderly take out their magnificent mini, midi, or maxi evening dress and float into the Grand Ballroom of the Palmer House to attend the final event of a hectic week, "From Here to D.C.," our official convention banquet, to hear our newly installed National President tell his plans for the coming biennium and tell it like it is.

Who will be this year's recipient of the cherished and most honored award, "The Nisei of the Biennium"? You'll witness the great unveiling at this affair.

After the banquet, take an "Intermission" between here and D.C. by dancing to the beautiful music of Ralph Berger, his piano and Orchestra, and this is the time to find out if you might be the lucky person qualifying for the Friday Bonus—$100 every week for one full year!

By the way, all you bowl-ers, we've got a treat in store for you. Where else but in Chicago will you find a "Half Lass" bowling tournament where the accent is on fun and not the money. Only early applicants will be eligible for the specially oiled and grooved alleys Chairman Joe Sagami's got reserved.

If you don't join the fun, you'll be sorry. This promises to be the most unusual and never-to-be-forgotten bowling tournaments of all time.

Chicago's not noted for her riots, it's noted as the city of the big shoulders, the "I Do" city, the convention capital of the nation. Whether you return to Chicago for a Homecoming or arrive for the first time, come and join us—you'll be glad you did.

Room reservations at

Palmer House now due

CHICAGO—Choice rooms for JACL delegates attending the 21st Biennial July 14-18 at the Palmer House are being reserved until June 8, registration chairman Mrs. Raymond Inouye reported.

Chapters have been sent a supply of reservation forms, addressed to the Palmer House, State and Monroe Sts., Chicago 60609. Rooms are rated minimum, average and superior, starting from $19 single, $29 double, $31 twins, $71 suite. Rooms in the Palmer House Towers are about $3 additional; suite $102 and up.

Rooms will be held until 6 p.m. on date of arrival unless otherwise advised.

Another Terrific Milestone Due

By JERRY ENOMOTO
National President

I have attended every JACL National Convention since 1954 and each, in its own way, has marked some milestone in JACL's history. Chicago in 1970 will be no exception.

There are those who have scorned its choice as a host city because of the belief that it is a symbol of repression. I would hope that everyone's sense of fair play will recognize that the Chicago JACL Chapter is made up of the same cross section of members that constitute our JACL organization throughout the land. It can no more be held responsible for matters over which it has no direct control, then we can be.

The events of 1968 and its spillover into the trial of the "Chicago 7", have implications that trouble many Americans. However, rather than dwell upon the past, I hope that we will get to Chicago intent on building upon those positive blocks we have started in JACL. Although the times are difficult, we are in a position to make some real advances in the push to keep JACL a relevant force in the '70s.

There are some 15 hours of straight business set up for the National Council, during the 4 days, with more time available should it be necessary. For the delegates no convention is a picnic, this one will certainly be no exception. The decisions made in Chicago will be as crucial, if not more so, as any in JACL's history. I hope that none of us "cops out" on our responsibility to be an active part of these decisions.

Needless to say, those elected to lead our organization must be JACLers of vision, who can listen and guide. Those who appreciate the great heritage of JACL, but also recognize that the past is only relevant insofar as it can contribute to helping us develop a better future.

JACLers follow no party line, but are flexible enough to shift gears with the times. Those who are not afraid of taking stands, when they are necessary. Above all we need leaders committed to helping make America a more just land, in a more just community of nations.

Traditionally, JACL Conventions have had room for relaxation and enjoyment, and again Chicago will be no exception. I have noted some feeling about eliminating this phase of our Convention. A recent letter to the PC Editor suggested that we do just that. Although I respect the feeling behind such a suggestion, I submit that it is unrealistic. All JACLers, who I know, have compassion for people. Each of us does as much as we want to do, or feels we can do, for those in need (including Asians). To demand that JACLers give up social affairs at the Convention, through some feeling of group guilt or repentance, is not only unreasonable, but presumptuous.

By the same token, those who feel a certain way are certainly free to stay away from the social events. For those who wish to unwind, the Chicago JACLers have made preparations which will insure the calibre of good times that the Windy City has become famous for.

Another highlight of Chicago, 1970, will be our tribute to Mike Masaoka, a Japanese American legend whom we want to honor while he's still "young", healthy and productively active.

Chicago, with its theme "Understanding: The Basis for a Changing JACL", will have a little bit for everybody, delegate or booster. See you there.

CHICAGO, CHICAGO Toddlin' Town

By CHIVE TOMIHIRO

CHICAGO—When you alight from the airport bus at the Palmer House, you are in the heart of Chicago's loop. The Palmer House faces State Street, the world's most highly concentrated shopping district. Two blocks away is renowned Marshall Field & Co. where you can shop for anything from grass seed to Oriental antiques. On the 7th floor of Fields are several good restaurants where you can rest your tired feet while lunching and in the Narcissus Room and the Walnut Room, the ladies can enjoy a fashion show as well.

The Art Institute of Chicago, just two blocks from the hotel, houses one of the finest collections in the country. The Junior museum and the Thorne Miniature Rooms should be of interest to even those who are not especially art lovers.

When you come out of the Art Institute, you can walk up Michigan Avenue, the magnificent mile, and do more shopping in the finer small shops.

While the women are out spending money, the men can lose theirs at the beautiful Arlington Race Track. A bus leaves regularly from downtown Chicago. You men can also bowl for prizes at the Nisei Bowling and go to a White Sox ball game.

Sightseeing Buses
Sightseeing buses leave frequently from the Palmer House. Among the things one should not miss is the Museum of Science and Industry on the south side, with its 14 acres of exhibits showing the latest developments in science and industry.
Days or evenings in Old Town can be fun. The restaurants and shops are novel and colorful. The Cave at 1337 N. Wells in Old Town offers good Oriental food and cocktails at reasonable prices. If you want to wine and dine or just plain swing, Chicago's the place for it. There are plenty of Japanese restaurants in all price ranges. There's Benihana, Japanese Steak House, and Tokyo Tea Gardens on the Near North, which are pretty close to the Furniture Club where the opening night reception will take place. A little further north is Kamehachi and Ha-shikin, both sushi houses, and in the loop, the new Fuji. You can swing all night in Chicago if you want to. The Den Downtown on Walton Place, for instance, is open till 4 A.M. So is the Playboy. Remember this is where Playboy got started.

To top it all, you can clear your blurry eyes with a panoramic view of Chicago from the 100 story John Hancock building or from the Prudential Building "Top of the Rock."

We could go on forever, but we would rather show you our town personally.

with a kiss. Who'll ever forget the popular selection of Miss EDC, Miss Fuku Yokoyama, as "Miss National JACL." What charm and sophistication she personified! The other noteworthy features were many such as the Sayonara banquet, the "Nisei of the Biennium," etc. Undoubtedly, I have now refreshed your minds and those who are possessed with pleasant memories of this period will want to come to Chicago not only to relieve the joys of the past, but also to be witness to the new era of JACL coming in the 1970s.

21st Biennial
The 21st Biennial National JACL Convention in its own right will in due time be as memorable to the delegates as the 1950 one proved to be to those who were there. The theme, "Understanding," is most appropriate in these crucial times when men live in diverse societies which seem to be challenging each other—the liberal versus the conservative, the old against the young, the poor against the rich, etc. In the midst of these dividing controversies, where does JACL choose to make its stand?

There is no question that this is the age of the Samsel. Perhaps at this coming convention, they will raise their voices not only to be heard, but to assert their rights in playing a bigger role in the future of the organization.

Are the Nisei willing to yield the leadership to the "now" generation? Or is there room for both generations to work side by side in coordination and understanding of each other's role in working cooperatively towards a common goal wherein each group will not be in competition, but will supplement each other's efforts. The resolution of this confrontation will surely make for a dynamic convention not only to observe, but also participating in the ultimate decision making. Are you coming home? Hope to see you here!

the wee hour rap session follows till 2 a.m.

Friday
Friday morning will be devoted to a service project—as yet in the planning stages, though two are set: (a) the Issei Center, (b) a social with college-bound blind people.
Two more projects are being worked up. The aim is to divide the juniors into four groups for each project. Dress casual or grubbie, depending upon the project.

The 4-6:30 business session is for delegates to wrap up convention matters.
In the evening, the program calls for a Ravinia Park summer concert with a guy named Procol Harum from England scheduled. His one song which was popular was "Whiter Shade of Pale." The park is on the outskirts of Chicago where people sit on the grass and listen, or walk along the park pathways. There are theater seats for the more serious.

This is really the free night of Convention week and the juniors have a limit of 20 tickets to "Hair"—$10 each for seats on the main floor or mezzanine. Another convention special is "Trivia" from midnight till 2 a.m.

Saturday
On Saturday, DYCs will gather for final sessions till 12. Afternoon at Grant Park is "The Rain, the Park and Other Things"—a potpourri of outdoor activities. Dress grubbie. Since Chicago is the Windy City, kite flying is also being planned.

The Sayonara Banquet with the seniors at 6:30 will be followed by the juniors having their own Ball, "Fancy Colours". More details to come.

General Info
Youth will be housed at the Palmer House on the 7th, 8th and 9th floors dorm style at rates of $5 per person per night on a 3 to a room basis.

Speakers' list for Masaoka tribute at Chicago confirmed

(Special to the Pacific Citizen)
CHICAGO — Details of the Mike M. Masaoka Testimonial Dinner program have just been released by program chairman Noboru Honda. Highlights of the July 16 testimonial are the presentation of the Mike M. Masaoka Trust Fund and the roster of outstanding persons of national prominence who will come here as friends of Mike Masaoka to join the hundreds of other friends who will be on hand to pay tribute to an outstanding American.

Featured speakers are the Hon. U. Alexis Johnson, Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs; Rep. Sidney R. Yates, (D-Ill.); Edward J. Ennis, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union, board of directors; Roy Wilkins, executive director, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; and Shigeo Wakamatsu, past national president of the Japanese American Citizens League.

Congressman Sparky Matsunaga of Hawaii will serve as the toastmaster.
In addition to the presentations of the Trust Fund, other presentations, including the presentation of the "Round-the-World Trip" and the Testimonial Album will be made.

Intermountain orator hails from Salt Lake

IDAHO FALLS—Randy Horiuchi, son of the Tube Horiuchi of Salt Lake City, is the Intermountain District Council representative to the National JACL oratorical contest.

His brother Wayne was the IDC orator two years ago, winning the third prize in the national contest held at San Jose.

BOOK REVIEW: Allan Beekman New Work on Ancient Literary Form

JAPANESE POETIC DIARIES, selected and translated by Earl Miner, University of California Press, 211 pages, $6.95.

In 1968, when the Swedish Academy of Letters voted to confer the Nobel Prize on novelist Yasunari Kawabata of Japan, they drew attention to a literature unknown in the West, largely because of the paucity of translations. Like any novelist, Kawabata is heir to what has been done in his mother tongue by those who preceded him, though the average Westerner may be unaware that, according to those well-grounded in the subject, Japanese has one of the world's great literatures, comparable in age, richness, and quantity to English literature.

The "Tale of Genji" by Murasaki Shikibu, written between 1000 and 1010, is the world's first great novel. Genji must be as long as Leo Tolstol's "War and Peace," or much longer. But in general the Japanese have seemed to traditionally apply themselves to perfectionism on short works.

A favorite short form is the poetic diary in which verses highlighting emotional experiences are welded together by prose narrative. As an example of this genre, Earl Miner has translated and collected into this volume four representative diaries.

In an introduction, he analyzes the poetic diary, giving insight into the specimens that follow. The first is "The Tosa Diary" (Tosa Nikki), by Ki no Tsurayuki (869-945). Miner says of this work, written in 935, that it "may properly be termed the parent of all Japanese prose fiction."

"The Tosa Diary" records the experience of the author on the long and arduous trip to the capital, Kyoto, as he returned from his tour of duty as governor of Tosa, now Kochi Prefecture. In the tradition of this literary genre, the diarist is justified in altering facts to suit the requirements of art; for the sake of his narrative, he assumes the identity of a woman.

Different scenes and experiences inspire this fictional woman diarist to lyrical expression with an underlying note of grief for her child who died in Tosa.

The greatest sadness of thinking that now at last we are bound for home is that there remains one person who will never know return.
Such poems are strung like beads on a necklace made of the intervening prose narrative.

The second selection, "The Diary of Izumi Shikibu," has been covered in this column in the Edwin A. Cranston translation.

Diaryist Basho
Third is "The Narrow Road Through the Provinces" (Oku no Hosomichi), by Matsuo Basho (1644 - 1694), "the greatest of the diaries included here, and the greatest of all Japanese poetic diaries."

A celebrated and revered figure in his lifetime, as he is today, Basho describes his wanderings about northern Japan in 1688. The greatest master of haiku, a poetic form of 17 syllables, his poetry revealing a kinship with Zen Buddhism, he has studied his narrative with these verses. But these haiku are enhanced by the beauty of the prose in which they have been set.

The book ends with a short work, "The Verse Record of My Peonies" (Botan Kuroku), by Masaoka Shiki (1867-1892). Scion of a samurai family, Shiki revitalized the ancient forms of haiku and tanka, a poetic form of 31 syllables, and was acclaimed by his contemporaries as a great poet. As he lay dying of spinal tuberculosis, two disciples brought him a pot of peonies. Following his theory of objectively describing nature, he writes of these peonies.

Earl Miner, responsible for this important contribution to the growing body of Japanese literature in English translation, is Professor of English at the University of California, Los Angeles. Among his other works are "The Japanese Tradition in British and American Literature," "An Introduction to Japanese Court Poetry" and "Fujiwara Tanka's Superior Poems of Our Time."

Brush paintings

This deluxe book reproduces 22 of Wang's best paintings in their original colors, together with five full-page details showing his extraordinary brushwork in natural size. Four critical texts consider the artist and his work from both the Chinese and Western points of view. Born in China, and steeped in the artistic traditions of his native land, Wang has made innovations to create a style of his own. He moved to the United States in 1949, and is now an American citizen.

Have chapters voiced interest on specific public or political issues?

(Discussion, recommendations and excerpts of the April 11 session of Planning Commission members of the three JACL district councils in California, on "JACL in the 1970s" continue this week in the area of politics, education and economics.)

Chapter generally have exhibited no consensus on public issues other than those designated by National. At best, the thinking of the chapter is as varied as its membership.

Yet, in trying to ascertain how much interest there is at the chapter level on public issues without having National citing them, the question of time came into play, that some issues lend themselves more to resolution and action by the national convention.

Some chapters and members are not aware a governing board has a prerogative to take stands.

What is at stake if JACL should lose its tax-exempt status? Because members prefer JACL to retain its present tax status, the proposal for a separate civil right, political action arm was being made. On the question of what is at stake for JACL, this being a legal question, it was suggested it be referred to the legal committee for consideration.

Some discussion also ensued about the Endowment Fund, its connection with JACL if it loses its tax-exempt status.

RECOMMENDATIONS
1-That JACL chapters have differences of opinion within, matters of public interest, chapters should be encouraged to take what they feel to be a righteous stand.

2-That the PC carry position papers on various issues written by members even though JACL has no stand on them.

3-That chapters be made aware of the kinds of political activity they can participate without jeopardizing the tax-exempt status of the organization.

4-That JACL help organize the separate civil rights arm, (Repeat of the issue in Part Three).

5-That the question of JACL losses if tax-exempt status were nullified be determined by the legal committee.

TRANSCRIPT (Part IV)
(Excerpts)

In the area of chapter interests on political issues, have they voiced any opinion on specific issues as listed in the question-

HONDA: It appears from the lack of comment from the chapters, it may be necessary for National to take up specific issues, then pass them down to the districts and the chapters.

SHIMIZU: There's no consensus but we do have a variety of comments.

MITOMA: It's variable in the PSW.

OKAMURA: It shows there's a vast difference of opinion in the organization. Can we have these issues discussed at the national council?

HONDA: My question was put to determine how much interest there is at the chapter level on public issues without having national saying these are the issues.

Perhaps it goes back to staff leaving a stand on it.

SUZUKI: No, I don't think we need staff-look at Title II.

HONDA: There, it went to national and then trickled down to the chapters.

SUZUKI: That's how it should work.

MITOMA: Can we maintain this procedure for a long stretch?

ENOMOTO: On some issues, time is of essence. Some issues (like Title II) was an ideal development in that it was discussed at the convention and then worked upon so that it's about ready to be repeated.

But other issues (like the No-guchi case) time is a problem. Some issues we can't wait for local chapter to develop, pass a resolution at a convention and then work two years for a decision.

JACL is never geared for fast movement. Some of it is due to structure and staff, but the least we can do is to encourage chapters to take stands on issues, whether it's hot, cold or medium.

Development of a JACL committee on education, with professional staff servicing the general area of education, and the JACL relations with UCLA with reference to the JARP were the principal issues in this area.

In the PSW, an education committee has been organized to work in the area of ethnic studies, helping to train teachers on Asian studies as well as develop curriculum and teaching aides. As for securing public or private funding for this program, it appears very dim-even if the Pucinski bill were passed.

A statement on education calling for better dissemination of information we now have on Japanese Americans was suggested and this led to possibilities of JACL establishing a library on Japanese American studies either in Los Angeles or San Francisco.

The composition of the JARP executive committee came under scrutiny and because of the thrust of ethnic studies today, that group ought to be doubled in size to include persons aware of ethnic studies so information JARP has can be made available generally. The JACL offices at the present time is unable to offer too much help in this regard.

The PSW proposal to establish a Japanese Heritage Institute, patterned after the Brandeis Institute for young Jewish people, was found worthy and it was suggested the PSWDC pick up the tab to pursue the study for future national consideration.

RECOMMENDATIONS
1-Drafting a general JACL statement on education, calling for general dissemination of information we now have on Japanese Americans and making JARP resources available to the general membership and the public. This may mean establishing a JACL library, if necessary.

2-Establishing a JACL standing committee on education to pursue the thrust of ethnic Asian studies, coupled with professional staff.

3-Urging the JARP executive committee to expand so as to include persons involved in ethnic studies.

TRANSCRIPT (Part V)
(Excerpts)

MITOMA: This report should be corrected to read, Japanese Heritage Institute, an idea suggested by Joe Grant Masaka patterned after the Jewish group in Simi Valley, impressing upon youngsters their Jewish heritage during a four-week summer course. It is based upon the principle that America is not a melting pot but a pluralistic society. This proposal calls for an ad hoc committee to check out the idea and come back in 1971 with specifics and feasibility. $300 is requested.

HONDA: Couldn't PSW pick up the tab and pursue this since the camp is in Southern Cal? Planning Commission's role would be to see if it has national possibilities.

MATSU: PSW has an education committee which can look into this.

SUZUKI: One of the functions of the PSW education committee is to develop curriculum material for elementary-secondary teachers on Asian American studies as well as train teachers in this area. Ethnic studies is very relevant today. Masaka's letter on the Pucinski bill ran down some of the specifics on this. We seem to have a national committee on education in Kathy Reyes function. Ethnic Studies will reach a vast number of people, this is where the emphasis should be.

HONDA: There should be no problem about the importance of ethnic studies. The question is whether one of implementation. We have enough teachers; can we get enough funds to carry out? JACL is fortunate in having funded a start in this direction with developing of teaching materials.

SUZUKI: Maybe we need professional staff in JACL to work in this area of education and ethnic studies.

OKAMURA: Will the PSW proposal be a summer thing or year-around?

MITOMA: The Brandeis Institute is year-around. During the year, adults are called over on weekends for camp courses.

OKAMURA: That's fine. Then perhaps overall, there should be a general policy on education - to provide resources in the area of Japanese American studies. We need better method of dissemination of information we now have at UCLA's JARP. JARP is not open to everyone. We need to make it available to all. This was suggested in the idea of developing a JACL library at the cultural community center in Little Tokyo.

OKAMURA: I don't know what's going to happen to the staff at UCLA. The case is where people want info on Japanese and they check the phone book - first call up JACL. And we haven't much to give.

SUZUKI: It is unfortunate that nearly half million dollars was raised through JACL efforts and through Mike's work in Washington or a university and not for JACL in developing a studies center.

OKAMURA: I still find fault with the JARP. It was only formed to publish. Perhaps their executive committee can be expanded to include people involved in ethnic studies.

MATSU: Didn't the Greater Pasadena Chapter approach the JARP to help them sort out material and use of the things?

SUZUKI: JARP was reluctant at that time. It seems the JACL member don't have that much access to the JARP material. JARP says material belongs to UCLA. If UCLA wanted it back, it couldn't get it.

KUBOTA: My son is studying Asian studies at UCLA and can't get help from JARP. He has to come home and read my little library for stuff, which is ridiculous.

OKAMURA: The UCLA-JACL relations will come to a head this year. However, the Planning Commission should recommend a resource location, whether it's UCLA or the JACL library. Also, I hope the JARP committee expands itself to the use of what it is to involve people in ethnic studies.

SHIMIZU: Are there any funds,

Berkeley

Recently, the Northern California-Western Nevada District Council overwhelmingly (15-6) defeated a motion to send a telegram to President Nixon protesting the expansion of the Vietnam war by the invasion of Cambodia. This issue caused the most intense floor debate since the controversy over Japan Week a year ago.

PEPPER POT

The peculiar thing was that the opponents of the motion did not argue the actual issue, but only argued procedure, i.e., a written resolution was not submitted 30 days in advance, not enough is known about the issue, and delegates could not vote without first consulting their chapters. No one particularly argued for the invasion or in support of the Vietnam war. Apparently, the majority just did not want to take a stand or did not want to send a wire to the President.

Intuitively, this observer suspects that the majority of people at that District Council meeting were actually against the invasion of Cambodia and were generally against the Vietnam war. The average JACler is at that point in life where he or she has sons of draftable age, and this must be causing great anguish. But somehow they could not bring themselves to declare their position. Was it fear of reprisals, or the Quiet American syndrome, or something else?

Seen but Not Heard

The present-day average JACler feels perfectly comfortable attending all those boring banquets where the local white politicians come slumming and pay their parting respects. Yet, the JAClers would not dare express their opinions to these same politicians, who are supposed to be their representatives and responsive to their will. Have we worked ourselves into the disenfranchisement of being seen but not heard?

What has happened over the years is that we have forgotten the real purpose of a citizens organization—the JACL. And, many members have become blindly attached to organizational tools, and have come to regard these tools as ends in themselves. All those banquets, dances, awards, and sports activities are merely the means of keeping the people in contact—they are "stand-by" activities to keep the group together until such time the real purposes of the organization comes into play. In recent years the JACL membership has become rusty and forgetful. If the JACL involvement has deteriorated to having a comfortable banquet once in a while, there is not much point in maintaining a district and national organization. A regional or national organization is useful only for expressing the viewpoint of Japanese Americans on public issues, and to try to influence policy.

Political Force

If the old-timers will think back on why you organized the National JACL at all, you will recall that it was to work in the legislative and judicial areas to gain civil rights for Japanese Americans. Social and sports activities were peripheral at best, and mostly a training device to get Japanese Americans working together. In short, the National JACL was organized for political involvement, and if that is still not the purpose today, we might just as well disband into local social clubs.

Things are not that dismal. What we need now are new, young leaders (Or, a resurrection and reeducation of old leaders) who can, with vision and purpose, move the JACL into becoming a powerful political force, with the ability to affect public policy. The JACL has done it once before during the 1942-1952 decade, and there is no reason why we cannot do it again, especially considering all the talent we have in the Sansei activists, and considering, too, all the resources in the hands of the established Nisei.

THAI ROYALTY HOUSE

GUEST OF UTAH JACLERS

SALT LAKE CITY — Mme. Somoe Svasti, a member of the Royal Family of Thailand, was a recent house guest of Dr. Jun and Helen Kurumada recently, the Salt Lake JACL Newsletter reported.

The visit to Salt Lake City was arranged for the Thai princess by Helen's brother who is consul general at Chiangmai, Thailand. It was a part of the Princess's 60 birthday gift—a trip around the world from her children.

Touring Expo '70

The soft, bamboo-covered Senri Hills, which slope gently skyward beyond the city of Osaka, have for centuries been home only to snakes and a host of insects. Today, the Senri range, the site of Japan's gaudy Expo '70, throbs with life. Before the rising sun sets on the 183-day extravaganza, some 50 million Japanese plus 1,000,000 foreigners are expected to have visited the grounds. Without a doubt, it will go down as one of the most popular world's fairs in history.

I didn't attend the gala preview of Expo for VIPs. The ceremonial inaugural had far too much pomp and glitter. Besides, I wasn't invited.

Anyway, Expo is serving as a great international cultural exchange. Foreigners are learning about Japanese institutions. One European was fascinated by the idea of Turkish baths with adjoining bars. He told his friend: "You haven't lived till you have a rubdown with a dry martini."

The first thing most readers probably want to know is how much a day at Expo will cost. It all depends on how big a spender you are. It can be done for $10 at the exposition or it can skyrocket to $50. The dollar gap depends on whether you just want to eat there or really dine.

EXPO MUSTS

You must:
• See Asirorama.
• Try the food at the Scandinavian restaurant.
• Pay $80 yen to get in.
• Be out of your mind to come on a weekend.

If you're watching your pennies, $10 will get you inside (about $2.25), a couple of rides in Expoland, a decent lunch (under $2), a few ice creams and snacks during the long day, an acceptable dinner in a foreign pavilion (if you order carefully) and a map or guide pamphlet to steer you around.

On the other hand if you want to dine in real style you can easily spend $50 on lunch, dinner, wine and liquor alone.

Expo is built around seven plazas named after the seven days of the week: Monday Plaza, etc. Linked by moving sidewalks, all seven lead to the Symbol Area.

EXPO MUSTN'TS

You mustn't:
• Come without a hotel reservation or prearranged place to stay.
• Try to see it all in one day. You need at least two.
• Miss the U.S. Pavilion and the moonrock.
• Drink heavily and ride the roller coaster.

Each plaza is surrounded by all kinds of service facilities, such as information booths, restaurants, shops and rest rooms.

The plazas are meant to serve as places not only to rest tired feet but also to meet friends.

A variety of entertaining shows are also held in the plazas to add a festive atmosphere to the exposition.

'Sansei Speaks' night at Wilshire

A recent peaceful demonstration by students was turned into a confrontation with authorities, not by students but by agitators from the outside, a Ph.D. candidate at UCLA told a local community gathering.

Colin Watanabe gave "the student viewpoint" as he participated in "The Sansei Speak," a panel discussion before the Wilshire JACL May 11.

Watanabe reported that he witnessed the UCLA demonstration May 5 and described how he, as a bystander, was caught in the sweep by police after agitators from the outside disrupted the peaceful intention of the demonstration. His account of the events leading to the most recent disturbances pointed to the fact that Asian Americans were involved.

Civic Affairs

Watanabe cited the Kent State killings, Vietnam war, President Nixon's announced U.S. incursion into Cambodia, and a lack of positive action from the Administration except rhetoric labeling students as "kooks" and "bums" as some of the bases for the students' aroused concerns and their need for expressing their indignation.

Two other Japanese Americans and one Chinese discussed different areas of concern for the young people. Speaking were Ray Tasaki of the Asian American Hard Core; Linda Iwataki of the Japanese American Community Services (JACS); and Ron Noblett, who compared the Asian American with other ethnic minority communities.

Tasaki gave a picture of hope for persons on probation. Having dedicated himself to helping others with the same problems, Tasaki told the group he had served time in prison for habitual drug use.

"It is necessary for persons coming out of prison to find acceptance back into society, a chance for rehabilitation, jobs, to develop self worth," Tasaki said, "and that self-assurance developing from a peer group, and the Halfway House concept are project aims now operating with help from JACS."

Miss Iwataki, a JACS administrator and a graduate of Calif. State College at Los Angeles, through the involvement of young adults, said JACS meets vital community needs. Programs include Hard Core, Volunteer Legal Services, Okei Memorial Child Care Center, and Pioneer Project.

She became interested in JACS through meetings or "rap sessions" in the interracial Crenshaw area. These helped to cool a potentially explosive situation, she recalls, and the interracial discussions led to understanding and agreement that people are human and dignity was the name of the game.

Noblett explained the difference between the Asian community and the Asian American community. He noted that Asians are a small minority, numerically, in this country, and Japanese Americans are segregated and ethnocentric, separating themselves by self-trism.

He said the "search for identity" is found in all groups. The black and brown minorities, he added, have an advantage in sheer numbers in demanding programs such as those which have been set up in schools and universities.

Wilshire chapter president, Mrs. Toshiko Yoshida, expressed hope that that understanding was reached and that young people as well as the older might listen and learn.

Thousands See Dayton JACL Festival

Over 2,000 people poured into the downtown YWCA on May 3 to see the Dayton JACL Festival of Culture. Hundreds of items were on display from Dayton's Sister City of Oiso, Japan, plus thousands of items including Mrs. Fred Yost's rare Japanese doll collection.

There were demonstrations of brush writing and painting, origami, flower arranging and doll making going on all afternoon. Dancing, tea ceremony and sword demonstrations were part of the afternoon entertainment by the chapter men and womenfolk.

A full-size Japanese room was set up and those who wanted pictures sitting in the room could do so.

Three Japanese stores were busy all day, and snacks of Japanese foods were served to all comers.

Gerald Hawkins, Festival chairman, and Fred Flisk, Chapter president, announced that the crowd was 120% larger than the former high of 800 two years ago.

Proceeds of the festival (all admissions were paid) was twice that of any past endeavor. Heavy TV coverage, four shows plus three major newspaper articles boosted the crowd to the high level, Hawkins said. The Festival ran for five hours.

Brotherhood Fund

LOS ANGELES—Some 35,000 letters appealing for support of the Yellow Brotherhood Community Center were dispatched to Los Angeles. Since the previous report (May 15 PC), a total of $475 was acknowledged for a current total of $12,133, according to Dr. James Matsuba and George Izumi, co-chairmen, as follows:

- ORGANIZATIONS: $100—VFW Nisei Memorial Post 9938; $50—David Hyon Associates.
- INDIVIDUALS: $100—George Aratani, Anonymous; $25—Tom S. Hosaka, Eddie O. Mori, Albert Shinohara; and Yuji Ichio, Harold Okano, Manuel Aragon Jr. ($50 aggregate).

It was announced grand total includes pledges and operational expenses. Actual cash on hand is nearly $5,000.

(Contributions to the "Yellow Brotherhood Community Fund" may be forwarded to the Pacific Citizen, 125 Weller St., Los Angeles 90012.)

Business Ticker

Hawaii's unemployment rate dropped to 3.2 per cent of the labor force in March, state labor director Robert K. Hasegawa has announced. The number of jobless dropped by 750 to 10,770, with unemployment declining on all islands except Molokai, he said. Total employment went up 1,350 during March to 324,420, resulting mainly from retail for spring sales.

and not six a year as today. Ozaki worked his way up to the juro or junior division in 1943, which was in wartime, of course.

Then in May 1944, he wrestled for the first time in the makuuchi division, the major league. Ozaki was 25 at the time and weighed around 210 pounds, which is featherweight in upper-class sumo.

Ozaki, or Toyonishiki, was ranked as taiden No. 20 mae-gashira for his first appearance in big time and he did well.

Regarded as a thrusting specialist, he won six and lost four in the 10-day tournament, which was staged in the open-air at Korakuen ball park. The meet was shortened to 10 days although the usual number had been 15 since the summer of 1939.

And it was held at Korakuen as the Kokugikan sumo amphitheater had been taken over by the military.

Haguroyama won the tournament with a sweep of 10 matches. Futabayama, winner of 12 tournament championships, lost once to fellow-grand champion Terukuni and wound up just out of the money.

Japan's losing war spelled finish for Toyonishiki's promising sumo career. No sooner did he gain the upper division in stringent conditions in wartime—when sumo wrestlers had to serve in the labor corps and food was scarce, so the chankonabe or wrestlers' stew must have been quite thin—then he was drafted by the army.

He was back in sumo after Japan's surrender and appeared in a minor meet in Osaka in June 1946. But he had lost his touch and fared badly.

Giving up his sumo career, Ozaki became an interpreter for the Occupation Forces. Back in 1962, he was said to be running a hotel in Tokyo's Fukagawa section.

Ozaki will remain as the only Japanese from the United States to wrestle in sumo's major league, unless Sadao Isomura of Hawaii gets up there. Isomura, known as Tamayama, is in the sandanme division down in the minors.

Besides Isomura and Kihachiro, foreigners in Japanese sumo today include Ryuhel takenaka of Brazil, known as Tatsunishiki, and Carl Martin of California, christened Arawa for sumo. Takenaka is in the jondan class and Martin is a sandanme.

Kewalo Plan

Detroit architect Minoru Yamasaki believes the controversial West Kewalo Plan, although imperfect, is a step in the right direction toward upgrading the central core of Honolulu. His firm, Yamasaki & Associates, is architect-consultant to the Dillingham Corp., for its proposed 1,200-room hotel to be built next to the Ala Moana condominium as part of the plan, which has been denounced by the City Planning Dept. Yamasaki feels it is to plan for million or million-and-a-half people who will be living in the coming decades, the city will probably have to abandon the 350-foot building height limit and avoid the helter-skelter of "Waikiki all over again."

Cost of Living

According to the Tax Foundation of Hawaii, statistics show that it costs more to live and to pay taxes in Hawaii than just about any other state. In its 1970 Financial Handbook on Hawaii Government Finances, the foundation said that the cost of living in Hawaii is second to Alaska, which is top in the nation. The foundation also says that only three other states have a higher per capita tax burden than Hawaii. New York was the highest with $503 per resident while Hawaii averaged $491 per resident.

But the foundation says that the average personal income in Hawaii is $3,515 per year while the national figure is $3,421 per year.
