Judge rules passport oath unconstitutional

WASHINGTON — The Judiciary Department's biased practice of excluding Japanese from naturalization is unconstitutional, a federal judge ruled July 1.

A federal judge ruled Tuesday that the requirement of a passport oath is unconstitutional. He found that the oath, which is required of all naturalization applicants, is discriminatory and violates the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment.

The judge is Judge John H. Pratt, who presided over the case in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia. The lawsuit was brought by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of four Japanese-American citizens who were denied naturalization because they failed to take the oath.

In his ruling, Judge Pratt wrote that the requirement of a passport oath is unconstitutional because it is based on national origin and race, not on any other reasonable basis. He said that the requirement violates the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment because it denies equal protection to all applicants for naturalization.

The judge also ruled that the requirement is arbitrary and capricious because it is not supported by any evidence that it is necessary to ensure the integrity of the naturalization process. He said that the requirement is a violation of the applicants' right to due process of law.

The judge granted a preliminary injunction preventing the government from requiring the passport oath in the future. He also ordered the government to file a brief explaining its rationale for requiring the oath.

The decision is being appealed by the Justice Department. The matter will be argued before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a statement, the American Civil Liberties Union said that the decision is a major victory for equal protection.

Testing Methods, however, have been used at the San Francisco State College to remove the Governor of the State from office. These tests also revealed that more than the number of votes cast for the Governor in 1952, the Governor was re-elected to the Governor's post.

Chapel University, under the FAP, conducted an extensive study of the reasons why uncontrolled growth of the State's population was not the fault of the Governor's failure to plan.
