Swap feahouse for leepee, totem pole

LOS ANGELES — As a gift from the children of Los Angeles, the children of Nagoya — Los Angeles Sister City in Japan — will receive a leepee and totem pole from the Griffith Park Boys' Camp sometime late this year.

This is no ordinary gift. The children of Los Angeles recently received an authentic Japanese Teahouse from Nagoya for the Boys' Camp, So this is a little thank you. But still, a leepee? A totem pole? Where in the 20th Century can you get a totem pole?

Totem poles aren't too easy

MATTER OF A QUORUM

In most societies, the by-laws provide a quorum as large as can be depended upon to be present at every meeting. For the National JACL Council, it's a simple majority of the member chapters (48 out of 94) and the same for the Pacific Southwest District Council (14 out of 26). Our bringing up this subject of a Quorum at this time was whether the PSW had legally approved a statement urging a "no" vote on the controversial California Prop. 22—the so-called agricultural labor relations initiative. Had the statement been read without council response, we would have let this pass.

In the brief discussion that ensued, however, one delegate called for a "yes" vote to Prop. 22. Another mentioned the proposition might not appear on the ballot because of many complaints that signatures to the initiative had been fraudulently acquired and they asked to have their names removed. There were no objections on the voice vote in support of the statement but the question of a quorum being present was raised, though unofficially.

The biggest county fair in the world and bigger than our state fair in Sacramento, the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona will be attracting fhousands daily till Oct. 1. We make it a point to catch the cultural presentations and this year artisans from New Mexico demonstrating their skills in woodcarving (actually it looked like a wooden door slab), sand painting, silver jewelry and pottery had us consume more time than we had planned to spare during our one day visit. In their midst, however, was a Chinese artist drawing horses "sumi-e" style.

Each day of the fair is devoted to some segment of the population, its culture or industry—so it was German American Day, Mexican Independence Day, etc., this past Saturday. In other years, there have been Japanese American Day with Nisei Week beaules and Japanese officials as special guests. But the Iapanese touch prevails in the garden house this year with an outstanding assembly of bonsai. It's the first time we had the sensation of physically enjoying bonsai for it made us forget our aching feet. We had been tramping around the fairgrounds for five hours. There is something for everyone at the Fair—live entertainment, animals, unusual produce, rides, hobies, feature exhibits, bazaar of imported goods, fine arts, junior fair, a gold mine, etc. In a way, it's like a many-faceted diamond that only this county can be.

the initiative had been fraudulently acquired and they acked to have their names removed. There were no objections on the voice vote in support of the state ment but the question of a quorum being present was raised, though unofficially.

Robert's Rules of Order dealing with Quorum says. The chairman should not take the chair until a quorum is present ... The only business that can be transacted in the absence of a quorum is to take measures to obtain a quorum, to fix the time to which to adjourn, to adjourn, or to take a recess."

The PSWDC constitution further provides maters being presented for the first time are to be considered as "special orders" for subsequent action and only read after committee reports are concluded and before taking up unfinished business. Normally, new issues are reviewed by the district executive board and then presented with recommendations to the district council.

It was obvious to us that many of the delegates had slipped away from the meeting soon after the lunch break but no attempt was made to ascertain a quorum for the second-half. The tradition here is that once a quorum is established at the opening nour, it's duly constituted to conduct business till adjournment—so long as no one questions it and no one has to date in the many years we've covered these meetings.

Mas Hironaka, who knows Robert's Rules from long practice as district governor of many years, properly suggests a motion to reconsider as a step to clarify the situation. The other is for absent delegates to express themselves to the governor and district secretary within 30 days.

In legislative bodies, where members are paid to be present, the quorum is usually the majority, but in the English House of Commons, the quorum is really small, 40 out of 630 or about 6%, and in the House of the Lords, it's three out of about 1,000. Where the quorum is small, it becomes necessary to require notice of all bills, amendments, etc., in advance.

With JACL chapters where attracting members is difficult, quorum may not be n

NATIONAL COUNCIL MINUTES—Our remark at the recent PSW meeting that the 1972 National Council Minutes would be out by Christmas was in facetious even. Actually, except for one more report which was given orally only and has to be transcribed from the tapes, the raw minutes of all the sessions are in writing and need only some editing and organizing. As a emanter of fact, the first three sessions of the National Council have been stenciled for reproduction. We trust this sets a precedent for other Chapters hosting National Conventions.

SEOUOIA CHAPTER—Along with National President Elect Shig Sugiyama we were invited to join the Sequoia Chapter Board in honoring their President Chuck Kubokawa as an honoree in the Nisei of the Biennium program. That particular evening Ming's in Palo Alto was crowded so we shared a dining room that the book is filled with number group of about twenty people. Other Reasons

Besides the lack of incoming new members, there remains also the fact that the suspicious and cautious community will not support us morally or financially which would also I e a d us to an early demise.

Also as Jr. JACLers, we do not feel dominated by the Seniors; we a re not puppets dangling on strings. The Juniors and the Seniors are two organizations who help each other get beneficial things accomplished. Therefore, we feel that in o ur community we can achieve more of our goals by remaining Jr. JACLers than by seceding to form another organization.

We must admit that we do not know that much about the national structure. This is an unfortunate fact, but does not have to remain true. We have great hopes for the future and do not want to shut any doors of communication.

But with the increasing competition between U.S. and Japan industry, politicians who are very attuned to their constituency will start waving the yellow peril flag once more. This is where the JACL will probably have its hands full in the future, i.e. to convince the majority population that the Nikkei are not Japanese, but Japanese Americans. So this may become a personal problem for all of us Nikkei.

What concerns me even more is the fact that our government policy has taken this turn. There apparently are two extremes in the way one treats Japan. The Reischauer method is to say that Japan can do no wrong and we have to use a most gentle, but paternalistic method of handling the Japanesse. The Nixon technique on the other hand says "just ignore 2,000 years of ritual culture and treat them like we do our other friendly allies such as Greece, Spain, Europe, etc." I believe our country should be following a policy somewhat between these extremes taking into account the Oriental customs of ritual and yet not be completely overwhelmed and seduced by it so that we think they can do no wrong. The Japanese can be just as greedy, generous, cooperative, stubborn, belligerent, peaceful and any other character as well as the American or European. One wonders who advised Nixon about the China trip. The complete disregard of faith, loyalty, and respect which the Japanese regard as very important in people to people dealings indicates that our government was completely ignorant of Japanese culture or purposely handled the situation in the way it did, which was rather callous to say the least.

QUIET NO MORE—I'm not quite sure just how this is all going to turn out. In the meantime, however, it has been a potpourri of evolving revelations and additional insights, peeling off veneers of shibboleths, all generously interspersed with turmoil and much frustration. Since last tyear I have been patiently (and underline that word) working as part of a community minority group whose size and composition seem to fluctuate like a blob of ameoba—the only constant is that the group of some 30 or 40 is entirely Black except for a Puerto Rican here and there. And, this lone Oriental.

In the group are those who have engaged in numerous "sit-in's" in government facilities, some who have gone unexpectedly on a Sunday morning to a church to stand before a shocked congregation to dechurch to stand before a shocked congregation to demand reparations, a former leader of the Black Panthers (a fellow who "has his head together"); a number of names are Muslim; dashiki's and Afro's are prevalent and the jargon is of the grass-roots, so to speak, with unabashed use of four-and-more-letter words. Heard frequently enough, these words begin to have specialized meaning and emphasis—although because the meanings can be elusive, I personally opt for a defined, precise and established jargon. (Which rule I shall proceed to violate with impunity in this and other writings.)

The most troubling aspect of this group is the inter-

The most troubling aspect of this group is the internecine activity that constantly goes on: open but all-too-frequent and unnecessary. Members are censured or voted off, officers are suspended or removed en-tirely from office, motives are constantly questioned: as a result, meetings tend to be chaotic and results are excruciatingly slow to realization and even then are tenuous.

At the outset I had hoped that the members would become weary of this sort of jockeying and bickering, that once some people went through this phase and got things off their chests that we could get down to business in some orderly fashion, that meetings wouldn't run four and five hours with very little beng accomplished. I was determined to "keep my cool".

But I failed.

At the last meeting when one of the more vocal members continued to harrass, disrupt, monopolize, and so on, my months of simmering silence could no longer be contained and I "blew it", calling this member to task in a very un-Oriental-like loud voice emphasized with a banging of the table. I was angry with myself even as I was speaking, for permitting someone to set me off.) Well, that put me on that member's "list" and after that I was a constant target of sniping, including a name-calling in which I was labelled a so-and-so "nigger". I had ambivalent feelings about that episode.) However, by that time I was firmly determined that no one was going to rile me up and the sniping made no penetrations.

Somewhat puzzling to me, when the meeting finally broke up (after midnight) one of the other members came up to me to congratulate me. For what? For blowing my cool?

I've been called a lot of thing in my life and no doubt will continue to garner labels and epithets, but I'm still trying to figure out just what it was, precisely, that I was called the other nightt. I'm curious.

The Conversations With Japan

From the Frying Pan

VISITOR—Earlier this week Denver was visited by a contingent of some 45 to 50 men representing the Biscuit Bakers of Japan (or something like that), manufacturers of confections, purveyors of noodles, and producers of sundry other items that consume American wheat flour. Since Colorado's parched eastern plains grow a good many bushels of the type of wheat that the Japanese like, their pilgrimage to the source of their supply was laudable as an educational and goodwill venture.

A few months before that Fuji Tours International (whose president is George Togasaki) made Denver a port of call for a group of more than a hundred Japanese who make their living in the distribution and sale of meat. One of their stops was the Monfort operation an hour's drive north of Denver where up to 100,000 head of beef cattle are being grain-fattened at any one time. (I once visited a farm in Matsuzaka, Japan, where a total of 10 steers were being fattened on steamed grain in what was described as one of the largest meat-producing operations in the area.)

In between, we have had individual visitors like the delightful Prof. Kaname Saruya who is touring the country via second-hand Toyota in an effort to get a better understanding of the problems of ethnic minorities in the United States, and groups like the 100 or so students who spent a couple of weeks at the YMCA camp in Estes Park in the course of a study-vacation.

Visitors like these from Japan, bent on helping to balance the international monetary situation, may be no novelty in coastal communities like Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. But hereabouts, a thousand miles from salt water, the arrival of such foreigners is usually an occasion for alerting the celebrities and making something of a to-do. In fact, the visit of wheat-buyers was deemed important enough by the state department of agriculture to urge Frank Torizawa, the Grover Whelan of Denver's Japanese community where visitors from the old country are concerned, to set up cocktails and other refreshm the glasses filled.)

A certain curious pattern follows in each of these mass meetings as visitors and local Nisei hosts seek manfully to break the ice. It usually starts with the Japanese visitor asking, in Japanese, of course:

"Have you been in this country very long?"

That usually leads to a brief and inadequate explanation that the Nisei are the American-born, American-educated, offspring of Issei immigrants who left the old country a long time before our visitors themselves were born. I say inadequate because most of our visitors cannot seem to understand that there were such people as Issei who did indeed produce a generation of Nisei. Then the next question is:

"Do you have occasion to return to Japan often?"

With a Nisei's imperfect command of Japanese, it is difficult to point out that one cannot "return" to Japan if he didn't come from there originally. So it is wiser to overlook the fine points and say that yes, one does indeed visit Japan occasionally on business and what astonishing changes have transpired!

one does indeed visit Japan occasionally on business and what astonishing changes have transpired!

From this point the conversation turns to the wonderfully appetizing Japanese food on the table, and naturally we must see that the bartender is not left to feel neglected. Meanwhile, the Nisel hosts are kept busy explaining the ingredients of the Japanese hors d'oeuvres for the benefit of Caucasian guests, and interpreting their comments for the heaefit of the Japanese interpreting their comments for the benefit of the Ja-panese visitors. Everyone, of course, is properly genial and appreciative, but names are hard to re-member and we'll probably never see each other the United states government.

So, leaving his wife and young daughter in a government "assembly center" at the Pacific Northwest Livestock Exhibition grounds, Mr. Okada found himself in the Utah capital where he'd been ordered to live.

At first he lived with friends, then found a small apartment. "I paid six months' rent in advance," he recalled "But I hadn't been in the place more than 10 minutes, by golly, when the place was surrounded by neighbors demanding that I get out."

He tried to buy a place of neighbors demanding that I get out."

He tried to buy a place of his own. "But the only property anyone would sell me was on the westside, behind the old Union Pacific depot."

Eventually, he found a place in Murray.

Other Japanese Americans were ordered to a relocation camp called "Topax," near pelta in Millard County. Virtually prisoners of their government, they watched ... and waited.

As that first year dragged of Japanese ancestry at the ballot box—through registration and voting drives.

But with a majority of its members behind barricades—their lives and dreams seemingly twisted beyond repair—JACL faced a much larger challenge.

"Some Japanese Americans living in Utah and Idaho still had some money," Mr. Okada said the obscibled as nation-wide.

Looking back to the war league. And in 1965, the Salt lake Kiwanis Club created a mightmarish evacuation and explained, "so we pooled our small resources, and in September of 1943 organized the JACL Credit Union." Mr. Okada, national JACL treasurer since 1938, became its manager.

Pushing Logs

Without it, "I'd probably have gone back to the West of Idags of the Utah Contral Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past president of the Utah Central Credit Union, and past Filing Cabinets

He walked to a row of filing cabinets in the credit union's compact, modern office and removed an old ledger book with a worn red cover. "Here it is — Oct. 31, 1943. We started out with $1,355.50 in assets, and made the first loan the same day. It was for $100."
