At least, we have taken the first step to implement a concern that has been voiced for many years; community-based activities and programs must be developed which are responsive to the different needs of each region. Individual chapters will now be able to seek much needed and more consistent and frequent help from regional directors. In turn, regional directors will now provide an important linkage with the national office.

A LEAD THAT DIMINISHED

What do you tell a guy who finishes runner-up in an election after a valiant first attempt? We hope an election after a valuant first attempt? We nope George Takei continues to be a fit contender for an-other shot at the political plum—especially in a com-munity such as Los Angeles.

When the first returns were aired Tuesday night last week, councilmanic candidate Takei was leading by a bare 28 votes—too slim but still heartening when one considered the low-key campaign he had to carry. A half-hour later when 13% of the precincts (perhaps from those closest to City Hall where Asian Americans are in substantial numbers) were tabulated, his spread bloomed five-fold to 148 votes over Dave Cunningham. But an hour later when 50% of the precincts were counted, Cunningham (who had the personal endorse-ment of Mayor Bradley) took charge and kept surging ahead to win by a handy 1,647-vote margin.

This was an election race which gave us the old tingle as experienced before the broadcast industry tingle as experienced before the broadcast industry hauled in their computers and then declared winners within minutes after the polls close. For about an hour after the polls closed, it was impressive to savor the anticipation of a possible Takei upset victory at his humble campaign headquarters—a dry cleaning establishment at one time. We saw the Victory Party notice on their bulletin board but it will have to wait till another time. Maybe we should have gone. He could have been issuing rain checks.

When other major communities up and down the West Coast are electing Asian Americans to city hall, the City of Angels will have hers eventually. Takei was a commendable prospect. So keep the fires of

MODERNIZING GOVERNMENT

Salt Lake City

Four years ago, I was asked to serve on a committee to study the need for modernizing local government. Our committee met for many, many months throughout Salt Lake County. As a result of the committee's study, legislation was subsequently passed by the state legislature providing that local governments may adopt a different form of government if the voters of the county felt the need and so voted.

Last January, a committee of appointment consisting of representatives of the Governor, the state Senate and House, municipal league, etc., appointed 11 citizens of Salt Lake County to serve on what is now known as the Salt Lake County Study Commission. The members of the Commission purportedly represent a broad cross section of this valley and county. To my total and shocking surprise, the chairman of the appointment committee, Commission William Dunn, called and asked if I might serve as one of the 11. After requesting time to consider this ponderous undertaking, I accepted.

Since March 5, we have been meeting every Tuesday evening from 7 or 7:30 to 10:30 or as late as 11:30. We have had numerous extra meetings, particularly

We have had numerous extra meetings, particularly members of the executive committee. We have met at every high school and many junior high schools in the

We have met and interviewed every elected of-ficial in this city and county, past officials, leaders of organizations specializing in governmental activities and have had given to us voluminous material to read and have had given to us voluminous material to read and study relating to different forms and structures of county and city government.

We are next going to meet with the representatives of members of the ethnic and racial minorities at a special meeting where we hope to devote a full session to secure, hopefully, their imput. The two local JACL chapters and the Japanese Community Improvement Program, Inc., have been invited. We will see the kind of interest minorities have in what kind of govern. of interest minorities have in what kind of govern-ment is best suited for them. This imput must be given now, not after our study is completed and ready to be voted on at the next election.

By some strange coincidence, four members of our League of Women Voters were appointed to serve on this Commission. I have always had a tremendous amount of respect for League members, but now, since I have worked with them so closely, I have ten times more respect for their intelligence, dedication, and insight into problems of government than I have ever had before. One of the League members has been sitting in on every County Commission meeting for about the last four or five years. She knows more about the the last four or five years. She knows more about the Commission's work than the elected commissioners.

Interestingly, we have had a reporter for the Utah Independent, a statewide newspaper and the voice of the Independent Party of Utah and also the John Birch Society, present at every meeting of the Study Commission. Though his newspaper coverage is critical of our Commission and our direction, we consider him quite affectionately an unofficial member of our group because he has attended more meetings than any other citizen in this county.

The one thing I have found to date: that is, government is extremely important in the lives of each of us, yet, very, very few people know what government is all about and, from the number of people who have been attending our sessions, even less care.

The members of the Commission know we will be unmercifully attacked and criticized by many people when we make our recommendation to the County Commissioners; we are prepared for that but it will denly turned chilly.

No one would commit himself to that point of view.

Then someone else took note of the almost universal sense of outrage expressed by Americans of many ethnic backgrounds from all parts of the country in reaction to the Wilson faux pas, the strong editorial censure directed by newspapers against Wilson, and the swift rise in Senator Inouye's political stock—all convincing evidence that a chill in fact has not descended on us. scended on us.

Still another person offered a different sort of observation. If misuse of the word "Jap" is bugging the Pacific Citizen's treatment of the subject, then it's a darned good sign that really important problems don't exist for this minority. To put it another way, the fact that the official organ is making such a big thing of this one matter is proof that more serious issues are conspicuously absent.

You can get yourself a pretty good argument making a statement like that. For some individuals there is no issue more basic, more pressing, than to teach folk that "Jap" is a dirty word resented with a passion. This point of view espouses the idea that use of Granted that the word "Jap" has bitter and shameful historical implications, does it mean the same thing today? Anyone who saw and heard Wilson, the attorney for two top Watergate witnesses, spit out the word could not mistake the venom. There was no doubt that he was using it as a racial epithet. But there are good friends of Japanese Americans who see the JACL's stand, as exemplified by the Pacific Citizen's handling of the story, as tilting with windmills when there is so much more that might be done in a positive vein to improve the Japanese American image.

Well, what, for instance?

Well, what, for instance?

"Accent the positive," one such friend suggests.
"You people seem to be running around so much of the time trying to put out brushfires after they are started. It gives an outsider the impression that you really don't have a policy, that you are only reacting me to events as they develop. What you really need to do is set up a statement of objectives designed to make it impossible for these kinds of brushfires to get started, and then work out methods of achieving those objectives. I get the feeling your policy is basically negative—trying to stop this. Trying to head off that after it's already started. You'd be a lot better off to take the long view, spending more time working out a plan to improve things over a period of decades."

"Wait a minute," I said. "It's pretty hard to be thinking in terms of decades in the future when our history only goes back a few decades."

"That may be your trouble," he said. "You're too Americanized. You're too antsy. Don't you know you Orientals are supposed to have the virtue of patience?"

In the last two Whirl articles we briefly described two mental health projects that dealt with the Asian American population and communities. The first was a grant to create a National Asian American Federation to be organized during the next year to determine the needs of research and services as well as manpower to deal with the mental health needs of the Asian American population in the country. The second project was one pertaining to drug abuse and the needs of the second project was one pertaining to drug abuse and the needs of the statistical analysis will be in terms of delineating measures of central tendency and dispersion.

BOOK REVIEW: Allan Beekman Translation of Kamakura Classic

THE CONFESSIONS OF LADY NIJO, tr. by Karen Brazell, New York: Anchor Books, Paperback, 288 pp., $2.95.

In an illuminating introduction, the translator reveals how this book, known as Towazugatari in Japanese, was rediscovered. Towazugatari may not have been the title the authoress chose for her autobiographical account of court life during the Kamakura Period, 1185-1333), and Nijo was the rediscovered manuscript, not the true name of the lady.
