security, acceptance and human rights are tied close to American public opinion and attitude toward Japan. Again and again we have painfully experienced the mis-directive denergy and wrath of our cursions should come arms fellow citizens over policies of Japan ranging from the Oriental Exclusion Act, to Pearl Harbor, to trade policies of the '60s to whale conservation campaigns.

The fall of S-uth Vietnam raises other disturbing inter-national questions about which Japanese Americans cught to be concerned.

which Japanese Americans ought to be concerned.

"What will Japan's foreign policy toward the U.S. be in the future?"

"What will Japan's foreign policy toward the U.S. be in the future?"

"What will be the U.S. commitment to Japan' to Korea!"

"Can Japan realistically continue to rely on the U.S. for military protection?"

"Will Japan strive to rearm and be more independent of the U.S."

For Japanese Americans the question becomes — "If there to rearm and concerns."

For Japanese Americans the uestion becomes — "If there is a change in US-Japan policy, what effect will the hange have on the American ublic cpinion toward Japan nuffic cpinion toward law to place a priority on remercians?"

Positive action will be placed by the ferthcoming four chapters as refugees resettled, especially into where JACL chapters are flators in Tokyo received.

JACL, its chapters and members do to assist the refugees?

Chatting with some of the refugees at Camp Talega, one of the four areas where refugees are quartered, they'd like to have warm clothing.

The items on hand, in many instances, are too big, the wiry or frail Vietnamete being short-statured like the isset. The Buddhist Churches of America this week announced it is conducting clothing drives through its templer around the country to fill this need. While refugees were such given a pair of zoil, those a n d socks would be relecome in which to tramp round the base. While buses that between the camps, many walk in search of riends and relatives.

I took the opportunity to spend the atternoon of May 14 visiting the facilities at Camp Pendleton. I found myself to be the first legislator from either the State or Federal level to actually visit the camp. I can understand why there has been so much confusion and misunderstanding regarding the impact and disperition of the refugees. I thrught that I would share with you some of my personal observations of the creditions that I found there at the present time.

One argument against helping the refugees is that we have thousands of unemployed people right here in this cruntry — so me have not worked for months because of the recession. What do you suppose caused this recession? Do you suppose that pouring 13150 billion down the drain in Vietnam had something to do with it?

Some protests are racist in nature. Congressman Talcott (R-Salinas) stated with regards to the refugees:

Generally my district was more positive, understanding and comnassiona's than some other areas. But there is the other feeling that, damn it, we have too many offentals.

Ironically, I felt a small pain of uncertainty and carticusness develop and could not help but remember the less of an uncle and many friends during the Vietnam War which only served to strengthen the stercitypes projected through the news media. I felt it very difficult to carry this dichotemy within myself and wondered was I now beginning to develop a bigot's mentality? A quick rationalization emerged, the uncertainty of what to expect had triggered a question of can I deal with these people?

These anxieties reached a peak as the 40-mile trip to Mt. Angel came to an end. I saw, before me, children playing in a fenced enclesure, smiles, frowns, crying, as the many faces watched our approach up the narrow gravel read. The signs warning "Authorized Personnel Only" triggered off a feeling of what my parents had been through during Ww2. It was a trip back into time for me, a Sansei, to begin to view the Evacuation experience.

Madame Tin was the first individual that our group met, a teacher, mother of thirteen children, who talked about the last days in Vietnam, and the evacuation which led them to Okinawa, Guam, California and finally to Mt. Angel. Her hurband along with many other husbands stayed behind and saw to it their tamilies were safe. Their future in Vietnam is unknown.

Moscone bill for bilingual-bicultural education in Calif, passes first step

SACRAMENTO — State Sen. in the world for erasing one of eorge Moscone (D - San Francisco, San Mateo) predicted the legislature will give Gov. Brown legislation this year establishing "a landmark bilingual/bicultural program" that meets the mandate of the Courts and sets an example for rest of the Nation.

The Democratic leader in the state senate made these ecomments after the Senate Education Committee voted in favor of his bill, SB 7, in a 8-0 bipartisan vote on April 24.

the thinks about it he mutters "Gctdam sakanabetch".

This, of course, baffles Morita. It was explained to him in this manner: "Jim's father was unable to prontunce 'ecd-damned sonovab'tch' which is a very strong cath. So he said 'Gotdam sakanabetch' which is about the closest he can come to it I'm not sure that there is a Japanese equivalent. Perhaps you will have to explain that he swore an oath, a very had cath, but because he misprencunced the words the effect was ridiculous."

If Morita can make something amusing of that epische without a lot of longwinded explanations, he certainly will have demonstrated his skill as a translator. No matter how hard we try, translations often fail to project the essence, the feel, of language, and this unfortunately leads to inadequate communication if not misunderstanding. Even on such story of a Nisel's life.

The Moscone bill appropriates $88 million in State funds over the next three school years for establishing elementary school level bilingual/bicultural programs and related teacher training activities. Present bilingual programs are dependent on a combination of local and federal funds.

Book Review

EIGHT RECENT ARRIVALS

Here are eight recent additions to our book shelf. These mini-reviews we offer as a change of pace.

As the first book to provide English-speaking readers with a critical account of three important poets is THREE CONTEMPORATE POETS halks sequence with pep & Anyal Hinghi, Shi slight Face

RARY JAPANESE POETS
Anzai Hitoshi, Shi aishi Kazuko and Tanikawa Shun aro, translated by Graeme Wilson and Ataumi kuko for London Magazine. POEMS FROM KOREA, compiled and translated by Peter H. Lee (Allen & Unwin, London), presents a comprehensive anthology from the Silla Dynasty (57 BC) to mid-20th Century. Both works are also a part of the UNESCO collection. Henry Mittwer, on elime Los Angeles resident, discusses more than 100 flowers suitable for the tea ceremony in THE ART OF CHABANA (Tutile: $12), explaining how to use them and names the most appropriate seasons for display. Besides 12 full-color paintings by Takashi Nomura and 32 bow sketches by Yoshiko Akai, Mittwer adorns the text with his translations of Japanese prose and poetry.
