Symbolic trek to Harmony set

Seattle, Wa.
November 25 has been proclaimed a Day of Remembrance for Camp Harmony (a World War II internment camp for Nikkei) by the City Council and Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle.

"The City of Seattle acknowledges and condemns the constitutional and moral violations perpetrated against persons of Japanese descent during World War II," the joint resolution states, and "... wholeheartedly supports a day of remembrance... denoting the physical and emotional pain suffered by those that were imprisoned."

The day is to begin at noon with a symbolic caravansary to end up at the Puyallup Fairgrounds (the site where Camp Harmony was located), in the first JACL-sponsored re-creation of the Evacuation process.

The event is expected to give JACL's Redress campaign welcome national publicity. It will be on ABC TV news show "20/20," and the Seattle Times will give the subject major spread in its Sunday edition, among other media coverage being planned.

At Puyallup, there will be exhibitions, a program of speakers and entertainment and a potluck supper. Among those participating are:

- Arlene Ok, special assistant to the Mayor;
- Ron Mamuya, National Redress committee man;
- Floyd Schmoe, of American Friends Service Committee;
- Cherry Knooshi, past president, Seattle JACL; and
- Dr. Min Masuda, host for the speakers' program at Puyallup.

$2.5 million center for San Francisco Japantown sought

By JOE OYAMA
(Special to the Pacific Citizen)

San Francisco

A very dedicated panel of Nikkei representing the Japanese Cultural and Community Center of Northern California (JCCNC) presented their proposal and appealed to assembled Nihonmachi residents for their support to construct a new $2.5 million center complex for Japantown here. They also asked for help with ideas, fund raising and policy making.

The meeting, held Nov. 3 in the Hospitality Room of the California First Bank in Japan Center, opened with JCCNC board president Dave Asano briefly exposuring its eight-year history. Since the early 1970s the committee has been meeting with dreams of building the center. Since then many committee members have come and gone, but last April a townhall meeting was held with people of all ages and all Nihonmachi organizations represented.

Since then over 200 Nikkei have joined JCCNC and their goal is to enroll 1,000 new paid-up members by the year's end. Due range in categories of $5 per to $500 for membership.

On the panel discussing the proposals for the new center were Steve Nakao, moderator, Barbara Sakai, attorney David Yamakawa, Bob Kyiyo, Marshall Sumida, vice-president in charge of finance; Hanako Yanagi, Seizo Oka, and David Asano.

Since the City of San Francisco is "the Gateway to the Orient" and many Japanese from the world over are also found here, the JCCNC has been working to bring more cultural heritage projects to San Francisco.

Grants available for ethnic heritage studies projects

Washington

The Ethnic Heritage Studies Program of the U.S. Office of Education is now accepting applications for new projects for 1979, announced Mark Tajima, Washington coordinator for the Pacific/Asian Coalition. The Ethnic Heritage Studies Program seeks to develop intercultural understanding within society.

For fiscal year 1979, Congress appropriated $2 million for some 60 projects, each ranging between $4,000 and $60,000. Typical projects may be proposed in one or more of the following categories:

1. Development of ethnic heritage curriculum materials.
2. Development of ethnic heritage academic programs.
3. Development of ethnic heritage research projects.
4. Development of ethnic heritage cultural events.
5. Development of ethnic heritage community programs.

U.S. has its first Nikkei woman to go

Honolulu

Hawaii has its first female—and the nation's first Nikkei woman—lieutenant governor in Jean Sadako King, who was on the winning Democratic gubernatorial ticket with incumbent George Ariyoshi Nov. 7. King, who moved from the State Senate, is an attractive "balm" of Scotch English-Japanese ancestry with premature grey hair. Upon seeing her for the first time, people are often surprised that she is not a blonde as newspaper photographs had led them to believe.

Other results of the general elections leave Hawaii with 11 Nihonmachi in the State Senate out of 25 seats; and 30 in the House of Representatives out of 51 seats.

There are three Nikkei on the nine-member Honolulu city council. Four out of nine Grants totaling $1,002,675 to organizations for training of persons to use these activities with persons and organizations that have similar interests in ethnic studies. Each proposal must be developed through consultation with the participation of an advisory council that is representative of the ethnic group or groups with which the project is concerned.

In order to be approved, a proposed project must take into account the heterogeneity of the Nation, the differing and unique characteristics of the national heritage made by each ethnic group, and “the fact that in a multiethnic society the founding of the contributions of one’s own heritage and those of one’s fellow citizens can contribute to a more harmonious, patriotic, and committed populace.”

The closing date for submitting applications is Jan. 5, 1979. Information and forms may be obtained from:

Five Things ‘Wrong’ with JACL

Editor’s Comment

This is NOT Dr. Nakashima’s first letter to the Pacific Citizen, but this is the first time his letter has been passed around for possible commentary by a number of people in the organization for presentation as a “think piece” for the Fourth Friday Focus.

Because it appears to address a fundamental question facing the JACL, as it prepares for a Constitutional Convention in 1979-80, Dr. Nakashima’s letter is our way of kicking off this special focus on Japan. There is a people who have an almost nothing which would help them to plan their futures in a positive way.

There may be other things “wrong” with JACL and life in general—but it can be otherwise—for what is then the JACL to strengthen itself as an organization—the Pacific Citizen seems to be distinctly separate from the rest of the citizenry. Fortunately, this does not seem to be the case from what I can see at the “grass roots” level.

The Fourth Thing wrong with the JACL is that it seems to go out of its way to look for the worst in its fellow Americans. I remember when someone found a Japanese company’s name abbreviated on page listing stocks an “jap...” and inferred that in this country is the fact of trust among its citizens. I think much of what is published in the Pacific Citizen contributes to this attitude which reflects an “us versus them” orientation. The JACL as represented by the Pacific Citizen seems to be in a separate the grass roots level.

The Fifth Thing wrong with the JACL is that it accepts criticism and dissent poorly. Anyone who moves against the grain of the organization invites blame. Those who have different opinions usually have to present them in the oblique, subduced language to be safe. The JACL seems to strive to have its members think and speak in the same way. I think many are always ready to speak if they disagree with the leaders’ views.

The JACL is the only formal organization for Japanese Americans that is secular and national. In the past it provided an important function in its efforts to protect the rights of its members, and it still does, but we must think of what else we need presently and in the future.

I do not agree with Dr. Saito that we need more committees. What we need are people whom we can look up to. The JACL, I regret to say, is not one. The JACL does not present the whole picture of what life can be like in this country for a Japanese American. The message in these pages seems to be that awareness of discrimination should be the key of our lives. This is what I want to teach my children for fear of crippling them before they find out for themselves what the truth is.

I am not saying that discrimination does not exist, but my wife and I have relatives which give it different weight than you do. There needs to be some balance added to the Pacific Citizen so that it can be understood. The JACL could do so much more, but there are a lot of good things going for them too. Our grandparents have left us and our parents are leaving us a legacy of which bitterness is a small part.

William Nakashima, M.D.
Yuba City, Ca.

Ethnic focus a ‘must’

By Paul Tsuneishi
Pacific Southwest Governor

Dr. William Nakashima does us a service by questioning our weekly newspaper, stressing that (1) the PC teaches us to look at the whole of life from a racial viewpoint, (2) that JACL deals almost exclusively with the past, and that (3) JACL does not present clearly what life in America can be for a Japanese American.

I suppose in our society that some of us are more equal than others, and others would like to believe we live in the land of milk and honey, but the reality is that race and religion are too much in our lives. We must think of what else we need presently and in the future.

I am sure that many regular contributors to the PC wonder from time-to-time, “Why bother, does anyone read my articles anyway?” I know I wonder, but I continue to write in the hope that someone, somewhere does listen.

Sansei success stories

By Lily Okura

Nail Vice President for General Operations

I am inclined to agree with Dr. Nakashima. I trust you will recall that we discussed some of the positive things which the Sansei are accomplishing. Though this conversation took place in the lobby of the hotel during August, while attending the EXECOM meeting. I told you about a case—Sansei who had set his objectives and goals, started working for a franchise “Burger house” and he began improving his own work and environment by getting the other employees involved. He then had an interview with the Manager. He was recognized by his superiors and then was offered a position from a friend of his superiors because of his initiative and managerial abilities.

There is another success story about a young Sansei who dropped out of college to become a dancer in Hollywood. She eventually returned “home” and opened up a dance studio. Her business is flourishing and obviously different weight. Our grandparents have left us and our parents are leaving us a legacy of which bitterness is a small part.

Corporation's success stories and/or stories about Sansei. There must be many, many stories that have not been uncovered. It is so easy for us to blame our own weaknesses and mistakes. We must begin to teach our future leaders that perseverance and initiative are character building virtues.

Rephrase the Question

By Anna Peterson
PC Board, Midwest Representative

What’s wrong with JACL? The question might be better phrased: Is JACL making progress? The articles that appear in the PC reflect Japanese American concerns, but only concerns of those JACL who feel more comfortable with Anglo values. The JACL has not contributed their warm tones to these pages.

We need to see more of these pages tend to be cool and sprinkled with rancor. The JACL should present the susciptious attitude toward Americans. I think Mr. Saito might have added that one major problem in this country is that there is a lack of trust among its citizens. In hope of what is published in the Pacific Citizen contributes to this attitude which reflects an “us versus them” orientation. The JACL as represented by the Pacific Citizen seems to be distinctly separate from the rest of the citizenry.

YE EDITOR’S DESK: Harry K. Honda

Banging Away

Whether it was coincidence or not, the timely appearance in last week’s Third Friday edition of the “The Family” column in which our good friend and former office board chairman, Harry K. Honda, editor, wrote of his family’s move into the early Jewish neighborhood on First Street East of Figueroa in the 1930’s. And as we mentioned in a previous column, he was able to buy packages of nail polish because of his father’s position as a shoe repairman and teacher of the trade. For Harry, being able to get something to eat was more important than staying off his feet, preferring to sleep and rest, getting up at mealtimes and keeping his thoughts to himself while at Minami Keirn Home.

Dad came to America in 1900 and was a shoe repairman all his life, picking up the trade in San Francisco before the “Fire” (there were probably more Japanese cobblers there about that time than Japanese cooks). His first shop in Los Angeles was at 4th and Main near the fringes of the older Little Tokyo based at 6th and Grand in the 1910’s. By the 1920’s, he married mother and the family moved into the Jewish neighborhood on Temple St. west of Figueroa. We still remember dad wouldn’t drop the price for fixing shoes. If someone haggled over the price, he’d tell them to go over the hill where they might find the price they wanted on Main Street. People who knew Civic Center Los Angeles before the freeways and the Music Center will recall Temple Street east of Figueroa was steeper than it is today.

The family (I was in service—among the rarest West Coast Nisei who were not evacuated) was relocated to Rohwer, Ark., WRA Center during the war. He worked for the co-op fixing shoes and taught others the trade. For about a decade after returning to Los Angeles, he and another took over a “leather repair” shop that was closed in the mid-1950’s. A man who wielded a hammer for a half-century, he wouldn’t give up even in retirement—bent on fixing things, mind you. I believe along with the family they might find the price they wanted on Main Street. People who knew Civic Center Los Angeles before the freeways and the Music Center will recall Temple Street east of Figueroa was steeper than it is today.

The ideals and visionaries, foolish enough to throw caution to the wind and express their order and faith in some supreme deed, have advanced mankind.

Who's 'The Greatest'?

O'Neill, Vice President Walter Mondale and the Friday before the election, President Jimmy Carter.

High-toned or not, campaigning costs money, winning costs more. Smoley's total expenses are estimated at about $250,000. Matsui's at close to $400,000.

It's a commentary on American politics today that these sums were spent seeking a job with a base pay of $15,000 per term.

In ANY FIELD, a 36-year-old member of Congress has a right to expect a long future. A 36-year-old member of Congress has a right to expect a long future.

Philadelphia,IF ONE WERE to conduct a curbside poll of Nisei to rank Asian Americans, I somewhat suspect that a great majority of them would place Nisei at the top, regardless of the category selected. Such ethnic favoritism is certainly understandable, for it is by no means unnatural for a particular ethnic group to think of itself as "the greatest." And in this context, yes, I think the Nisei are "the greatest", being, as I am, a Nisei.

FOR EXAMPLE, take the area of educational level; we Nisei are the highest, right? Well, not exactly. Quite a ways back, O'Neill, Vice President Mondale, and the Friday before the election, President Jimmy Carter.

LIMITATIONS ON LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

We have received various inquiries from chapters regarding the limitations on fund-raising and expenditures concerning the REDRESS Campaign. The JACL is currently classified as a Section 527 organization, subject to the "substantial test" regarding its lobbying activities. This means that if the Internal Revenue Service makes a determination that an organization is substantially engaging in lobbying and advocacy, the organization may lose its status. There are no hard and fast guidelines as to what constitutes "substantial," although the upper limits have been established. Therefore, the policy up to this point has been to avoid any lobbying and advocacy except in minor instances.

Because of our commitment to the REDRESS Campaign expressed at the Salt Lake Convention, we have decided that an election under the Tax Reform Act be made. The election would allow us more flexibility to conduct lobbying and advocacy activities. If the election is made, it would set forth specific limitations on the organization's lobbying activities.

The lobbying non taxable amount for each year is twenty percent of the organization's exempt purpose expenditures for the prior year, plus 15 percent of the third $500,000 plus 5 percent of any additional expenditures. The limit is $1,000,000 per year.

Within the limits outlined above, a separate limitation is placed on "grass roots lobbying." The "grass roots" permissible expenditure (taxable amount) is one fourth of the "lobbying" expenditures determined under the formula above. "Grass roots lobbying" refers to "any attempt to influence any legislation by attempting to affect the opinions of the general public or any segment of it." This is supposed to "direct lobbying" which is defined as "any attempt to influence any legislation by communicating with any member or employee of a legislatively body, or with any government official or employee who may participate in the formulation of the legislation."

Our accountants have advised us to postpone filing of the election pending investigation of the 501(c)(4) arm of the JACL. If the JACL makes the decision to form the 501(c)(4) arm before the end of the fiscal year, it would eliminate the necessity of filing the election. The election may be made at any time during the fiscal year, and will be made only if there is danger that our lobbying expenditures will be nearing the limits.

In any case, it is important that records be kept as to lobbying expenditures. We therefore recommend that chapter presidents keep an accurate account of all expenses and income relating to the REDRESS Campaign and other lobbying activities. This should include overhead, travel, mailing, and other expenses of similar nature devoted to lobbying. Further, any funds collected for REDRESS should be placed in a separate account.

Since all chapters are autonomous, each chapter has a limitation on its lobbying expenditures. If it is determined that your particular chapter is in danger of reaching the limitations, please inform National Headquarters as soon as possible. If you need the limitations, the chapter may have to file its own election.

We are also requesting information as to whether your chapter is incorporated or not. Please send copies of your Articles of Incorporation for our records. If you have further questions, please do not hesitate to contact National Headquarters.

CHAPTER HISTORY PROJECT CONTINUING

The Arizona JACL chapter history project, chaired by Hatsuye Miyachi (8116 N 48th, Glendale, Az 85302), is still looking for old photos, books, papers and documents that members may wish to leave with the project.

JACL has been asked by Arizona State University’s history department to help sponsor a grant for qualified students in the field of U.S.-Japan relations. A $500 award has been recommended to a student who presents a qualified paper.

ASU Center for Asian Studies will sponsor its annual Asia Night program Jan. 21 ... Toshi Chavers, board member, recently taught a sushi class. Oriental Food Center donated the fish used in the lessons. The new old board meets next Dec. 6 (first Wednesday), 7:30 p.m. at the JACL Hall. The annual Christmas party for children is scheduled Dec. 10, 1:30 p.m. and the mochitsuki on Dec. 30.

The chapter membership for 1978 was an all-time high of 468. At the same time, new rates for dues in 1979 were announced as $20 single, $39 couple.

Meanwhile, the Arizona JAYS started their membership drive for youth between ages 13 and 19. The JAYS are also soliciting ads for the PC Holiday Issue. New officers are:

Diane Okabayashi, pres; Julie Okabayashi, vp; Karen Chavers, sec; Deneise Okabayashi, treas; Glenn Togooto, adj of arms; Tommy Tanui, adv.

TEDDY AND NANCY TANAKA SHOW A HIT!

Helping to meet Contra Costa JACL’s commitment to raise $10,000 for the East Bay Issei Housing Project, the recent Japan Center benefit show featuring Teddy and Nanci Tanaka from Hawaii netted over $3,000, according to chapter president William Nakatani.

Support from the community was outstanding in view of the program being a Sunday evening affair. Chapter people most responsible for staging the fund-raiser were Dan and Gerry Uesugi of El Cerrito.

Meantime, the chapter membership drive is underway with the new rates being $21 single, $38 couple, according to John Shinagawa, membership chairperson.

Nominated to nine two-year vacancies on the chapter board of directors were Tom Arirna, David Fujita, Gilbert Kitsuda, William Nakatani, Teru Shibata, Ben Takeghi, Esther Takeuchi, Bill Tsurumoto and Don Uejo. Jerry Irie was nominating committee chairperson.

ORIGAMI FOR THE HOLIDAYS INCLUDED

Detroit JACL’s thick newsletter (12 pages), including recap of the convention from the delegates’ viewpoints and news items of chapter events, was embellished with a two-page spread of origami: how to make a Christmas tree and how to fold a Santa Claus.

A Hallowe’en party for youngsters Oct. 29 was sponsored by the Detroit JAYS under leadership of Ann Togasaki and with help of advisers Ron & Kathy Yee and Gerry Shimoura. The Christmas party is slated for Dec. 10, 2-4 p.m., at Brightmoor Community Center.

The chapter fall general meeting to elect new officers was scheduled Nov. 5 at Brightmoor with Mrs. June Otsuago organizing the Japanese potluck supper.

About 300 attended the chapter picnic last July. The chapter is offering another PCY A scholarship to a local high schooler who should check with Min Togasaki (851-3014) soon for details.

- San Diego

MEMBERSHIP DUES UP SLIGHTLY AND A BONUS

Caught up in the Spirit of ‘78 to battle inflation (6% limit on prices, 7% limit on wage increases), the San Diego JACL board voted to hold down any increase in local dues because of the $4.50 mandated increase to National dues. This was accomplished by the chapter picking up the increase as the 1979 dues structure indicates:

Simple—$17.70 (S7 last year); Mr. & Mrs. —$38 (S30 last year); Senior Citizen—$15; Senior Mr. & Mrs. —$28; Student—$5; Associate—$20; 100 Club—$50; Century Club—$100; Corporate—$250, 500, 1,000.

The chapter board announced a free copy of a San Diego Historical Society monograph on the history of the San Diego Nikkei will be added as a 1979 membership bonus. Material is drawn from 10 years of research by Don Estates, City College instructor in history and a former San Diego JACL president.

The San Diego JACL and Nisei VFW Post will co-sponsor a New Year’s Eve party at the VFW Post Hall, 541 E. 24th St., National City. Music and light refreshments will be provided.

INTRODUCING OUR NEW INTEREST

“Even though you bank in San Francisco, you can cash a check in Los Angeles”

“Our computer system enables us to cash your check if you have an account with us in San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego—at any of over 100 branches around the state.”

Ben Matsui is a senior vice president in our operations department.

So he knows our statewide computer system very well. This system means that one California First teller takes care of nearly all of your banking transactions—from cashing a check to accepting a loan payment.

California First, the former Bank of Tokyo of California, is now a statewide bank with over 100 branches.

The life of Lyle Kurisaki reads like a fiction thriller.

Son of a prominent Issei businessman and community leader, he was raised in upper middle class comfort in Hollywood along with the jaded children of the movie colony. The outbreak of World War II found Lyle a student at Holly­wood High School. At the age of 17, he trained with the famed 442nd Regimental Combat Team in Shelby, Mississippi. After Japan’s surrender, he was stationed in Tokyo, where he was assistant operation officer at Sugamo Prison. He left the Army as a major and sought a career in law enforcement. Kurisaki received degrees from the Univ. of North and western Univ. in criminology. In 1950, he became an agent for the U.S. Department of Treasury. Two years later he was handpicked by Utah Gov. ve. R. Bracken Lee as special state investigator.

It seems almost inconceivable that 18 years later, Kazuki Lyle Kurisaki, one of the sons of founder of the Japanese American Citizens League, found himself serving time at the Calif. Institute for Men at Chino. But he did. During that gap of 18 years between his law enforcement career and prior knowledge, Kurisaki said a lot of people thought he was killed in crime a long time before he actually was.

He finally “became a criminal” in 1955. As the owner of a private gambling club in Ogden, he bought and sold stolen property and often planned thefts of high demand items.

“"I guess I was a3; idealist too,” said Kurisaki. “The reason I quit being a federal agent was the graft and corruption I saw. It was even worse at the state level.”

After giving up on law enforcement Kurisaki purchased “Star Pool and Lunch” in Salt Lake City, which quickly became a social center for much of Utah’s Japanese American youth. He also organized five National JACL Bowling Tournaments and was active in promoting all types of Nikkei sports activities in Utah.

issues (redress, internment credits, Japan-American relations) today arise out of things that have happened or are happening today that are of concern to JACLers, and their resolution affects almost all Japanese Americans.

Again, I do believe a careful reading of the content of PC rather clearly shows that current situations (Nisei retirement, discrimination cases, Chapter supported scholarships, etc.) are being shared in a substantive manner.

I RATHER SUSPECT that the third area of Dr. Nak­ shima's concerns is one that could be better developed in the PC ... that life is changing for our children, and there are good things happening despite our recent past.
I disagree, however, with his last sentence in which he states, "Our grandparents have left us and our parents are leaving us a legacy of which bitterness is really a small part." I do not differentiate too much between bitterness and anger, and I submit that the anger has been driven deep within us and the only therapy (I speak as a layman) is for JACL to be constructively angry through the PC as well as other channels to affirm our­selves and others.

And the "strokes" are clearly still there for Kurisaki.
He is respected by the residents of the half-way house and by politicians and government officials who become familiar with his new line of work.

Today, Kurisaki is busy planning a television series on crime with criminals playing the major roles. It is scheduled for filming next year by KCET, Channel 28, and will be called "Pros and Cons." It will be the ultimate "stroke," Kuris­ saki said.

"I'm a very lucky man, every fantasy I've had, I've made come true," he said.
"I'm an ex-con and they're asking me to produce a television show. Now, how many ex-cons can say that?"

BOOK REVIEW: 'Man Who Skied Down Everest'

Making life meaningful

One does not have to be a skier to fully appreciate THE MAN WHO SKIED DOWN EVEREST, by Yuichiro Miura with Eric Pearlman (San Francisco: $10.00, Harper & Row), nor does one need to be an adventurer. It is not a book about skiing. It is not about life itself. Yuichiro Miura is a philosopher, a poet.

What he did was to bring into sharp focus the meaning of man's existence on earth. Staring into the possibility of death, life's warm memories are sharpened. In the final analysis, life is meaningful only because by caring for others we care for ourselves. There are ample challenges in life without overcoming other individuals, or a nation such as in a war.

It was the most unlikely beginning for a major expedition—without capital, without equipment, with only a dream in a man rapidly approaching middle age. When the team was finally assembled, it was the weakest in the history of Mount Everest expeditions. Only about half of the team had even been to the mountains. Most of them had never experienced winter mountains in Japan without skis.

Miura put on his skis at 26,516 foot elevation. The weather was wind-ripped ice. Because the air is so thin, and with the wind at his back he feels nothing. In about six seconds he reaches between 110 and 125 miles per hour. He pops his parachute, but there is nothing for the chute to hold on. It drags along uselessly behind him. He maneuvers his skis desperately trying to establish braking procedure—changing directions, trying a diagonal side slip, and even a smooth straight gliding. Getting down a snow strip he plunged downward. He descends more than 6000 feet in two minutes.

Yuichiro Miura's hero is apparently Miyamoto Musashi, Japan's greatest swordswoman who was also a master poet, painter, and sculptor. Like a master swordswoman, Miura seeks the dreams of glory and transient beauty. He was in danger of losing both because he had made up his mind to live that way.

Miura lives close to and in tune with the earth. He believes that youth must try its strength against the uncompromising hand of nature because only through testing and tempering young people come to know who they are and what they are capable of doing.

The book is eminently suited for today's reading. —C.I. Uyeda, M.D.

Hayward economist pens book on Japan

Tokyo

Robert S. Ozaki, professor in economics at Cal State University-Hayward, is the author of The Japanese Cultural Perspective: A Year in the High Mountains, $1,300, which a Japan Times reviewer found "in my opinion the most enjoyable reading," denying an iron law of social science that an economist cannot write a book about being read easily and with interest.

The short, clear sentences can be understood without difficulty by the non-native speakers of English, yet what he says "makes Japan tick" is a cut above the usual unmasking of paradoxical or enigmatic Japanese, notes reviewer Paul Henries.

Sociolinguist's help

A fascinating exploration of the relationship of the Japanese language to psychology and culture by sociolinguist Takan Suzuki of University of California, Berkeley. The book has been translated by Dr. Akira Miura, the associate professor of English at the University of Wisconsin. The book is enriched with short stories by Professor Suzuki. The book is in JAPANESE AND THE JAPANESE: Words in Culture.

Professor Suzuki's JAPANESE AND THE JAPANESE: Words in Culture is a valuable book for anyone who wants to absorb the essence of the Japanese language and culture. The book is a must for anyone who wants to learn the Japanese language.

ft., and emphasized the fact that he would not be the architect for the proposed building. "Noby Nakamura would be a strong candidate for the architecture," he reiterated.

A model of the proposed complex and sketches of the interior main building were shown. The complex would not have a parking lot since there is now a large, 2,000-car parking lot under Japan Center a block away.

The shell and first floor would consist of a large meeting area, an informal assembly area, and an airy study. The building of a gymnasion would be optional.

The preliminary architectural sketches were impressive—high ceilings, glass enclosed, a wonderful place to take your friends. The complex is tentatively named the Issai Memorial Center, sturdy smaller buildings to flank the main building.

City zoning regulations restrict the building to three stories and must include social service and recreation. The residents were humbly asked as to what type of service and recreation they wanted. Yanagi stated that according to the latest census report, 9,400 Japanese currently reside in San Francisco, and that there was a 25 per cent response to the preliminary survey sent out by the committee.

To the assembled people, one of the panel members said, "We will be better than you. We are here to ask for your help. We want suggestions, new members, and we need help for fund raising. The community would decide the criteria for membership," Yanagi said and asked for "community input for policy making."

Yamakawa explained that if redevelopment funds were received, certain restrictions would be inevitable. Tenants for the center, for example, would be limited to nonprofit, religious and welfare organizations.

Economic unrest seen in Japan in coming decade

Tokyo

Japanese business leaders are anticipating abrupt changes in their country during the next 10 years.

That finding is based on a survey conducted by the Japan Committee on Economic Development of the managers of 264 of Japan's leading companies.

In the survey, managers were asked their opinions on issues that could greatly influence Japan's economic environment in the coming decade.

Concerning the political environment over the next 10 years, 67% of those surveyed believed the present one-party system may be replaced by the Liberal Democrats, which would collapse. A large 63% said strife between corporations and the public will intensify, causing stronger government intervention. More than half of the sample agreed there would be a 3% increase in the share of defense expenditures in the GNP, and a recurrence of the oil crisis.

An optimistic 23% said that Japan's GNP could catch up with the United States GNP, while 32% disagreed. However, 85% agreed that stabilized growth of the economy will resume after adjustments in the industrial structure are made.

Aoi-me no O-Ningyosan

Japan Times

Fifty years ago, the United States sent 12,000 blue-eyed dolls as goodwill gifts to Japan. But most fell victim to anti-American hysteria of World War II, often being burnt or "executed" in public. About 20 of the remaining dolls reappeared at a Tokyo department store on Aug. 15, the 53rd anniversary of Japan's defeat in WW2. Kuniko Arayashi, 56, of Tokyo seen holding a doll, remembers carrying one of the dolls in welcome parade in Yokoyama. Japan sent 68 Japanese dolls to the U.S. in 1927 in return; 18 of them often sent to the United States on 15th anniversary of Japan's defeat in World War II.
