Viet refugee-Texas crabbers clash over fishing sites

Seadrift, Tex.

Most of the 100 Vietnamese who sought a new life in 7 this Gulf coast town, about 50 miles north of Corpus Christi, have fled because local feuding has left one dead.

Two of the 25 families remain but others are unsure whether to return, according to a Vietnamese spokesman.

One outraged Baltimore, Md. restaurant owner who employed most of the Vietnamese in a local crab-packing plant, Bo Brooks of Texas, asked the U.S. Civil Rights Commission to intervene.

Local residents blame Vietnamese crabbers and shrimpers for ignoring unwritten rules against trespassing on other crabbers' trap-lines but police have blamed "two or three troublemakers on each side

Billy Joe Aplin, 35, a crabber, was shot to death Aug. 3 during an argument at the dock. Hours later, a Seadrift home occupied by Thai Van Nguyen was fire-bombed, though damage was slight, and four Vietnamese fishing boats were burned. Sau Van Nguyen, 21, and his younger brother, Chinh Van Nguyen, 20, charged with the murder, were arrested and held at the Port Lavaca jail in lieu of $75,000 bond.

Immigration of a large, non-English speaking population into small towns is a tender matter which Asian Americans have a natural concern, their own history within the past century still fresh in memory. lin's death would detonate similar outbursts in a half dozen fishing towns along the Gulf coast where more than 4,000 refugees are seeking new lives.

Dr. Van Chau Nguyen, director of a Catholic resettlement office in Beaumont, hoped what happened at Seadrift doesn't continue elsewhere. He remained noncommital because of the 'very delicate" situation.

Alpin's death has become a symbol of local fishermen, who now ask, "Why did they dump them all on us?" to quote Alpin's widow, Judy. That bay was overfished already.

Looking into the future, Seadrift city councilman and a seafood businessman F.J. Cunningham noted the limited resources in San Antonio Bay and the hardship the local people face when the Vietnamese expand from crabbing to shrimping as he speculated, "They are going to completely take over the seafood industry within 10 years.

Fifty miles away in Rockport, where the refugee population has grown to about 500, one seafood businessman told the Dallas Times Herald he is refusing to buy shrimp from Vietnamese in his attempt to freeze them out. Another said other shrimpers would refuse to sell to him if he bought catches from the Vietnamese.

On the other hand, there were seafood dealers in Rockport who buy regularly from Vietnamese, who are regarded as hard-working, and "the last thing they want is trouble," according to Lou LeBlanc of Surfside Seafoods.

One rumor widely circulated in the coffee shops in recent weeks was quickly denied by the area's congress-had it that Vietnamese received government subsidies for new boats and cars.

Victor Morales, 18-yearold bait vendor, observed the Vietnamese work hard and save to buy newer and bigger boats. "One guy started with a 20-ft. skiff and a few traps. The next year he had a new boat and hundreds of traps," Morales said.

The Seadrift city council had imposed a 9 p.m. curfew to cool town tempers on Saturday after the violence erupted Aug. 3. It was lifted six days later, after more tension was caused by the curfew, which affected all in the town of 1,300. A Saturday night country western dance at a nearby town was disrupted.

Three local commercial fishermen were charged Aug. 8 with possession of an explosive device and held in lieu of $50,000 bail at the Calhoun County jail. They had intended to blow up the packing plant, the police said.

Leon Ruthenberg, Baltimore owner of the packing plant, was here Aug. 8, complaining the Vietnamese lacked police protection. "Who in the hell's going to protect them?" he asked. This is a town terrorism. They're not going to come back into this." But it was Ruthenberg's hope to plead man, Rep. Joe Wyatt Rumor for more police protection and convince the Vietnamese it was safe to return.

Bo Brooks plant manager Georgia Davis said the Vietnamese women are the mainstay of the work force because of their dexterity and their willingness to remove the meat from crabs. "We've had white women in here," Davis explained, "but they say-'I don't want to work here; it stinks."

Tuyen Nguyen, who worked at the packing plant, moved to Palacios because he had received phone calls threatening his wife's life. And he told the Dallas Times Herald reporter, Patti Kilday, he did not harbor any grudges against local fishermen. "We are tired of fighting. We have been fighting for 20 years."

Seadrift's Vietnamese population had grown to 150 in the past three years since Bo Brooks of Texas, crab-packing plant, opened for business, employing Vietnamese women. Trouble brewed when locals and refugees began to competitively fish for crabs in San Antonio Bay between Seadrift and Matagorda Island. Locals charged Vietnamese fishermen watched them find choice crabbing grounds and then place their own traps close by -a violation of longstanding rules of crabbers not to trap in another fisherman's area of operation.

Ironically, the immigration of the first Vietnamese to Seadrift was welcomed by fishermen due to the scarcity of crab-pickers, who are paid 85¢ per pound at Bo Brooks. On a good day, a worker

Hate runs deep in crabbing war

Seadrift, Tx. fishing war now erupting in this Gulf coast town.

"I hate gooks. If they jack with me, I'll kill them," said shrimper Stanley Gilbert of Fulton, and a veteran of the Vietnam war in which two of his brothers died.

"We are packing guns here, and the shrimpers are packing guns in Fulton. Everybody's packing guns," declared Linda Alpin, whose uncle Billy Joe Alpin was shot to death earlier this month. Two Vietnamese crabbers are charged with the murder.

Those are vicious little people. They have little regard for life," added another shrimper Kenneth Rogers of Fulton.

At Fulton Harbor, Rogers added, the Vietnamese are living in seven rundown duplexes and so crowded that "when you open the door, they run out like fleas".

The clash is cultural, writes Ann Atterberry for the Dallas Morning News, racial and eco-Hate runs deep on both sides in the violent nomic, compounded by the language barrier. American fishermen also say it is a matter of the Vietnamese way of fishing in crowded bays and harbors back home without conforming to an unwritten code of ethics as developed in the Gulf during the past 100 years.

Verlin Davis of the Bo Brooks crab packing plant says crabbers as a genre are hard to get along with.

Leon Ruthenberg, the packing plant owner from Baltimore, says the Vietnamese "are not asking anything but to be left alone. They are immigrants. Most can't speak English. Terrorism is what this amounts to, and who in the hell would expect that in this day and age? The easiest person to scare is a fresh minority."

Meanwhile, peace-making gestures were underway with representatives from both sides meeting with a federal mediator to see what the refugees were doing wrong and to help settle differences.

Nisei charge of Northrop job bias sticks

Los Angeles

Alice Nehira, fired from her job as a statistician at Northrop Ventura in March, 1978, and Jo Ann Shimizu, presently a secretary clerk at the same plant in Newbury Park, lodged a class action complaint against the aerospace firm of employment discrimination over a year ago (PC, April 21, 1978).

Last March, when a U.S. Labor Dept. investigator found cision on the agreement is due in 30 to 60 days.

A Northrop spokesman had told the Oxnard Press Courier the conciliation agreement was being implemented, except in the case of one employee where a review of the findings and agreement by Washington.

But frustrated by inaction after 120 days since the agreement was signed, the two Camarillo Nisei visited with Paul Tsuneishi, former JACL district governor, and JACL regional director John J. Saito this past week (Aug. 16) to ascertain what further steps are needed to snap the apparent impasse. The women were assured their case would be forwarded to JACL's national committee on employment discrimination, chaired by Yoshinori H. T. Himel, a Justice Dept. attorney by profession, in Washington.

giving them until the end of the year to qualify. Those who qualify would be considered for employment until April 30.

A Northrop spokesman, according to the Ventura Star Press, said that not more than 75 applicants are involved and would be called as jobs become available.

Under terms of the agreement, Nehira must also be rehired in the next available budget analyst position. Northrop

Anderson also found that layoffs affected only minorities and females, nepotism was practiced in hiring and inaccurate attendance records were used to disqualify minorities.

Managers at Northrop were unaware of the affirmative action goals of their respective units and that nonminorities were classified as "minorities", the report continued.

In cases where minorities and females protested or questioned some personnel decisions, their performance evaluations deteriorated and they were denied promotion or laid off, the report noted.

Palo Alto, Ca. Arlene Seid, 14, the only Asian-Pacific American nationally and one of two Californians serving on the Children's Advisory Panel of the U.S. Commission on the International Year of the Child, 1979, participated in their three-day conference in Washington this past week (Aug. 16-18).

Nehira indicated to JACL that Northrop has appealed for an "indefinite stay" of implementation, despite reports in the Ventura County press that it is implementing an affirmative action program.

An addendum was signed in June, allowing Northrop to contact minority applicants who applied for secretarial and clerical jobs in 1977-78 and is also required to remove negative evaluations of some of the employees. Some will get back pay as far back as 1976.

Nehira said she took a downgrade in position to transfer from Northrop Hawthorne to Northrop Ventura and tried in vain for a promotion as a budget analyst.

son, in the report, found Northrop had discriminated by hiring Caucasian males in positions where they didn't meet the minimum job description while using vague and subjective criteria to screen out minority and female applicants.

But the report also found no substantiation to the charge that there were no minority or female managers or that minorities were fired at disproportionate rates at the plant. #

PRESIDENT'S CORNER: Clifford Uyeda Clarifying Aug. 1

Some have wondered why I reported on the August 1st meeting in which Senator Hayakawa agreed to co-sponsor the Senate Bill 1647.

It was to clarify the statements from his office. Because of "Hayakawa's initiative," it stated, JACL had changed its stance to go the commission route. It further confused the picture by "presuming" that "Hayakawa already had written President Carter requesting such a commission be formed."

There had been no direct contact with Senator Hayakawa since the Salt Lake City convention over a year ago. During this time numerous requests for a meeting had been made to his office without a result.

The initiative for the commission concept was formed in January 1979 when JACL representatives met with the Nikkei legislators in Washington. Senator Hayakawa was not present at that meeting.

JACL has gone through months of intense discussions at all levels of the organization in order to come to the present decision on the Bill.

On August 1st Senator Hayakawa was presented with a drafted Bill, and asked to join. A clear picture of that meeting will give the Japanese Americans and the public the perspective they need.

Senator Hayakawa is being hurt by these allegations coming from his office. I do not believe that any misrepresentation by his staff is necessary in order for us to appreciate Senator Hayakawa's co-sponsorship of the Senate Bill 1647.

SCash prizes for youth programs proposed

Editor:

If part of the JACL budget of $45,500, allocated for youth and student aid, were offered as prizes to chapters which have the best projects for young Japanese Americans, perhaps the youth program will begin to make progress (President's Corner, PC, July 20). Here in Gardena, the JACL has been involved in five big projects involving youths in a single month. The Queen Coronation (June 2), the Pacific Southwest JACL Nisei Relays (June 3), California State JACL

5'Frying Pan' Figures Editor:

Bill Hosokawa's preoccupation with figures (Aug. 3 PC) and on Nisei Bigness (July 27 PC) are on the boring side. He is continually back-biting in an effort to sabotage the Redress Proposal, was mandated unaniwhich mously at the last National JACL Convention in Salt Lake City.

To put the chapter vote on the Redress issue in proper perspective, Hosokawa himself states, "Of course in any election the outcome is determined only by the ballots cast. In the 1976 pres-idential election only 53.3% of the registered U.S. voters went to the polls" and he adds that Jimmy Carter was elected by about 25% of those entitled to vote. By comparison, the JACL's Redress Committee's Federal Commission Plan was approved by over 52.5% of the total membership and more importantly, by over 77% of the chapters casting ballots. Utilizing the presidential election figures, that would make this victory a landslide

On the issue of the "Big Nisei", Hosokawa promotes a 2nd class citizens mentality that we still have to earn our status as 1st class citizens. Hosokawa's infatuation with richness and recognition is distressingly a byproduct of the prewar Issei and Nisei mentality.

Please thank George Akimoto for me for his letter (July 27, PC). It clarified the findings about the DC-10 accident. FROM HAPPY VALLEY: Sachi Seko

Sasahara, the Scientist

Salt Lake City

The past has a way of catching up with you. Sometimes, it is by chance. Last spring, I wrote a piece on the death of my friend, Oscar Inouye. He was quite a man. Others thought so, too. Some took the time to write or call, sharing their memories of him.

Among the letters was one from Art Sasahara. I have not seen him since he and his family left Gila for Ohio on December 7, 1943. We corresponded for awhile. The disconnection was probably my fault. I loathe writing letters. But I remember those I received from him. They were different from all the others that came from outside. Art's letters were funny, full of mischief and outrageous lies. Thirty-six years ago, there was a dearth of humor. I guess that's why I enjoyed Art's letters, read them over and over again. The most recent letter I have from Art was written last December on a night flight from San Francisco to Boston. I'm glad I kept it. For Bill Hosokawa's search for Big Nisei has brought the nomination of Dr. Arthur Sasahara (PC 7/27). He is nominated as "a world authority on pulmonary embolic disease, professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, and chief of medical service at West Roxbury Veterans Administration Hospital ... He is also cited as being "a pioneer in studies of the use of Urokinase, a nontoxic urine enzyme, to dissolve blood clots in the lung."

lecturer describes himself as "discussing something I lucked into years ago. I'm the modern traveling medicine man, huckstering my wares. I shuffle papers and carry out research."

Hosokawa mentioned that Art published more than 100 articles and two books on his specialty. He has more invitations to lecture from medical schools, hospitals and medical societies around the world than he can fulfill. Yet, in his letter, he teases, "I have maintained a fruit stand on the Boston Commons. Want to buy an apple? Actually, it's not too bad-you know, newspapers can plug holes in shoes quite comfortably." He writes of his house, "120 year old, mid-victorian house, which leaks, whistles when it's windy, is bloody cold in winter, but what the hellit's home."

Mo Marumoto of Interface Group also remembers the PC with items found in periodicals and papers that cross his desk. Latest one, for instance, from the Chronicle of Books & Arts features an interview of Noel Perrin, author of "Giving Up the Gun: Japan's Reversion to the Sword, 1543-1879" (see Hosokawa's July 13 column)-who chats about the concept of "progress", a subject I remember talking and arguing far into the night with a friend years ago.

But he is even more as these brief excerpts from his letter reveal. He holds himself and his honors lightly. His modesty embarrasses the narcissitic arrogance of some whose achievements are paler and provincial by comparison. I am proud of his contribution to the human race. FROM THE FRYING PAN: Bill Hosokowa

Nisei on the U.S.-Japan trade scene

Denver, Colo. There is no contemporary issue be-tween the United States and Japan more critical than trade. Japan must strade with the United States to live. Japan imports a large part of its food from the United States, and huge quantities of raw materials like coal, iron ore, lumber, cotton, which it turns into finished products that in turn must be sold on the American market.

For the United States, trade with Japan is extremely important but not a matter of survival. What bothers Americans is that we buy substantially more from Japan than we sell to Japan. The result is an imbalance of trade that ranges up into the billions of dollars, contributing indirectly to the inflation that is stifling American economic growth and hurting every one of us.

Getting that trade into balance is a critical problem, and at least two Nisei are right in the middle of that effort. They belong on Frying Pan's informal, unofficial and rapidly expanding list of Big Nisei who are having, or have had, more than local or regional impact on matters of importance to their particular areas of activity.

The first of these is a Nisei whose name doesn't appear often in Japanese American journals. He is H. Dick Yamashita, president of Marcom International and founder and chairman of the Joint U.S.-Japan Trade Study Group in Tokyo. This body is made up of seven Japan-U.S. organizations—the U.S. Embassy in Japan, the American Chamber of Commerce in Japan, Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, JETRO which is Japan's external trade promotion organization, Keidanren (Japan Federation of Economic Organizations), the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and the Japan-U.S. Economic Consultative Council.

An impressively high-powered group. It was later incorporated into the Trade Facilitation Committee, a bilateral government negotiation body established by special trade ambassadors Nobuhiko Ushiba of Japan, Robert Strauss of the U.S., and Secretary of Commerce Juanita M. Kreps. Yamashita was also one of the key coauthors of the American Chamber of Commerce White Paper, published last May, outlining steps necessary to increase sales of American goods in Japan and bring trade into balance.

Yamashita is in great demand as a speaker at conferences dealing with trade and American trade officials visiting Japan ask to see him. He was listed as a featured speaker at two Japanese journalists' seminars in July, his topic being on the similarities and differences in practices between American and Japanese businessmen, and how these relate to recent frictions.

Yamashita's opposite number in the U.S.-Japan Trade Study Group—the chairman of the Japanese side—is Shinsaku Sogo, director, of JETRO's overseas public relations department. Sogo was stationed in New York from 1962 to '67, and headed JETRO's Los Angeles office from 1974 through 1977.

The second person has already been listed as a Big Nisei. He is Mike Masaoka, recognized as a human rights lobbyist for JACL who was responsible for persuading Congress to eliminate race as a qualification for becoming a naturalized American citizen, and removing racially-based inequities in the immigration laws. That, however, was a quarter of a century ago, and since then Masaoka has been deeply involved in trade matters.

His consulting firm, in Washington, D.C. and New York, Mike M. Masaoka and Associates, represents some of Japan's leading manufacturers, among them Toyota, Matsushita (Panasonic), Bank of Tokyo, Suntory, Dentsu —helping to steer them clear of pitfalls that would prove damaging to the two nations. Because of the key position he holds, officials of both countries use him as a sounding board to test their ideas.

This column's listing of Big Nisei has stirred a good deal of reaction, and we'll mention other individuals from time to time. If you have a nomination, please let us know about him or her.

OUESTION AND ANSWER FACT SHEET How about the blessings of Evacuation?

17. Weren't most of the adults enemy aliens and therefore subject to summary detention during a war?

The so-called "enemy aliens" were legal permanent residents of the United States who were fully entitled to constitutional protections of the Bill of Rights. They were "aliens" only because they were prohibited by law from becoming naturalized citizens. Presidential Proclamation #2525, which was based on a 1798 statute, did permit the apprehension of certain "enemy aliens," but only those individuals against whom there was specific evidence to show they were dangerous to the safety of the United States, and all such individuals had the right to a hearing in a court of law to determine if there was sufficient cause for removal or detention. Only those persons arrested under individual warrants by the FBI and placed in Department of Justice internment camps fell into this category-and they comprised just 5% of the total number of Japanese "aliens" who were incarcerated. Japanese nationals could have been detained as "prisoners of war" under provisions of the Geneva Convention of 1929, and many of the detainees demanded POW status, but the government refused to recognize them as POWs because many of the Geneva Convention rules would then be violated. Also, it should be noted that German and Italian "enemy aliens"—who, incidentally, were free to become United States citizens—were not imprisoned en masse.

18. Weren't most of the citizens who were incarcerated children who had to accompany enemy alien parents? Under our legal system, children are not locked up just because their parents are imprisoned. The basic rights of United States citizens cannot be deprived due to age: the Constitution protects children as well as adults. The government did not give the children, nor their parents, any choice in the matter. All persons of Japanese ancestry were ordered incarcerated, including orphans and other children with non-Japanese guardians, foster parents, or adoptive parents. The military arbitrarily decided that a person with as little as 1/16 Japanese "blood" was condemned to be evicted and incarcerated. This, by the way, is twice as harsh as Hitler's formula for determined those of Jewish faith.

The general public may have been prejudiced, but they were law-abiding people. Any small need for security could have been readily handled by the local police and sheriff departments. The physical arrangements of the camps prove that the purpose was detention-not protection. Despite being in the middle of isolated deserts with no others around, the camps were surrounded by barbed wire fences with the tops tilted inward to keep the people in; the guards in the watchtowers had their weapons pointed into the camps; and the searchlights were directed inside the camps.

20. Weren't these camps just relocation centers to give you temporary shelter until you could find new homes? Weren't you not only free to leave, but encouraged to do so?

Make your money turn over before a year does

26-Week Money Market Certificates

19. Weren't you placed in these camps for your own protection against mob violence?

In a case of mob violence, the law-breakers should be locked up—not the innocent intended victims. There was no basis for believing that the Japanese American population was in grave danger. There were just 28 isolated cases of assault against Japanese Americans on the West Coast during the first months of the war, and only one was committed by a white person.

Detainees were explicitly prohibited from leaving under Civilian Restrictive Order #1 and Public Proclamation #8 issued by General John L. DeWitt (Commander of the Western Defense Command), and Public Proclamation WD-1 issued by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Anyone leaving without permission was shot, as evidenced by the eight inmates killed by guards. Another illustration of the fact that people were confined against their wills is Mitsuye Endo's case. Upon finding herself involuntarily detained, she petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus in July 1942, but her plea for release was denied Continued on Page 7

FCC Renewal

Los Angeles

I guess it is license renewal time for the radio stations in this area. JACL (our office) has received a few calls from the stations requesting interviews of us to answer questions that will help them qualify for FCC license renewal. Stations need to be sensitive to the needs of all the communities, according to FCC guidelines and therefore stations need to touch bases with community groups once every three years and in one case about ten minutes over the phone.

I really don't know how much can be accomplished by a ten minute phone interview to develop a station's strategy for the next three years, but maybe we can see if the stations listened to what I thought our community needed.

I told them we needed more Asian Americans in managerial positions, where the decisions are made. We have plenty of skilled technicians but not enough top managers. There is not anything inherent or innate in our make up to disqualify us from those positions. For example, look at Mr. Toyota, Mr. Datsun or Mr. Minolta. They must have top Asian managers to compete successfully in a worldwide competitive market.

Maybe my ten minutes over the phone wasn't wasted. Let us see what kind of numerical increase among Asian American managers we can detect by 1982.

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY-How do you describe a chapter board meeting where 24 people show up? It's unbelievable, but I was told that this particular board meeting was on the low side.

I would bet anyone that the recording secretary of this chapter does not know how to spell quorum because having one has never been a problem.

This chapter is very community and family oriented. They have connecting lines to the community coordinating council, their city councilman's office, and have a family campout planned for the latter part of this month, just to name a few of their planned activities.

I don't know whether they wanted me to see their treasurer's report, but I am ready to ask that chapter to lend our regional office a few bucks to tide us over until

Why Redress Now?

Chicago

Why redress after so many years? The Redress Question and Answer Fact Sheet, compiled by the National Committee for Redress, explains that "the time lag is an indication of the severity of emotional damage incurred ..." The Evacuation and relocation remains for many as a muted experience. I know this to be true, for I have asked and have been left with little or no response. For some, time is beginning to dissipate this inhibition as witness the following:

MINIDOKA, 1942-43-"I worked in the hospital with Dr. Iriki, a surgeon from Stanford, who performed surgery from morning until night, because he was the only qualified doctor in camp. And yet, Dr. Iriki and I stood in line to receive the Navy p-coats which were being handed out for us to wear. This was the only item which we received from our clothing allowance.

"Due to the lack of treatment, my youngest son who was born in camp had to be given mouth-to-mouth resuscitation by me every afternoon, just to keep him alive. He had an enlarged thymus gland which was pushing against his heart. As a rule, babies were born prematurely or malnourished because their mothers were malnourished and under tremendous stress and strain.

"It is hard for me to ever forget the man for whom I was asked to do special duty nursing. This man had taken three bottles of aspirin and drank two bottles of rubbing alcohol. He eventually died and the diagnosis-suicide. I will always remember his final words: 'Haji, haji.' (Disgrace, disgrace.) I never knew who was the disgraced. "Almost 18 years after camp, I was asked to assist with bilingual psychotherapy with Dr. David Rothstein at Michael Reese Hospital (Chicago). The patient was an Issei lady. Most of her paranoia resulted from the years in the concentration camp. "For myself, it used to be standard practice that whenever I met an old friend from my youth, we would reminisce about life before the war and our 'waspish' achievements of spouse, self and offsprings after camp. Now, since I like myself better, and have a better and more solid identity, whenever I meet friends, we are able to include experiences about camp days as well as life before and after camp. "Now, I am preoccupied with doing something to show my own people that we don't have to be so uptight, because ultimately we don't hate ourselves, we must live with pride and beauty. With that, we are all forever bound together and I must tell all Nikkei, 'I love you all'."-Betty Hasegawa by the federal courts for almost three years. Temporary work for harvesting crops or education furloughs under strict parole conditions were granted to approximately 33% of the detainees at one time or another, but the majority of detainees were not actually "free" and "encouraged" to leave until after January 1945 when the camps began to close down.

21. Didn't some good come out of the experience, like college educations in the east, dispersal from segre-gated neighborhoods, and better acceptance?

The question begs the issue and is devious. It is like suggesting that some good came out of the Nazi holocaust because the State of Israel was created afterward, or that slavery was good because Africans came to the United States. Any tragedy or disaster might inadvertently result in some benefits, but the basic issues must not thereby be evaded. Students should not have been forcibly removed from the colleges of

Much of the present problems affecting our youth and elderly are the direct result of injustices suffered in the past. We are inextricably linked to all that has happened before and cannot forget unresolved grievances. As long as we have not received personal redress, our reputations are tainted, and unfortunately, many Americans still believe that we were disloyal and that the government was justified in its actions.

President Leaves

Washington, D.C. JACL president Hideki Hamamoto was honored at a farewell party "roast" at Blackies House of Beef Aug. 11. He came from California in the summer of 1975 to assume a managerial position with General Dynamics here and is returning to Southern California to take on more important responsibilities with his firm. Noted the Washington DC Newsnote editor Mary Uyeda:

"An interesting fact is that prior to coming to this area, Hideki had no involvement

(1) The Kamon (Japanese Family Crest) is a legacy handed down by Japanese ancestors, wishing for their descendant's prosperity. All Japanese-Americans have Kamons (3) By tracing through one's name and Ka-mon, one can discover his family history. (4) There will come a time when the way to read and write one's name in Japanese will be torgotten. (5) Let us leave to our descennts our hand-crafted Kamon and Japanese name, because we, too, will become ancestors,

Mary Campbell, one of Robert Burns' many girl friends, was said to have been the champion cowdung hurler in her village. You can be sure that the shrewd Scots did not indulge in such a messy pastime, except for some utilitarian profit to be derived from it.

In some crises, dung burning was practiced by the British. In America many a wagon train had to rely heavily on the buffalo chips toward the end of the prairie crossing. I wonder if some wives, who strenuously objected at first, only to yield later to necessity, remem-bered the story of Ezekiel?

To prepare for a bath, all the utensils in the kitchen were mobilized to make hot water. When the tub was filled, first the master of the house soaked and washed. Next the sons, in the order of their ages, then the mother and the daughters-or, was it daughters and mothers? I do remember-washed not themselves in the same tub, with occasional additions of more hot water. After the family had finished, men servants, then the maids, bathed. By this time the water was almost cold and turbid white.
