

Ishikawa first Seattle Nisei elected as judge

By EIRA NAGAOKA
Seattle, Wa.

All the Asian American candidates survived the Sept. 18 primary elections.

Richard M. Ishikawa, King County Court Commissioner, unseated interim King County Superior Court Judge Terrance A. Carroll in Position No. 11 in a contest settled by a primary. By state law if a judicial candidate receives a majority in a primary election, there will be no general election.

Endorsed by the Seattle-King County Bar Assn., Ishikawa, 47, served about 10 years as a deputy prosecutor before joining a law firm and being appointed a court commissioner. He is a past v.p. and board member of Seattle JACL, and first Nisei candidate in the state for a judicial post.

King County Superior Court Position 11
Richard M. Ishikawa 67,984
Terrence A. Carroll 41,905

It is interesting to note that in the City Council Position No. 1 race, Tomio Moriguchi, a past National JACL Treasurer, is campaign co-chairperson for Paul Kraabel, who will be running against Carrie Sheehan.

Paul Horiuchi, opera singer and former schoolteacher, will be squaring off with incumbent Sam Smith in Council Position No. 4.

In City Council Position No. 2, Dolores Sibonga, Filipino American, former deputy director of State Human Rights Commission and current Seattle JACL board member, will be running against Bob Moffet in the general election.

In the Seattle City Treasurer race, Lloyd Hara, past Seattle JACL board member and immediate past King County Auditor for eight years, will be racing against George E. Cooley in the general election.

Family judge

Honolulu

Former Lt. Gov. Nelson Doi was sworn in this past week as a part-time (per diem) district family judge for Oahu by Chief Justice William Richardson, substituting for Judge Paul T. Kobun, who was hospitalized. Doi was circuit judge in Hilo from 1969-73.

House leaders to introduce redress bill

Washington

The leadership of the House of Representatives agreed Sept. 17 to introduce a counterpart to S. 1647, calling for the creation of a fact-finding commission to examine the effects of Executive Order 9066 on American civilians, according to the Washington JACL Office. House majority leader James C. Wright (D-Tex.), House minority leader John J. Rhodes (R-Ariz.), Congressman Peter W. Rodino, Jr. (D-N.J.), chairman, House Judiciary; and Congressman Frank Horton (R-N.Y.), ranking minority member on government operations, will introduce the bill on or about Sept. 27.

The bill, which is expected to mirror that of the Senate, will ask for the formation of a fact-finding commission to determine if any wrongdoings were committed by the U.S. government upon American civilians as a result of E.O. 9066.

E.O. 9066 authorized the mass expulsion of American citizens from the west coast during World War II on the basis of ancestry alone.

The drive to have the House leadership to introduce this measure was spearheaded by Congressmen Norman Y. Mineta (D-San Jose, Ca.) and Robert T. Matsui (D-Sacramento, Ca.). Both congressmen have expressed their deep concern that the question of constitutional freedom related to Executive Order is such that the introduction of the bill warrants the highest order of congressional sponsorship in the House of Representatives.

The Senate version of the commission bill, S. 1647, was introduced by Senators Inouye, Matsunaga, Hayakawa, Cranston, Church and McClure on Aug. 3.

Anger seen as successful style for Viet refugees into U.S. life

New York

Recent incidents, such as the brick-and-bottle battle in Denver and the violent episodes in Seadrift, Tex., have highlighted the obstacles the Southeast Asian refugees face in some American communities.

The distress shown by many of the 150,000 Vietnamese who have settled in America in the last few years, at the same time, has spurred an increasing number of psychiatrists and psychologists to investigate the problem of new immigrants.

One of the most comprehensive studies on the problem of Vietnam refugees on the west coast has been underway by researchers at the Univ. of Washington, which is conducting surveys on a continuing basis for Project Pioneer, it was revealed in the New York Times Sept. 11.

Drs. Keh-Ming Lin, Laurie Tazuma and Minoru Masuda began this project three years ago, employing both observation and a widely used questionnaire known as the Cornell Medical Index to document the physical and mental health status of some 300 Vietnam refugees. Surveys were made in 1975, 1976 and 1979.

Masuda (who is spearheading National JACL's research into aging and retirement of Japanese Americans) told the New York Times that the high degree of anger now being found among the Vietnamese may prove to be a successful adaptive style as has been found in Cuban and Hungarian refugees.

Cornell Medical Index scores taken in 1975 and 1976 show a little overall decrease in ills after one year but a significant increase in anger. Researchers found chief physical complaints among refugees involved ailments of the respiratory tract, the digestive tract and the nervous system. Complaints were relatively few with respect to cardiovascular, musculoskeletal, skin, genitourinary, vision or hearing.

In the mental health category, the questionnaire revealed that feelings of inadequacy, anger, tension and sensitivity were cited with greater frequency than some other populations surveyed by the same questionnaire.

Many of the more aggressive refugees, those who express severe criticism or anger at the host society or fellow refugees, have made better progress and fared better in their new environment, according to Masuda, than their more passive and benign fellows.

"They may be awakening themselves to the fact that they're oppressed," he explained. "Then they become angry and their emotional arousal helps them to seek out and find ways to get along better and overcome their problem."

Masuda noted that "practically nothing" had been done on a broad scope to help the refugees adapt. "There's need for education, mental health and acculturation programs. You can't put a refugee in a camp for a few months, or even a couple of years, and then expect him to join the American mainstream—that's ridiculous."

Dr. Lin said one of the important findings of the 1979 survey, just concluded, was that "adaptive problems of refugees continue into the third and fourth year after arrival in a new place". Loneliness, lack of community life, breakup of the family, uncertainty about the future, homesickness, grief over losses incurred during the evacuation or fleeing and frustration in coping with American life were among principal causes of mental ill-health, Lin pointed out.

Another scientist, Dr. William Liu of the Asian American Mental Health Research Center in Chicago, told the New York Times that being hostile and aggressive seemed to make it easier and more efficient for Vietnam refugees to get along in the U.S. culture.

PC Golden Anniversary fete attracting out-of-staters

Those unable to attend but wishing to contribute are urged to send the gift to the committee, co-chaired by PSWDC governor Wiley Higuchi and Tomoo Ogita. All proceeds from the program will be turned over to the PC for its mail computerization project.

Ranking Asian in U.S. military gets top post

Sacramento, Ca.

Maj. Gen. Dewey K.K. Lowe, 54, ranking Chinese American military officer in the U.S., assumed command of Sacramento Air Logistics Center at McClelland AFB on Aug. 22.

The Oakland-born WW2 pilot in the CBI Theater has extensive background in military logistics and procurement, holds the Legion of Merit, DFC with two oak leaf clusters, Bronze Star Medal, and is a graduate in economics from UC Berkeley and in law from USF. He is a member of the Calif. Bar Assn.

The center has a combined payroll of $315 million and over a half-billion dollars in contracting authority, making it the single largest industry in the area.

Seattle promoters of Orient culture veto sale of book during Festival

Seattle, Wa.

Bon Marche, one of the largest department stores in downtown Seattle, showcased the artistry and culture of Japan and Hong Kong for two weeks ending Sept. 23. The lavish promotion, "The Orient Expressed", spared no expense but was marred when the store vetoed distribution of an Asian American picture history book, "Seattle's Other History", written by Edward and Betty Burke, it was noted in the Beacon Hill News.

The book was not to be sold by local merchants participating in a street fair-like bazaar during the celebration, according to Edward Burke and a Bon Marche spokesman.

Burke said he was first approached for assistance in making contact with Asian Americans in the community and for information which would be passed on to Bon guests from Japan and Hong Kong. Subject of sale of the book during the festival then followed, according to Burke, with Bon offering two options: either setting up a booth in the bazaar or having it purchased for sale in Bon's book department.

A Bon official then called Burke on Sept. 9, informing him distribution of the book at the festival had been vetoed and that its sale by Uwajimaya, a participating merchant who had considered the sale of the book at its booth, would be withheld.

"I think it's a great book. It's factual. But we don't think it's the right time to remind our visitors that the United States put Japanese in internment camps and that the Chinese built our railroads," a Bon spokesperson explained. "We're not saying the book is bad. It's just not time to bring up the war. There are international relations to consider. We're not covering up." While the book had not been purchased for distribution in Bon's because "he felt it might not sell", and to which Burke said was Bon's prerogative to determine what would or would not sell, Bon indicated the sale of the book after the festival has not been ruled out.

"Seattle's Other History" describes, mostly through photographs and illustrations, the contributions of Japanese, Filipino and Chinese Americans to the growth of Seattle as well as the not-so-pleasant treatment they had sustained.

A type of cultural promotion that is successful in Japan where the big department stores dramatize foreign countries with displays and demonstrations, Bon Marche's "Orient Expressed" had artists and artisans from Asia and the local community performing. They included:

Martial arts performers from Kobe, Seattle's sister city, kite-flying competition, a 10-km run, flower arranging, tea ceremony, chigiri-e, calligraphy, porcelain painters from Noritake, finger-weaving artists from Kyoto's Nishijin Textile, Chinese classical dancers, noodle-making without use of knives and Chinese candy makers.

DOWN TO EARTH: Karl Nobuyuki

Intermountain going for 'Op '80s'

both residential and commercial. Bob drove me to the new JACL Hall, which would make any community proud, and shared with me a little of the history of the community in Pocatello.

Since it was my first visit to the Pocatello - Blackfoot chapter and Hunt County, spending some time with the local 1000 Club chair helped. We spent a few hours talking about JACL. I had asked him his opinion of some of the concepts of "Operations '80s" to get a feel of what I might expect from the district. We talked a little about JACL finances, problems and goals. All in all after talking to Bob, I felt right at home.

We left for the Minidoka dedication around 7 a.m. The sky was overcast, and the rain helped cool the heat wave to a very comfortable temperature. It was to be a beautiful day. Once at the Minidoka site, everything stepped up two beats. Masa Tsukamoto and his committee had everything well in hand, and the program drew nearly 500 people. The dignitaries, including Senator Frank Church, carried forward the solemn tone to the dedication ceremony, and all were well received.

Bill Hosokawa's remarks added the personal touch and revealed the significance of the dedication as a symbolic reminder of the vital constitutional questions left unanswered by the evacuation and incarceration. Mrs. Alice Nishitani's rendition of the Star Spangled Banner and the JACL Hymn added a feeling of pride and humility to the event that gave all who attended a sense of purpose and meaning.

Shake Ushio closed the ceremony with a benediction paying tribute to Minidoka as the first national historical monument memorializing the camp experience.

Following a reception in Twin Falls hosted by the Pocatello/Blackfoot chapter, the IDC delegates rolled up their sleeves and started in on the business agenda of the district council.

Governor John Tameno kept the items moving well. Bruce Shimizu, JACL national youth director, joined me in the presentation of "Operation '80s."

Bruce spoke of the need to incorporate the youth program closer to the seniors. He presented this suggestion to reactivate the youth commissioner concept and challenged the chapters to become more involved with the activities of the youth.

My role was to share the overall design of "Operation '80s." I had attempted to present to the IDC the current program of our national priority program as well as the current shortcomings of our financial status. We addressed the issue of program demands placed upon the organization in the area of human and civil rights. We noted the historical spending pattern of JACL, particularly in the area of general operations and maintenance and asked the membership to consider the potential of long-range planning for JACL. We asked the membership if they would be willing to carry forward the challenge of developing curriculum material on the Japanese American for inclusion into our nation's school textbooks.

I hope that if the district was supportive of the general format of "Operation '80s" that they would provide the national staff with the opportunity to meet with their respective chapters and discuss it with them personally.

In retrospect I feel the feedback was favorable. Individuals approached me afterwards with questions and offered their opinions on the plan. Driving back to Pocatello with Masa Tsukamoto gave me the opportunity to talk and share ideas. I mentioned to Masa that I would be attending the EDC/MDC conference the following week and would be presenting "Operations '80s" there as well. He commented that he believed that the plan did provide something that the membership could get behind and support. Hearing that from Masa was encouraging.

Credit-card flap at Sacramento flares

Sacramento, Ca.

Hottest issue for Assembly members was state-issued gasoline credit cards as the legislative session approached adjournment in mid-September.

San Jose Mercury's Sacramento reporter Chuck Buxton, who recalled his paper had reported on gas-guzzling cars driven by legislators, this past week (Sept. 13) reported the viewing of videotapes of a story showing how lawmakers use their state-leased cars, including a trip taken by Assemblyman Floyd Mori last year.

The committee that sets rules for Assembly members viewed tapes of a three-part series by KGO-TV reporter Steve Wilson that were aired MIS school

Deaths

Judge Tom Tomekichi Okino, 73, of Honolulu died Sept. 4. He was the first Nisei magistrate to be appointed in 1934 (Puna District, Big Island); served as county attorney until 1945, elected to the territorial Senate in 1950; went into private law practice in 1959 until Gov. Burns named him administrative judge in 1963 till retirement in 1971. He was the second Nisei graduate from Harvard Law School in 1932, attended Oberlin College on a scholarship.

Shig 'Cone' Takeuchi 58 of Seattle, died Aug. 31. A baseball-basketball star prewar at Fife, a WW2 veteran, he is survived by w Yoshie, four sons, m Mitsue, brs Yukio, Robert earlier in San Francisco (and more recently in Los Angeles) and Assemblyman Lou Papan (D-Mill Valley), committee chairman, acknowledged that the TV reporter "stumbled onto a couple of incidents that concern us".

Papan specifically mentioned Mori, who told the TV interviewer he had taken his last legislative trip a year ago. Then came a confrontation, in which he was given details on film of how he had been followed while he took his family in a state-subsidized van on a trip from Pleasanton to Reno to Salt Lake City to Las Vegas to Los Angeles and back. Mori explained he was on state business to Salt Lake City to attend housing discussions.

Asked about several other legislators mentioned in the story, Papan replied, "If there's an indiscretion, we'll make them pay for it." His committee promised to audit gasoline credit receipts every three months. Receipts are now closed to private scrutiny, Buxton noted. #

Olympic volleyball benefit tilts slated

Berkeley, Ca.

Proceeds from tickets sold by JACL chapters for the U.S.-Japan women's Olympic volleyball teams in an exhibition match on Wednesday, Oct. 3, 7:30 p.m., at UC Berkeley's Harmon Gym will go toward the JACL Legal Assistance Fund.

The 1976 championship Japan team, which placed No. 2 to Cuba at the 1978 volleyball world games in Moscow, is barnstorming the U.S. courts to prepare for the 1980 Olympics. The U.S. team has defeated Russia, Cuba and Japan at previous matches and ranks as a contender for the Olympic gold medals in 1980.

Tickets for "JACL-Volleyball" are $4 general, $6 preferential (with self-address stamped envelope), available at: George Kondo, JACL, 1765 Sutter St., San Francisco, Ca. 94115.

A Pictorial Record of the Atomic Destruction

Published May, 1978, by Hiroshima-Nagasaki Publishing Committee, Tokyo; 343pp, b&w, color; hardcover with slipcase. ($25 plus $1.25 postage)

Most of the photographs were taken during the first couple of months after the holocausts... Number of paintings are by Hibakusha three decades later... Over 4,000 pictures and about 2,000 paintings were gathered for selection by the publishers... Most photographs were printed from original negatives... This work is the first such record to be published from such a comprehensive range of materials... Some in color are captioned "U.S. Army Returned Materials", meaning these were printed from films returned from the U.S. Archives in 1973... Most captions carefully note the time, place, or distance from ground zero where the bomb exploded.

For too long we have turned aside from the tragic and horrible aspects of our history. As philosopher George Santayana said: "Those who ignore the tragic errors of history, are condemned to repeat them." In this case, Human Survival is the issue. We must look and we must learn.

EXECOM

San Francisco:

I look forward to and enjoy the JACL Executive Committee meetings. It is a place where all ideas are placed up front for everyone to examine and comment critically. No punches should be pulled. Such was the meeting here of September 7, 8, 9.

Many nebulous positions were clarified. When the three-day session was over, there was a satisfying sense of accomplishments. We look forward to our programs and find them exciting.

The presence of all the Regional Directors and our Washington Representative added immeasurably to the discussion. These are the staff persons who will oversee the implementation of our programs. They heard and saw at first hand the formation of our policies. They became a part of the programs.

JACL is volunteers and staff working together for a common goal. Neither can do the job without the other. Without the staff the programs will not move. Without the volunteers there will not be any program to begin with.

We are delighted that we have a strong staff. Without the simultaneous strong volunteer movement, however, there would be imbalance. One complements the other.

The use of the consent calendar has streamlined the agenda. Routine reports are accepted all together, eliminating the necessity for separate reports. This gives us more time to concentrate and explore in depth those topics which require discussion.

Our special thanks go to all those who travel long distances to participate in these meetings.

REDRESS PHASE 2: John Tateishi

Time to Act

With such support, there is cause to be optimistic about our bill. Wright and Rhodes, of course, have significant influence with their parties in the House and we are anticipating our bill be routed through the Judiciary and/or Government Operations committees.

Introduction of the House bill, which closely reflects the wording of S. 1647, culminates months of careful planning and work. The numerous communications between National Headquarters and Washington are beginning to bear fruit, and thanks to the tireless efforts of JACL Washington Representative Ron Ikejiri, we are on the threshold of seeing results in our campaign to seek redress from the U.S. government.

And now, we need your help. We'd like JACL chapters, members and friends to urge their Congressmen to support the bill. A letter-writing campaign to Members of Congress has been initiated through district governors, regional directors and district redress representatives.

If we all get involved in this effort, we may be able to see this thing through ahead of our own expectation.

A variety of views on Redress

Editor:

The letters in recent issues of PC demonstrate the wide spectrum of opinions on the Redress issue and it is obvious that it is riven by deep differences. Although committed to the Redress program, many including myself have great doubts with the current commission and "Seattle" plans. Realizing there are many uncommitted outside of the JACL as well as JACL dissenters, I would have to consider that the major thrust of the program may be either misdirected, untimely, threatening or short-sided. Also, for many, reparation feature is grubbing, embarrassing and even "unAmerican".

Editor:

In view of the puny American dollar, when the JACL asks for Evacuation reparations, let me suggest that $25,000 in 1979 dollars be stipulated. Otherwise, $25,000 may buy only the smallest Chevrolet.

NAOMI KASHIWABARA

Editor:

I am glad Marutani-san answered my unsigned letter (Sept. 14 PC). This time I will.

He says, "I know... there are all too many Issei, and Nisei as well, who could use $25,000 each." So what is the big deal about putting all the money in one pot and helping the needy. Same thing. So why not give it to each one who was in camp and letting them decide how they want to use the money like I said in my other letter. Even Marutani-san says he has "good use for it, too". So why don't we let others do the same? I'm sure they all know how to handle their own without JACL or Marutani-san (saying how to) handle it.

I am very proud to be a JACL member because we need it. JACL is working for the good of all JAs. But it will be a problem on how the money would be distributed.

As for "sale of my personal freedom" for $25,000 (as Marutani-san puts it), I too will not sell my freedom for all the money in the world. That money is for compensation for being forced into the camps. It's a very small amount. If it were another nationality, they would ask for more and probably get it too. Those demonstrators in Washington, D.C., who were jailed for four to six days received $10,000 each, remember?

I have asked people, "Would you go and ask for money if the money were all put in the pot?" and their answer was "No". Most of the people I asked are not hard-up enough to ask for any help from the pot.

I then asked them: "Would you keep the money if they send it to you?" They answered: "Yes. I can make good use of it." So, there's your answer, Marutani-san. They want it, but too proud to say anything. The quiet Americans.

I also have a lot of pride, enryo, haji, etc., all that Japanese training. But sometimes I let myself go and speak up. In America, live like an American and yet do not forget our Japanese training.

It's very good and brought us this far. I was working at Hickam Field (right next to Pearl Harbor) when it was attacked. So lucky for me I did not go into camp as did my many friends and relatives. So you see, I will not receive a penny out of this. I am just giving my own opinion on the whole deal—and like Marutani-san—asking for the money.

Book of Internees

I am a writer presently engaged in research for a book of non-fiction on the World War II alien enemy internment program, operated by the Immigration & Naturalization Service. Focus of my book is Ft. Lincoln, outside Bismarck, North Dakota. I am interested now in hearing from any persons who were internees of the camp.

Perhaps it is because the current Redress campaign will not correct the real injustice of Evacuation—the abuse of constitutional powers and rights. Despite the repeal of Title II proviso of the Internal Security Act of 1950, the Government can still detain or incarcerate any one or groups by suspending constitutional rights under the war powers of the President and Congress—in other words, Evacuation can be repeated. Why?—because detention and incarceration phases of Evacuation were never adjudicated!

(If PC would print Korematsu vs United States in its entirety, it will be apparent to anyone that the Court itself makes this very point. Many, including Sen. Hayakawa, still believes that Evacuation was "constitutional" that is partially correct, or shall I say, wrong?)

There was a time not so long ago that the unresolved constitutional issue of incarceration was "our problem" as the present Redress campaign would suggest. (Clearly that time is long past. Such is the diversity of the population (witness the flow of Asians among the "coloured races" since the passage of the McCarran-Walter bill followed by the liberalization of the immigration laws in 1965—and now the "boat people") that the issue (Redress in the fullest context) can no longer be parochial—we must transcend our racial claustrophobia and doctrinal quarrels. The issue is now a socially desirable, constitutional and even moral matter. We should take the issue to Federal courts and if necessary to the Supreme Court. If victorious what greater legacy could we leave for our parents.

and future generations? Of even greater impact and importance is that it would serve warning to the Government that any racial or ethnic groups will never be subjected to "Evacuation" again.

A more immediate benefit would be the establishment of legitimacy of the Redress process and Congress would have no recourse except to resolve the matter. Of course, there will be great obstacles and it will be costly. There is no reason, however, that the two approaches could not be pushed concurrently. This is the time for the gathering of the committed and uncommitted. JACL members and non-members and all we have to gain is freedom.

Pumping Learnin'

Philadelphia:

IT SEEMS NOWADAYS that in some of our school districts, particularly in the heavily-populated metropolitan centers, that students graduate from high school as functional illiterates. And for the life of me, I can't understand how we can permit that. Or how that can possibly be. Understanding or not, possibly or not—the dismaying fact appears to be that it is all too true. In one instance, I came across a lawyer who constantly misspelled fairly common words. And he was a graduate from an ivy-league law school no less, and pretty high up in his class to boot. Amazing.

AND SOME TEACHERS apparently "ain't what they used to be". Oh, undoubtedly there are some very dedicated and highly competent ones, thank goodness. But many are not like the ones I used to know, or whose wrath I've felt when I became mischievous, from a whack on the wrist with a ruler and once, in grade school, on the good ole' backside. But only once in each case; that's all it took: I quietly learned the lesson. And I surely didn't want the word to get back to my parents. Horrors.

AMONG MY SENSEI (teachers) were several unforgettable ones, in varying degrees and moods. Even in high school we had a science teacher, Mr. Leo Ashim, who ran his class with iron discipline. An excellent instructor, he countenanced no deviation from the hard line he laid down, brooked no nonsense. Funny, but to this day, I remember that he would permit no bookmakers to be inserted in texts: next thing you know, he explained, we'd have a pipewrench as a marker, and that would break the back of costly textbooks. So nothing, not even a string, was permitted to lie between the pages.

THEN THERE WAS Hasegawa-sensei. With him, it was like being a plebe at West Point. If you weren't paying attention, dreaming of the next baseball game during recess... pow! came a chalk or a blackboard eraser. I never was a target, much as I may otherwise have deserved to be, simply because I was too frightened to step out of line. That was at the Taylor nihon-gakko located at O'Brien, a way-stop in the White River Valley that's now swallowed up by Seattle's ever-expanding takeover. But I must say this: you learned under Hasegawa-sensei. You had to, or else.

MY CLASSMATES IN nihon-gakko were achievers, from my standpoint frustratingly so because if we didn't bring home man-ten's, while the achievers did, we were held strictly accountable. And I had to do a lot of accounting. And the girls were especially vexing on this count because by and large they perform better than we boys who were more interested in baseball than going to nihon-gakko on Saturdays. Each year there would be academic ceremonies, as I recall, and those who were itto received special recognition while her—and sometimes his—parents beamed broadly. My parents never got to beam.

OUT THIS WAY we don't have any nihon-gakko's, and that's a shame. Once, briefly, we started a Saturday program but dragging the reluctant kids was a real hassle, and the program faded. Today, some of these very same offspring now demand why we, the parents, did not teach them nihongo. If they only knew how hard we tried.

You can't win.

Some 'Big Nisei' in the Healing Arts

Denver, Colo:

While one reader has professed to be bored by recent columns on Japanese Americans whose achievements have won recognition, numerous others have responded by nominating people for inclusion on the list. In fact, the response has been greater than anything since this column, deploring the shortage of smiles in this newspaper, some years ago invited readers to submit ethnic funny stories.

This would indicate that at least some of us continue to take pride in achievement, and it seems our country would be in a lot better shape if more of us recognized achievers and did them honor rather than poo-hooing them. Anyway, we'll talk today about three Nisei doctors who have had a profound effect on the healing profession.

The first is Dr. George R. Nagamatsu, professor and acting chairman of urology, New York Medical College, who at commencement last June was presented with the distinguished Medal of the College. Born in the state of Washington in 1904, he earned a degree in electrical engineering at the University of Washington and practiced as an engineer for four years before entering medical school. He received his M.D. in 1934.

Dr. Nagamatsu's training in two disciplines suited him uniquely for a career in biomedical engineering. He is internationally known for his research in kidney and adrenal surgery and through application of engineering knowledge he developed a number of surgical devices. For example, his fiber nephroscope—a slender, flexible cable with a light at its tip—can search out cancerous tumors the size of a matchhead which could not be diagnosed by ordinary means. He recently developed an electronic prostatometer which measures the size of the prostate with great precision to help a surgeon determine whether surgery is called for. He also innovated a widely used technique for radical kidney cancer surgery known as the "Nagamatsu One" procedure. There is also a "Nagamatsu Two." His citation notes that Dr. Nagamatsu's department "has produced large numbers of noted urologists in practice all over the world."

Dr. Nagamatsu is chairman of the panel that advises the Food and Drug Administration on regulatory controls to be included in the Medical Device Safety Act. He is also a past chairman of the Biomedical Engineering Committee of the American Urological Association, and member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineering.

Then there is Dr. Edward I. Hashimoto, who retired in June from the University of Utah medical school. He received his medical degree at Harvard and joined University of Utah's anatomy department faculty in 1935. Thousands of would-be physicians studied in his courses during the next 44 years. Since 1960 he has won 18 teaching awards; overall he received more teaching awards than any other University of Utah professor. A profile of Hashimoto published in the University of Utah Review explained Dr. Hashimoto's philosophy: "Be humble, be good, don't overcharge."

And finally for the week there is the team of Taft and Masako Toribara who, the nominator reports, "are quietly doing a tremendous job in their respective fields."

Masako Toribara is a voice instructor at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., a position she has had for 13 years. She is a native of Fresno, Calif. Taft Toribara is professor of radiation biology and biophysics at the University of Rochester Medical Center and, incidentally, national champion of the U.S. Racquets Association in the over-60 category. That is not altogether surprising as Toribara was an amazing little basketball player while growing up in his native Seattle, and coxswain of the freshman crew at the University of Washington. Among other achievements, Dr. Toribara, an analytical chemist, guided one of his students in the development of a landmark procedure in determining the presence of phosphorus in blood, plasma and urine.

Each of these Nisei contributed vastly to the advance of world medical science, and we have every reason to be proud of their achievements.

We'll list some other "Big Nisei" in a forthcoming column.

Accepted proposals suggested by Cherry Kinoshita of Seattle, chair, to (a) name three winners by categories instead of one winner and two runners-up, (b) open nominations, (c) and not limited to Mainland residents.

DECEASED CATEGORIES

That each biennium, nominations would be requested for outstanding Nikkei who have made notable achievements in the following fields:

1. Arts/Literary (artists, editor, publishers, authors, musicians, etc.)
2. Business/Industry/Technical (corporate executives, bankers, importers, inventors, entrepreneurs, developers, etc.)
3. Politics/Public Affairs/Law (elected officials, government administrators, attorneys, diplomats, judges, etc.)

Having Japan Retirees Live in U.S.

Cleveland, Ohio

Today there are a couple of million retirees in Japan. The number is probably on the increase, because Japanese are one of the longest living people in the world. I have proposed to invite a million of them to build retirement communities in the U.S. This enables them to bring back the U.S. dollars they had rightfully earned and which they can now spend in the U.S. The investment and maintenance of such communities will also help to rectify the balance of trade.

Aside from the economic benefits I wish Japanese retirees to be able to enjoy their "golden age". Many golden agers today are still young and very active. I know in Cleveland an 80-year-old man and a 70-year-old woman who ice-skate regularly. When I was skiing at Crystal Mountain in Michigan, I noticed a group of men and women gracefully coming down the expert slope, which I had barely managed the day before. As it often happens in the ski slopes, my eyes were naturally glued to the beautiful figures of women, who all appeared to be in their 20s. But these skiers were all senior citizens!

In Japan there are many golfers who are 70-ish. There used to be rugby teams named Fu-waku or Waku-waku Club for old timers. These names were taken from the famous teaching of Confucius, "Those who pass age forty do not lose their way". Thus, the Not-Lost Club or Lost-Lost Club, respectively. A famous space scientist, Prof. Itokawa of Tokyo University, started ballet after his retirement. He became good enough to perform as a professional.

The recreational facilities are much more readily available in the U.S. than in Japan. If not available, we can build one much less expensively here. For example, there are almost ten ice-rinks in Greater Cleveland; I know of many retirees who enjoy the daytime hours of skating, when it is not crowded at all. (I wish I could skate in the daytime.)

I would like to convey this message to Japanese retirees that their living in the U.S. will start a new and youthful experience.

To look ahead—look back

Portland, Ore.

Listening in on the planning for Portland JACL's 50th Anniversary dinner-dance to be held on Nov. 17, at Jantzen Red Lion Inn, names and events began to surface from the murky past, both known and heard. It was learned that Charles Yoshii, the first president of the chapter, is now living in Japan. Other names: Dr. Kelly Kayama, Roy Yokota, Mamaro Wakasugi, Newton Wesley, Howard Nomura, the Maedas, Sachi Kasahara, Hito Okada, Jim Watanabe, Hana Yamada, to name a few.

A journal of those days was made available in which the secretary had kept a very good record. Many Nisei outside of the organization were of the opinion that JACL was then for the elite. That attitude did not seem to deter this hard-working core group from their purpose of promoting their goal of American equality.

After the war, the chapter was reactivated by an equally dedicated group headed by Dr. Toshi Kuge, Ed and Ruth Uyesugi, Mary Minamoto, among others. Many still viewed JACL with hostility and resentment after the war. During the late '40s and '50s, chapter officers and members all paid their own way to JACL activities, including national conventions—the coffers of chapters and districts being at a very low level. All surpluses were saved and sent to National.

Today, the Portland JACL is headed by a Sansei and gives evidence of being future oriented. With the foundation built over the years, perhaps their task will be made somewhat easier in attaining equal civil and human rights for themselves and their children. The Sansei also add a new dimension to established JACL goals—that of seeking more information on their own ethnicity. This is a factor that many Nisei have attempted to deny in their struggle to be acknowledged as first-class American citizens.

Beach House Rented

Thanks to Charles & Nadine Solie, the Houston JACL has rented a beach house on Galveston Island for a beach party Oct. 21. If enough members are interested in staying the weekend there, arrangements to reserve the house from Saturday will be made, it was announced by Gem Osaki, president.

Meanwhile, chapter redress survey was expected to be completed by Sept. 16 when the chapter board met. Members were asked to check off their preference for: (a) demand direct payment, (b) income tax deduction, (c) commission approach if any compensation is warranted, (d) opposed to all redress proposals.

Wendy Yoshimura Case

Marin County JACL president Steven T. Gotanda, as a result of the August board resolution, has urged Calif. Gov. Brown to grant Wendy Yoshimura immediate pardon and release from prison.

The continuing incarceration of Ms. Yoshimura "would benefit only those elements in our society which would like to use her as a martyr and use her 'cause' as a rallying point for their own needs," Gotanda declared.

Gotanda was also led to conclude: "The apparently harsher treatment meted out to Ms. Yoshimura than to others only reinforces the racial inequities in our society."

Mas & Chiz Sato Memorial Fund—Contributions as of August 31 totaled $36,807.83, according to fund treasurer Tad Horita. Fund has increased $694.20 since the previous report (July 27 PC) as follows:

$200—Chicago JACL
$35—Boise Valley JACL
$10—Mack Yamaguchi, Pas.
6-30-79 Interest—$449.20

NC-WNDC Tule Lake Fund—Three more donations, acknowledged Aug. 15, by the Tule Lake Plaque Dedication Committee, raised the total to $16,242.50. Expenses as stated in the July 18 financial report remain unchanged, $13,904.99, leaving a balance of $2,337.51. Donors were:

$10 & up—Sadako Kase, San Ramon;
$25 & up—Kiyoko Matsumura, Sta Monica;
$50 & up—Eugene Itogawa, Sac'to.

PSWDC Nisei Relays—Prospects of a fund-raising PSW Nisei Relays sponsored 5-km and a 10-km run somewhere in the Los Angeles area in conjunction with the 1980 Nisei Week have excited members of the Relays Committee at recent meetings. There was also a suggestion that a "jog-o-thon" might be in the works in the spring of 1980 which might interest at least 300 participants.

Other fund raisers are anticipated since the PSW will be hosting the next North-South track & field championship.

Picnic at Nakashima's

Over 100 Philadelphia JACLers and friends braved a summer downpour to gather at George Nakashima's in New Hope for the annual chapter picnic held July 29. Highlight of the day was a personally-conducted tour of his showroom and museum by the world-famous wood artisan. Picnickers also went home with fresh peaches from the Moriuchi orchard.

Jack Ozawa and Ted Tsukahara, Jr., coordinated the arrangements. On the committee were:

may elect to conform to a sliding scale test in calculating their lobbying limitations (without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status). The limit is as follows: (1) 20% of the first $500,000 of exempt purpose expenditures, plus (2) 15% of the second $500,000, plus (3) 10% of the third $500,000, plus (4) 5% of any additional amount. In any event, expenditures for lobbying activities cannot exceed $1 million per year. —Lorrie Inagaki.

Legal counsel Frank Iwama also commented implementation of a 501(c)(4) choice, while authorized by the National Council in 1978, is much more difficult than meets the eye.

The JACL Headquarters Law Library, partly donated and partly purchased, is now on the first floor and available for community use. Nihonmachi Legal Outreach may help update the library, which is about a year out of date.

The Nagai v. Ushio case was settled Aug. 6, 1979, for a nominal sum of $750. Nagai had sued for breach of contract, fraud and negligent misrepresentation. He charged David Ushio, then executive director, had promised him a staff position and in reliance of this promise had terminated employment.

Membership Computerization
Approved Finance Committee recommendation to computerize PC/JACL membership records; understanding that proceeds from Hollywood JACL's party for PC/50th Anniversary will be earmarked for this conversion. (Nat'l Board had recommended PC assist with membership renewal notices for chapter on an optional basis.)

Membership/Funding
Adopted policy that JACL staff employees and family are not eligible for major sweepstakes prizes.

Minutes: JACL Board (c)
Approved the June 1-3 minutes of the JACL National Board meeting, San Francisco, as submitted; 12 pages, reflecting request that minutes include brief summary statement on each item. (PC Copy minus even-numbered pages.)

Nobu Miyoshi
Approved request from Nobu Miyoshi, Philadelphia, to have National JACL as "institutional sponsor" of her sociological research paper on Nisei.

"Operations '80s"
Endorsed the JACL staff proposal for future plans and directions; feedback from chapters and questions to be addressed to J.D. Hokoyama, associate national director. Proposal with budget to be presented at 1980 convention; local and national programs involving membership in areas of education, political action, anti-discrimination, youth, aging, retirement, the arts, media and international relations.

Theodore Hajime Tanaka, 34, of West Seattle, charged with the July 28 shooting of a department store security guard, posted an $11,000 bail bond, but authorities a month later said his whereabouts was unknown. Police said the suspect had managed to pull a small pistol from a pocket and fire it while handcuffed behind his back at Richard Lynn, 26, now recuperating at home. The case has raised many questions, including the FBI's: We don't even know if Tanaka is the suspect's real name.

Seattle's first steel-frame construction, the 67-year-old Alaska Bldg. at 2nd and Cherry has been sold by John Y. Sato & Associates for $2.5 million to CHG International, real estate developers, Federal Way, Wa. The structure is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Japan needed such men the most. He was one of the early Meiji figures who was responsible for making Japan great, having laid the groundwork for the growth of a modern nation.

In 1878 at the age of 49, Okubo was assassinated by Shimada Ichiro, a disgruntled shizoku, a former samurai, from Ishikawa Prefecture. Shimada claimed that the Home Minister had "obstructed public discussion, suppressed popular rights, erred in the conduct of foreign affairs and caused decline in national power and prestige." Foremost in Okubo's mind was Japan's greatness. In the hands of an assassin, any available or concocted reason will do.

When Saigo Takamori, the last rebel, came up against the tiger of the new regime, he had very little chance of succeeding. He probably knew it. His rebellion was a doomed venture to begin with. It was the fighting man's way of doing or dying—even for what turned out to be a lost cause. But Okubo Toshimichi's policies won the day.

The leaders of Meiji Japan were farsighted men, and what Japan is today had its beginnings in the movement to make Japan a great modern nation. What has made Japan into a viable modern nation is the innate ability of the leaders to choose pragmatic means to meet pragmatic ends without becoming hamstrung by insisting on a particular set of "isms", which is particularly true in the postwar era. The Meiji leaders set the tone of eclecticism which characterizes much of Japanese thinking today. In this complex world of instant happenings, one can derive a lesson from their approach.

RANDOM MUSINGS: Robert H. Kono

The Last Rebel's Nemesis

If Saigo Takamori was the last rebel to challenge overtly the authority of the new Meiji government, Okubo Toshimichi, his erstwhile partner in the overthrow of the Tokugawa Shogunate, was his undoing. It was Okubo who took over control of putting down the rebellion led by Saigo in 1877 that ended in the latter's taking his own life.

Okubo and Saigo, among others, had worked together to put an end to the enfeebled Tokugawa Shogunate that had ruled Japan for over 250 years and helped restore the emperor to the throne. Both were from the same province of Satsuma in Kyushu. Both, of course, were samurai. But they parted ways over the issue of invading Korea.

During Okubo's absence while he was on a diplomatic mission in Europe and the United States, Saigo tried to gather support for his idea of employing the fighting talents of the unemployed samurai to provoke Korea into a war for having refused to recognize the new Meiji government. Partly because of the furor caused over the issue, Okubo cut his trip short and returned to Japan to quash the movement with another Meiji great, Iwakura Tomomi.

Though Okubo succeeded in quelling Saigo's ambitions to invade Korea, his move caused a major split in the Meiji leadership, and the government sought to mollify the invade-Korea faction by speedily dispatching a naval expedition to Taiwan in retaliation for the killing of some Ryukyuan sailors by Formosan aborigines in 1874. The government won a diplomatic victory over China by securing recognition of Japanese sovereignty over the Ryukyu islands. Okubo went to China as a result of the Formosan incident to demand 500,000 taels in indemnity.

Okubo was one of the most influential and powerful figures in the Meiji government. In 1871 he became Minister of Finance and later became the Minister of Home Affairs. As such he was responsible for internal security and the modernization of Japan which meant he held the reins over the growth of police powers and the industrialization program in the country. When Saigo started his rebellion in 1877, Okubo pitted government conscripts against the samurai elite—to which he himself belonged—and put an end once and for all to any challenge to the hegemony of the Meiji government. Okubo was tops among the Meiji leaders who included many illustrious samurai from the provinces in the southern part of Japan. He was a man of the hour who stepped forth when ministers, only Esaki was seen consistently attired in the short-sleeved suit.

Meanwhile, a number of letters panning the new look appeared in the newspapers.

Tokyo:

Another long hot summer has come and gone, and with it the latest flop in fashions—the "energy-saving suit".

The summer suit with short sleeves had been pushed by none other than Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira, along with his International Trade and Industry Minister, Masumi Esaki. They modeled the suit before the hot season in connection with the Government campaign to set the limit for air-conditioning at all offices at 28 degrees C. to cut down energy consumption.

Men's wear manufacturers had been hoping that the new suits would become a big hit, no doubt, like the Space Invader electronic game that has swept the country. But it turned out that the "sho-enerugi lukku" was an Edsel in fashion ideas.

Few Japanese males took to wearing the energy-saving suit. They stuck with the regular-type suits or simply went coatless in the steaming hot weather. Among Cabinet

A letter from a Japanese reader appearing in the Asahi Evening News said:

"I am ashamed to look at pictures of Cabinet ministers wearing what are 'sho-ener' look, safari-type short-sleeved suits at formal occasions.

"I advise them to wear normal business suits, particularly when meeting officials from foreign countries.

"If they want to wear energy-saving suits, all the Cabinet ministers should do so, and show the determination
