John McCloy: most influential private citizen in America

NEW YORK—John J. McCloy, the former assistant secretary of war who, during World War II, supervised and oversaw the evacuation and internment of 120,000 Japanese Americans, was recently profiled in the February issue of Harper's magazine, which noted that many have labeled him "the most influential private citizen in American public and private life.

Brinkley delves into the lives of two of McCloy, who befriended and advised nine presidents, from Franklin Roosevelt to Ronald Reagan.

He has been actively involved in more areas of national policy, in more critical decisions, than perhaps any figure of his generation, "writes Brinkley.

McCloy, now 87, was a key figure in American foreign policy during and after World War II. Brinkley notes that during WWII, McCloy then assistant secretary of war, was befriended and advised nine presidents.

Noguchi reinstatement advised

LOS ANGELES—County Civil Service Hearing officer Sara Adler recommended Feb. 11 that demoted coroner Dr. Thomas Noguchi be reinstated to his position as chief coroner.

Adler ruled that Noguchi’s demotion by the Board of Supervisors last April was unjustified, because he wasn’t given a “reasonable” chance to correct deficiencies in his department’s performance.

Adler, however, said that the evidence was sufficient enough to support the 30-day suspension which preceded Noguchi’s demotion.

The long-anticipated report of 79 pages was concluded by a paragraph which stated that the demotion of “Noguchi” is “not sustained.” The report calls for the Civil Service Commission, who will take up the matter Feb. 23. Adler’s conclusions are not binding, and the commissioners must make the final decision on whether Noguchi’s demotion was justified.

Noguchi, who had been currently working as a physician specialist, said, “This is a wonderful day for me.” But William Masterson, attorney for the county, said the report was “a matter of variance to the evidence,” and that her report was not the final word.

The county had spent over $500,000 in its efforts to demote Noguchi.

But the confrontation did not happen. It did not happen because a few rational minds kept reminding the administration what the situation really is.

"If Japan opened all its markets to us, it would make a difference only if billions to billions in a year will be hit by a billion worth of bilateral trade this year. In fact, Japanese exports to us off in 1992.

The United States has complained that the Japanese limit their beef imports, but their limit on foreign-beef imports is a very high 30% of their markets.

Also, Japanese tariffs are now the lowest in the world. Japan has systematically eliminated trade restrictions at a time when others are raising them.

While 25% of the labor force was 'absent' in the Detroit car factories every week over the last several years, the Japanese workers were working—hard. While Zenesi and RCA rejected the videotape recorder doublers that were developed by Americans, the Japanese continued to spend the Japanese committed time and money to them. Here, arrogant Harvard MBA's were planning our economy in 1980, with experience of the statistics of the world they didn't even vaguely understand. Here, you had to work up your nerve for a month before taking on an American. The Americans didn't understand what the Japanese were doing.

"Let's face it, the Japanese have been working, thinking, planning and working hard in the face of these obstacles and more than we ever dreamed they would do. . . . and thus have sabotaged what we could have done for ourselves.

"Perhaps the President, who skillfully handled the Nakasone visit, sought to go to television and tell us Americans that we can't have it both ways.

"If Japan were to retaliate against such a law, the Northwest would feel the effects worst. Ingersoll told more than 500 people in Seattle on Feb. 17.

Ingersoll said Japan undoubtedly would retaliate with similar restrictions on our exports. The United States that is competitive advantage.

"But a common thread that ran through the four talks was, "that we can't risk being prevaling," said Ingersoll to attorneys Paul Dev.

Two speakers from Japan pointed

The result, they said, two U.S.

The most visible trade issues are the question of whether Japan will continue to voluntarily restrict its auto exports to the U.S. and American objections to Japanese policies on imports of U.S. Beef and citrus.
