Federal Housing Study on Bias to Omit Asians

WASHINGTON — Congressman Robert P. Matsui (D-Calif.) asked the federal government May 27 to reconsider its decision to omit Asian Americans from a new, major study it plans to conduct on housing discrimination.

Before next year, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will conduct a survey of housing discrimination among America's minorities. Department officials have said the study will primarily focus on Blacks and Hispanics. Asian Americans, they say, will not be included because of the relatively few complaints they file.

In a letter sent to HUD's Deputy Assistant Secretary C. Duncan MacEachin, Matsui called on the agency to broaden the study's scope.

"One cannot assume that all who are being discriminated against will register complaints," Matsui wrote.

"To say that Asian Americans do not complain so therefore they are not affected by discrimination is unacceptable. Community attitudes toward the efficacy and propriety of complaining along with language barriers are just two of the factors which may significantly affect the number of complaints from a minority group."

The congressman further cited the rising number of hate crimes being committed against Asian Americans as evidence for concern.

According to a Los Angeles County Human Rights Office report, about 12 percent of all hate crimes committed in that county are against Asian Americans.

"Given the current evidence of anti-Asian violence, it is entirely reasonable to believe that such attitudes as greater access to fair housing are atissue in 1993."

"Expanding the study to cover all minorities that are likely to experience discrimination will result in a much more cost effective approach than performing this study and then having to repeat the research to study discrimination against minorities other than Blacks and Hispanics."

In a letter, Matsui also points out that LaVera Gillespie, Northern California regional director for Fair Housing and Equal Opportunity, has also voiced strong opposition to the plan.

$1 Added in New Budget for P.C. Postage

By Harry Honda

SAN FRANCISCO — The JACL National Board, aware of inflation as well as cries for a "no dues increase," accepted a $1,000,000 $1,049,000 bimonthly budget which was described as a "bare-bone package" that accommodates a $1 decrease in national dues ($5 individual, $6 family) for the Pacific Citizen's additional 2nd class postage since April 3.

The budget was the main agenda item over the May 29-30 meeting at National Headquarters, Secretary-treasurer Alan Nishi, who had conferred with delegates this past month at the Northern California-Western Nevada and Pacific Southwest district councils where the mood was generally for "no dues increase," said the budget. Financed with National President Robert T. Matsui and National Director Ron Wakabayashi, is "basic, bare-bone ... with only a dollar added to cover P.C.'s request to pay for additional postage for 2nd class."

Dollar More for Program

Attached to the package, upon motion of the district governors, was another dollar increase restricted for "programs," which would provide another $7,000 for a program total of $32,000.

"Looking at a million dollar budget, it's program poor," observed PSW Governor J.D. Hokoyama. "Hence, whatever dues increase to follow should be for programs specifically.

"But," questioned National Vice President Yosh Nakashima, "should we strap National in its fiscal management, on the budget when the crunch comes?"

Because of this need for budget

By Laurie Mochimune

SAN FRANCISCO — The brisk proceedings of the May 29-30 meeting of the JACL National Board resulted in a blueprint for the organization's civil and human rights agenda for the 1989-90 bimonthium.

The "program for action" report, which was later formalized, was drafted by Ron Wakabayashi, national director, in accordance with JACL Constitutional bylaws. Unanimously approved by the National Board, the report's recommendations will be up for consideration by the National Council, at which time they will be made public. (See P.C. editorial on page 4). The council will meet during the JACL convention in August.

Some of the recommendations made in the report include JACL's continued commitment to the opposition of "selective ethnic persecution" (eg. E.O. 9066 and its aftermath), expanding of relations with major civil rights organizations and minority coalitions and the development of a multicultural education program to address issues such as the aging and retirement of Issei.

JACL's priority of involvement will be determined by the amount of money budgeted for each issue. In the area of civil and human rights, the National Board took stands to endorse the Racial Justice Act, actively promote the Universal Voters Act of 1989 through the JACL Washington representative and join major civil rights organizations on Civil Rights' amicus brief on the Supreme Court's decision to reconsider its ruling in the Bowen vs. McCorvey case.

Nati' JACL 1989-90 'Program for Action' Unveiled

By George Johnston

American redress cautiously approached its culmination, the JACL Legislative Education Committee (LEC) voted to continue its existence beyond fiscal year 1989 should President Regan sign the redress bill. The group, approved Saturday at the JACL-LEC Board meeting, would allow JACL-LEC to continue operations "for the purposes of monitoring the appropriations processes, assisting the attorney general in locating eligible recipients, acting as an information base and providing input into the formation of the trust fund committee."

According to JACL-LEC Executive Director Gracey Uyehara, the decision is necessary to make sure the intent of the redress measure is properly carried out and redress for Japanese Americans become law. "We've come a long way and having come this far, it's important to monitor the program so we can see that the law is carried out," she said.

"Given the fact that the average age of the Japanese American survivors, it will be very important to see that the authorization is implemented by appropriating as much funding as possible in the earlier part of the ten-year stretch out."

"We know," Uyehara continued, "that we'll continue to see this process through, via the leadership of the five Nisei leaders in Congress—Sens. Inouye and Matsunaga and Reps. Naka, Jeppson, Matsui and Saka."

Other News

Updating the status quo of redress legislation, JACL-LEC Strategy Chair Grant Ujifusa told the board that the House and Senate versions of the bill are still in the conference committee stage in order to make adjustments in the wording of the bills, which are not 100 percent identical. The bills differ in language concerning vested legacy (equality issues) and make it a party die after passage of a law, but before receiving the benefits of that law and voluntary evacuees. The two versions must be identical and satisfactory to the House and Senate before reaching President Reagan's desk.

Omnibus Trade Bill 'Moderate in Nature, but Significant in Achievement,' says Matsunaga

WASHINGTON — Two measures supported by Sen. Spark Matsunaga (D-Hawaii) were brought before the U.S. Senate April 25.

By a vote of 48-30, the Senate passed legislation to provide disability benefits to veterans who were exposed to radiation through their participation in nuclear weapons testing or the occupation of Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

According to Matsunaga, who is a co-sponsor of the bill, the legislation provides new benefits to the approximately 250,000 veterans who were exposed to radiation.

However, it provides a presumption that 12 different forms of cancer suffered by veterans within 30 to 40 years after exposure to atomic radiation while in military service would be deemed to be service-connected, and therefore eligible for treatment and/or compensation through the Veterans Administration.

A similar measure passed the U.S. House of Representatives in 1997.

Supporting Trade Bill

Matsunaga, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Subcommittee of International trade, also spoke in favor of the favorable Omnibus Trade Bill, which he called "moderate in nature, but significant in achievement."

"It is time for the United States to insist that other countries offer reciprocal market access and trading opportunities to our firms that we afford in our relatively open economy," he said.

The trade bill, he continued, provides the president with adequate negotiating authority to conclude bilateral and multilateral trade agreements in the coming years.

"Many of the trade problems that have been raised by senators during this trade bill are issues that can best be addressed through multilateral agreements, not unilateral legislation," he said.

Another Matsunaga amendment, approved during Senate debate on the bill last year, would confirm the U.S. tariff schedule to the Harmonized Tariff System already adopted by the United States' major trading partners.

Although he pledged his support for the bill, Matsunaga said he is not completely satisfied with Section 301 provisions dealing with unfair trade practices by trading partners.

Matsunaga said that other countries differ from Americans in their assumptions about the proper conduct of economic, business and social activities: "What constitutes an 'open' market for one country does not necessarily equate with the open market we have in the United States."

The real issue is not necessarily a 'free market,' but frequently patterns of business relationships that prevent American firms from achieving equitable treatment in a foreign market," the senator continued. "We need to recognize that Section 301 is a limited tool, not a panacea."

"What we should not forget is that until our government provides more balanced fundamentals in our economy, we are going to have a trade deficit, regardless of what our trade policy is. There is going to be a serious problem with import competition in this country until we are able to restore a better balance between savings and consumption in our economy, and until the international balance is achieved, we will continue to face a mountain of red ink in our trade account."

Library Named in Memory of Aiso

MONTEREY, Calif. — United States Army buildings at Defense Language Institute in Monterey, Calif., are to be named in honor of John Aiso and Col. Kaz Rasmussen, who are recognized as great leaders of the Military Intelligence Service during World War II. Also passed away in December of 1987 in Los Angeles and Rasmussen in Monterey.

A recently completed academic library will be named the John Aiso Library. Aiso was responsible for implementing the War Department's program of training soldiers in Japanese military combat intelligence. As chief instructor in 1944 and as director of academic training from 1942 to 1946. Also turned out 9,000 graduates who contributed materially to victory in the Pacific War.

The DLI Headquarters building will be named Kai Rasmussen Hall. Rasmussen had proposed the establishment of a Japanese military intelligence school for Japanese American soldiers at a time when prejudice and discrimination against the Nisei were strong. The school was activated in November of 1941 at the Presidio of San Francisco.

As commandant of MISLS from 1942 to 1946, Rasmussen also provided the military leadership for carrying out a critical intelligence operation at a time of national peril.

A double dedication of the buildings is being planned in conjunction with a celebration of the 47th Anniversary of DLI during the last weekend of October, 1988.

EDITORIAL OF THE PACIFIC CITIZEN:
Asian American Power and Politics

WHILE JACL is politically non-partisan, it encourages its members to take a keen interest in candidates of both major parties from the earliest days.

Unfortunately, Japanese Americans were too young, too few, too inexperienced, and too lacking in influence to prevent the hysterical attack on their rights at the beginning of World War II. Our lack of political visibility was an important factor in the_origination of the internment program and imprisonment of Nisei.

Times have changed. Today there are five Japanese American members of Congress with Asian-Pacific backgrounds. Recently in Los Angeles, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat, called an Asian American fund raiser. Apparently, he wouldn't have voiced the same kind of promise, it is predictable that he will need. The new job is for individual citizens to support the candidate of his or her choice. Democrat or Republican, and put the political capital that will make it difficult for the next president to forget campaign promises.

Nisei Servicemen's Record Remembered

In Denver on Memorial Day, an annual rite of faith was enacted for the 25th time at Flarnament Cemetery. It provided a brief but solemn opportunity to remember kin and friends who served in our Armed Forces and gave their lives in the cause of freedom. Everyone was especially it was a moment to commemorate those Japanese Americans who died in the service of their country.

Flarnament was held in other communities across the nation where any substantial numbers of Japanese Americans reside. And this year the services—prayers, a speech or two, the laying of ceremonial wreaths and floral tributes, the sharp salute of gunfire and the haunting notes of Taps—were particularly poignant.

We have never doubted the importance of the courage and sacrifice of Nisei who shook off the cynical sneers of nay-sayers and marched off to war during World War II. They had faith that, ultimately, the nation would undo the grievous sacrifice of the war dead is as enduring as memories welled.

Irene is determined to form a JACL chapter here in Lancaster. She's already gotten 3 enthusiastic supporters.

The principal focus of the exhibit will be on the constitutional issues relating to the internment. The photographic images, drawn primarily from archival and private collections, will be judged upon similar constitutional motifs. The exhibit is "intended as just an internment exhibit," Tani said. "It's intended as an important statement about democracy in America."

Planning for the exhibit is expected to begin immediately with a comprehensive project to be completed within twelve months. Once completed, the exhibit will have its initial show in the San Francisco area, after which it will be offered as a traveling exhibit. Tani stated that the project staff is anxious to begin work on the exhibit.
