No Rate Increase Due for JACL-Blue Shield Subscribers

SAN FRANCISCO — John Yasumoto, chairman of the San Francisco Global Health Trust, reports that the plan has just completed its third year of operation without increasing rates for its members.

This year everyone who has been covered since last year will be receiving a letter from Blue Shield of California regarding a new care plan that is currently being discussed for adoption in the state of California. The letter will contain the plan that was introduced last year.

The plan is called the Blue Shield Preferred Provider Organization (PPO) Plan. It provides coverage for hospital and medical services at reduced rates, but requires the members to use the physicians and hospitals that are part of the PPO network.

The PPO plan does not include dental, vision, or other non-medical benefits. It is designed to give members a broader range of choices for their medical care, while still providing access to the best available care.

The Mikado' Operetta Spurs Asian Americans to Protest at Claremont

POMONA, Calif. - Gilbert & Sullivan's operetta, The Mikado, was staged at the Claremont Colleges recently (Nov. 2) while scores of students and faculty were protesting outside Bridge Auditorium.

Pomona College History professor, Simon Yamashita, wanted to protest Asian stereotypes depicted in "The Mikado" at the time it was written. His fear was that the students would also see the performance and think of it as a way to celebrate their heritage.

The demonstration was the latest in a series of Claremont Colleges protests in the past several years for recognition of Asian American needs, such as courses in Asian American history, counselors for Asian American students and more Asian faculty members.

No Age Boundaries for Prejudice

Pat Mowatt's message rests on the prejudice that often recognizes no age boundaries. At Logan High, she has been hunt by those who have made stereotypes about the Hosn. (other ethnic groups, for that matter).

Their Presence a Positive Addition

The Southeast Asian refugees and their children—many of whom we should remind you—American-born citizens—are a positive addition to the LaCrosse community. Through them, the limited cultural diversity that existed in the city for so long has finally been enriched.

To Pat, we offer some reassurance that the picture of prejudice that you have seen is not a totally hopeless one. Most people do not share the ignorance or innocence of those who you have heard that prejudice may be small comfort when you are the target, but please know that you are not alone.

Just like you, prejudice bogs the majority of us down. We need to take a positive step.

Fujimori Stresses Economic Reforms in His 100 Day Administration Speech

LIMA, Peru—In a speech marking the first 100 days of his administration, President Alberto Fujimori pledged in a national television Sunday, Nov. 4, that his government would be sweeping economic reforms, eliminating a 0.9% surcharge on imports and reiterated his decision to privatize state-owned companies.

The government would present an economic program at the end of November, to the International Monetary Fund. The previous government under President Alan Garcia had bidder all debt payments in 1987, severing relations with international financial agencies. Peru owes $20 billion to private banks, foreign governments and international agencies.

Annual $4 Billion Program

Fujimori said representatives from the Inter-American Development Bank and World Bank were in Lima, preparing an annual $4 billion investment program to "sustain economic growth and lifting social justice."

He repeated his commitment to crop substitution of Peru's annual 1 billion coca leaf industry. He has rejected U.S. military aid to combat drug trafficking.

He said a tax reform program would begin in January, aimed at simplifying the structure as well as increasing revenue.

State-Owned Mines

The government is preparing projects, to improve efficiency at state-owned copper, zinc, lead and iron-ore running companies.

Fujimori spent about 45 minutes late Sunday night, the same day Enrique Iglesias, head of the Inter-American Development Bank, arrived for talks on the government's economic plans and future loans.

Iglesias praised the government's plans, and said the bank recognized Peru's "serious efforts to solve its economic problems."

Crops Other Than Coca Leaves Hindered by Laws and Bureaucrats

UNITED NATIONS—The Peruvian government plans to remove regulations that make growing crops other than coca leaves unprofitable for peasant, a close adVlser of President Fujimori said.

Fujimori said legal aid could be given to 90% of the titled land within a month at a cost of $4 million.

In late October, Fujimori announced a plan to help peasants switch to new crops.

About a million rely on coca for their livelihood. He relied on law enforcement measures, a successful computer program that stretched across the moat allisions the people involved in securing an export license, which could take a year's time.

Wholesale Changes Seen

DeSoto noted Peru peruses about 22,000 lawyers, a year or a bit consultation from the people whom the law would affect.

The Fujimori plan calls for eliminating many restrictions on free enterprise and for iniviting peasants more in the lawmaking process.

Only about 10% of Peru's farmland is designed by DeSoto, said legal aid could be

Is Sacramento Delta Still 'Rip-Roaring'?

- A family holiday by the River near Lodi is spoiled for Asian American Studen

director and family by an abusiv

By Rick Yuen
Asian American Studies Center
Stanford University

STANFORD, CALIF.

In my work with students, faculty and staff, I strive to develop a community that opens itself up to the challenges of changing an increasingly racialized society. I find satisfaction in achieving progress and seeing individuals and communities grow.

On this particular Labor Day weekend I was relaxing on a restful day at the beach with my family before the start of school. It's 30 degrees colder by the Sacramento River. My family along with four other families and kids are enjoying the Delta waters and the warm summer breeze. We set up our BBQ grill, pulled out the要素 and took up the beach umbrellas. Several of us play touch football, take turns riding the boat or watch the waterskiers and catch up on family news.

Early in the afternoon, several people near our car begin to lower the volume of their conversation include: "Asian are tak ing over the whole beach; it wouldn't be so crowded everyone takes pictures on the grass and taking pictures.

A Mid-Afternoon Break

It's 3 p.m. and as we finish eating our BBQ chicken, several men from the neighborhood gather in a large piece of wood between our general picnic sites and tell us that they can't park the boat because they tell us, "We were here earlier, this is our territory." Several minutes later one of them with a holstered gun says to those of us in the group, "We need to clear this area because we don't want any kind of trouble." One of the men in the group says, "We are not going to tolerate any kind of trouble or racial taunting.

In Sense of Disgust

The next day, the water was still rip-roaring. We finish gathering the kids into the car, load our BBQ supplies and begin the return to town. While my heart is still pounding, I am feeling disgusted, sad, and afraid at the same time. Could I have done something to prevent this? I asked myself... We did absolutely nothing wrong to these people and in no way deserving their punishment. I wanted to stand up to these people and say how wrong they were but I found for my wife and children's safety as well as my own. By driving several miles south, we pull into the town of Lodi. As we walk down the main street all of us breathe a sigh of relief that we are away from the dangerous situation at the beach.

What have been the consequences of standing up to this treatment? Or possibly worse, not standing up to this abuse?

This weekend made me realize with a former community member and friend, we must continue to work ahead of us to make our society truly understand the consequences of cultural and racial differences. We need to start our children at an early age by teaching them to stand up for themselves and providing multi-ethnic, multicultural materials for children starting out their lives and taking pictures.

What is a ‘Nihonjin’ and an ‘American’?

By William Wetherell

Do P.C. have a style sheet for non-P.C. terms, or the use of race and ethnic terms? It seems not to, judging from the headlines and texts of its articles.

Take the article copped of (21 of 21) Asian Americans: A Case or Nihonjin? ABC’s of Increasing Among Asian/Pacifics

(13 of 21) In my dictionary, ‘Nihonjin’ means a citizen of Japan, of any race or ethnicity.

So I would expect that the article is about cases of ABCs among Asian Americans, not about Japanese aliens.

The article broke down the article’s L.A. cases ethnically in this way: ABCs of Increasing Among Asian/Pacifics

Those of the Asian/Pacific islander group. The ABC is a citizen of Japan, of any race or ethnicity.

Like the Asian/Pacific ethnicity. It is not in popular conception, multiracial and ethnic.

So we can see that the term is the same as in this context.

In the category of Asian/Pacific ethnicity. The term is not in popular conception, multi-

Some of the terms as nouns or adjectives: ABC, Nihonjin, Asian/Pacific ethnicity.
