Angry reaction hits decision not to adjust census

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The U.S. Commerce Department has announced that it will not adjust the 1990 census despite the five million people estimated to have been missed.
But the agency hasn't heard the last of it.
Reps. Norman Mineta and Robert T. Matsui have already voiced strong language regarding the announcement made by Secretary of Commerce Robert Moebacher July 15.

"Up to 5.7 percent of the population of Californie was missed in the 1990 census," Mineta said. That's a city

Rep. Norman Mineta the decision. The decision not to adjust is a political judgment, he said. 'I frankly am not surprised at the decision, but I am disappointed. Because of today's decision, billions of dollars in sid will be misallocated, California will not have full congressional representation after reapportionment, and federal resources will fail to reach rapidly expanding minority groups. Mosbacher, in his statement to the media, said that census count was 'one of the two best censuses ever taken in this country' and expressed reluctance to "abandon a 200-year tradition of how we actually count people."

Responding to that statement, Matsui said, 'If that is the rationale, then I suggest it is time to start a new tradition. There is no getting around the fact that the census count is inaccurate.

rate. The Commerce Department decision especially will affect California. Instead of comprising 12.1% of the population, the state will instead only be credited with 11.9%. Since about $60 billion in federal aid is tied to the census, California would have received roughly $120 million more under an adjusted census. Mineta and Matsui aren't the only once upset with the decision. Les Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley has already said the city will go to court to overturn the decision.

LA. city attorney James Hahn said the decision "smacks of racial politics" and vowed that officials were left with 'no choice" but to challenge the decision in court.

JACL national board news

JACL, PR firm develop Pearl Harbor strategy

SAN FRANCISCO—After hearing a presentation by Barbear Tanabe and Steve Otino of the Honolulu, Hawaii., office of Hill and Knowlton, an international public relations firm, Bill Kanako told the national board that JACL would proceed with a plan to deal with the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor. Kanako, JACL vice president for planning and development, presented four points to the national board gathered in San Francisco July 13 and 14. The first step, he said, is to develop a JACL statement on the Pearl Harbor anniversary. The second step is to develop a media strategy that would be implemented at the district and chapter levels. Media kits, the JACL statement, and other strategies would be made a veilable for chapters, to deal with the press in their areas.

The third point is to use JACL's network of contacts—other key organizations that would support JACL's Pearl Harbor program.

The fourth point, Kaneko said, is to use JACL's political network at the federal and local levels, to involve officials by letting them know the concerns of the organization.

Tample told the group that if JACL could line up a coalition of support she would attempt to raise funds for the program. She would also contact the head offices of Hill and Knowlton in New York City to gain its support for the effort.

Kaneko added that the position statement has been drafted and will be announced at a later date.

The board discussed the possibility that program training sessions could be handled at tri-district meetings.

SAN FRANCISCO—Dennis W. Hayashi, 39, a staff attorney with the Asian Law Caucus, Inc., was named JACL national director, replacing Bill Yoshino, at the July 13 national board meeting here.
Hayashi is expected to assume his duties in September. Yoshino, who will maintain his position as JACL Midwest regional director, will stay on until that time to ensure a smooth transition.

will stay on the tast time to ensure transition.

At the July 13 national board meeting Hayashi told the directors that the '90s was a decade that would provide both opportunities and challenges for Asian Americans and that JACL will maintain and expand its leadership role.

After his introduction and brief remarks to the board, Hayashifseft to acth a plane to North Carolina where he is currently involved in the Jim Loo civil rights case. He is serving as the family's coursel. The Asian Law Caucus, the Organization of Chinese Americans, JACL, and other organizations have worked together to bring about the Justice Department prosecution of Loo killers for civil rights violations for many months.

tion of Loo's killers for civil rights violations for many months.

The new JACL national director has also been involved in a number of other civil rights issues, including Korematsu V. United States and Vietnamese Fishermen Association of America v. Yost.

Hayashi has been active in the legislative and political advocacy area as well. He represented the Bay Area Attorneys For Redress, coordinated advocacy efforts for the passage of the Civil Rights Act, and co-founded the National Network Against Anti-Asian Violence which monitors and investigates cases on a national level.

He is a resident of Oakland.

Pacific Citizen will present an in-depth interview of Hayashi in a later issue.

Nakagawa looks ahead to potential redress problem

SAN FRANCISCO—JACL President Cressey Nakagawa told national board members that the organization would have to be watchful and anticipate a future problem with third-round funding of redress.

Nakagawa said that more individuals are now eligible for redress than originally estimated. That could present a potential problem, especially to the Education Fund earmarked for $50 million.

The government, Nakagawa said, may elect to tap that fund to pay the newly. discovered recipients. That would mean, he said, that money for the Education Fund would have to be raised.

DWP asked to cooperate'

LOS ANGELES—The Los Angeles City Council unanimous voted their approval for a motion calling for the Department of Water and Power to acknowledge the bill that would make Manzanar a national historic site.

The motion, made by Councilwoman Ruth Galanter, clears the way for the HR 643 to move on for Senate hearing.

The bill did include water protection rights but the DWP had felt it was inadequate. According to Sue Embrey, chairwoman of the Manzanar Committee, the Galanter motion made the bill more acceptable to the DWP.

Now we have a companion bill that goes to the Senate. It's sponsored by Sen. (Alan) Cranston and Sen. (Daniel) Akaka, SB-621. We're looking for support from Sen. John Seymour and Sen. Daniel Inouye as well. If it doen't pass the Senate, we're dead.

Embrey said she was grateful for all the support in the DWP matter—the letters, phone calls and attendance at meatings—but that more was needed to see the bill through to reality.

Layoff of Asian school officials called discriminatory

BOSTON—The recent layoff of four Asian American assistant principals by the Boston Publics Schools has been called discriminatory by the Massachusetts Association of Asian American Educators (MAAAE).

According to the June 21 edition of the Sampan, a New England Asian publication, the move 'unfairly singles out Asian Americans whose ranks are poorly represented in the system.' Before the layoff notices—designed to balance the $378 million school budget— Asian American administrators oc-cupied 10 out of 400 positions, or 2.2%.

Asian Americans students, however, make up 9% of the student body, the MAAAE pointed out. The four layoffs means 44% cut in Asian American officials citywide. Following the announcements, members of MAAAE and Chinese sented outgoing Boston school superintendent Joseph McDonough with a petition of more than 1,000 signatures protesting the layoffs. McDonough reportedly said that he would recommend his successor look into the matter.

The Sampan, however, also reported that the Boston School Committee recently voted to reinstate current programs, which could mean that the laid-off administrators may be able to keep their jobs.

This incident, along with the recent census showing that the Asian population has doubled in Boston, has aroused local Asian Although Boston public schools have been integrated the adminis-trative makeup has not adhered to any kind of appropriate racial rep-resentation, the Sampan reported. A court order has stated that 25% of new teachers and staff must be of new teachers and staff must be African American and 10% of Education Committee developing strategies

SAN FRANCISCO—The JACL Education Committee, in the process of formation, will initially spend most of its time in developing strategies to include the Asian American experience into school curricula across the nation.

Reporting on the committee at the national board meeting July 13, Dale Shimasski, JACL consultant, said that the Education Committee's purpose is "to make sure that the internment issue is accurately portrayed in taxtbooks across the country. Equally important portrayed in taxtbooks across the country. Equally important prights and not as a military necessity.

The issue of instruction material is a complicated one, Shimasaki said. Each state has its own policy on textbooks and the committee must therefore be aware of the differences. Supplemental materials, he added, are not required by all states so that, too, will have to be investigated. These factors must be studied before strategies are developed, he said.

Another part of the committee's strategy will be to look at various publishers, legislative leaders and educators, seeking their support, particularly on the internment issue. Shimasaki also reported that the efforts will also produce a number of benefits. A director of Asian American educators and resource people will be developed as well as an inventory different textbook policies of the control of th

By year 2000, whites have clout but minorities move into political picture

Although whites will not form the majority in California by the year 2000 they will still have the controlling political clout in the state, according to a recently published University of California, Berkeley, book.

The book, a series of essays writ-ten by scholars, attempts to ex-plore the dynamics of demograph-ics and multiculturalism in Cali-fornia, the result of which could serve as a model for other states to

"California is a good laboratory for what policies facilitate or hinder the political empowerment of the various racial and ethnic groups," said Byran Jackson, California

State University, Los Angeles, political science professor.
One of the authors, Dan Nakanishi, UCLA professor of Asian American Studies, said that Asians may become the "swing yote" in the 21st century, based on their ability to provide campaign fund support for candidates—as they demonstrated when they contributed $10 million to Bush and Dukakis in 1988.

The chapter also announced its traditional spring triyaki dinner will be continued as a community benefit with proceeding only to one scholarship and one community service project.

To address the problem of a lack of new younger members affecting many JACL chapters nationwide, national headquarters approached the recent NCWNP district council for opinions on how the organization's image and attractions might be enhanced to answer the problem.

West Valley vice president Brett Uchiyama told the group she believes the key is to create a new image which incorporates JACL's basic ideology but not hinder the younger person's independence and free thought, as manifested by the chapter's own "Next Generation" group.

"I am trying to create diverse activities which make young people realize that the JACL can be anything they want it to be as long as they realize the work which the previous generations had done for them, "she added.

'Prisoners of the Sun' shows Japanese war atrocities

By RICHARD SUENAGA

When moral lines blur in war, expect the worst. Humanity and reason gone awry. Attroclties committed in the name of duty. Deaths aduty, like washing your sox or polishing your boots. In modern times, historians have revealed tragic war crimes that should tell us something about the ambiguity of morality and honor in war. It happened in Andersonville, Ga., during the Civil War. It happened in Auschwitz. It happened in Auschwitz happened in Auschwitz. The story is the same. Hundreds of soldiers—this time Auschwitzlians—are imprisoned on an island in the South Pacific—this time Ambon—under the command of Vice Admiral Baron Takahashir.

time Ambon—under the command of Vice Admiral Baron Takahashi (Takei).

When the war is over only a few of the Australian soldiers are alive. A mass burial grave is discovered; many of the soldiers had been beheaded.

The trial begins.

Captain Robert Cooper (Brown) is the Australian soldier who investigates and prosecutes the Japanese soldiers stationed at Ambon. He discovers rampant and arbitrary beatings—and death all around.

The trial that follows is the crucible in which the Japanese officers cling to their sense of dignity, duty and honor against the charges of heinous crimes against humanity.

And it is again the implication

Takei of his role in Prisoners of

There were many reasons I took the role, he told Pacific Citisen. 'One, it was a challenge, which always engages an actor. Two, and more importantly, it's a film in terms of issues, about the Japanese, Americans and Australians as well. It's a challenge at many levels, it shatters the mytha, illusions, the hidden truths from all three countries.

"The Japanese Ministry of Education tried to sanitise history. Many young Japanese are not aware to the full extent of the Japanese military during World War II. In The Last Emperor, it tried to cut scenes rope but not in the Pacific thester."

Takei also points out that the film also shows the American complicity and interference with due process in the war crimes trial. And even on another level, the film, headds, goes after the myth of the Australian soldier as rugged, invincible heroes. The Australian soldier as rugged, invincible heroes. The Australian soldier as rugged, invincible heroes. The Australian soldiers were helpless and victimized. Takei says.

Before the actor took the role he considered that the film could fuel the Jepan-Sahing that exists worldwide. Thad to consider that, "Takei said.

But the film is always truthful; it presents a balanced approach. The cospegoat (the Japanese lieutenant) is a sym-the stereotype of Japanese militarists. That to really explore the kind of human being who would do this cort of thing. I locked at his condition of hirth, his access to the best of Japanese and world culture. I had to do some research."

Takahashi's demeanor in the film was bessed on a real-life friend of Take's whois wealthy and concerned with fine foods, wines and fashion.

"He (Takahashi) really wasn't a militarist he got the job by his station in life. As a militarist he depended on his subordinates. If there was failure, he passed the buck. He was not a man of substance. He considers himself above the bushido code. He has no ideals or values that people ascribe to soldiers."

The actor said he also threw a little of Ronald Reagan in the role. "Like Reagan, Takahashi took naps, delegated and was avery good front man, he said.

The strength of Take's performance comes almost exclusively from facial gestures. Takahashi has very little dialogue in the film. "I studied newsreels of recruitment and the trial itself. I studied the Japanese upper echelon. They're very poker-faced. Their eyee often look down. I found it facinating, they became like a curtain coming down over the world."

cal sails. And perhaps most important, fire in his belly for justice. Mike had wanted to study law after graduation from the University of Utah. He was thwarted by poverty. Some of his classmates and teammates on the university debate team had the means to go to law school and distinguished themselves at the ber and in politics. Massaoka, unable to continue his education, got involved in an ill-fated lettuce-growing centure, coached a high school debate team part-time under a federal sid program, waited tables and-eventually became JACUs first paid employee at a salary of $125 per month. He goes down in history as a lobbyist, although certainly a distinguished one.

Masaoka expected to work for JACL only temporarily. The war changed that. When he returned to civilian life he had the G.I. Bill but he was 30 years old, married and faced with what he considered a moral obligation to carry out JACL's postwar crusade for justice. The dream of a career in law had to be put aside.

War shattered the dreams of many indi-viduals through death, injury or the loss of years of time. Who knows how many people internationally with the potential to become great scientists, medical re-searchers, physicians, artists, musicians, writers, engineers, teachers, philosophers, or berristers for that matter, were casual-

He became the first Japanese American to be elected to Congress and has served his country as an outstanding legislator.

Perhaps the circumstances that foiled lasaoka's aspirations enabled him to serve humanity in a more meaningful way. What the obituaries neglected to say is that his efforts on behalf of Japanese Americans had a favorable world-wide impact on human rights. The passage of the Walter-McCarran Act over President Truman's veto in 1952 eliminated race as a restriction in U.S. immigration and naturalization laws. No individual had a greater role in its passage than Massack at laws also Massack awho spearheaded its usua slaw Massack awho spearheaded in the successful effort to repeal Title II of the Internal Security Act which in effect had codified presidential authority used in World War II to imprison Japanese American civilians.

Redress suggestions may get action by ORA

The Justice Department thinks the sug-gestion made by my wife Violet several months ago that the department send a representative to Japan to publicise the redress program is excellent and would be beneficial to eligible recipients living there. The Justice Department is considering a trip beneficial to singular recipients from the Justice Department is considering a trip to Japan in the future for these purposes. Andlast August, Violethad also suggested to the Justice Department that a letter of apology be addressed to the deceased internees—if their surviving family members rethe internment camps, so many peace and solace that was denied to them for so long.

The Justice Department looked favorably on her proposal and their reply was: The families of internees who died before August 10, 1988 who wish to receive an apology letter may request one in writing from ORA. The request must include the deceased individual's name, date of birth, and the date of death. The letter should be sent to: U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Office of Redress Administration, P.O. Box 66260, Washington, D.C., 20035-6260.*

Box 66260, Washington, D.C., 20035-6260.

Among the other suggestions my wife madwar. . . the proposal that, since the letter of apology being sent to surviving internees with their redress checks, is a significant historical document of great importance to them, the Justice Department will consider improving its format and content by having it printed on official government stationery; that a date and the name of the recipient be included; that the president's title, or authentification, be placed under his signature; and that the letter be reworded so as to sound more personal, and to convey to the internees a true and sincere apology—in short, a letter they would be proud to frame and display rather than keeping it out of sight, as is often the case now.

The Justice Department's reply was that we plan to reevaluate our options for making changes to the spology letter."

in closing I must say to Violet K. Cristoforo, to Congressman Leon E. Panetta, and to the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, as well as many internees—Congratulations, and thanks for your long-standing efforts to help achieve redress for the former internees, for rectifying a tragic and undeserved wrong, and for restoring the honor of our great country!

Young men's fads

ID YOU READ about the latest fashion fad among young men in staid, or once-staid, Nippon whereby the lads adorn themselves with jewelry? No, not simply some class ring or a fancy wristwatch, but jewelry accouterments such as bracelets, necklaces and earrings-pierced at that. Once-staid Japan is not only catching up with us in the U. S. but apparently is passing us by. Among male Nikkee here in the U. S. one might see a gold necklace now and then, but that's about it.

No earrings, pierced or otherwise.

THIS NIKKE! RETICENCE may be due to several factors: it was not fashionable back in the Nisei's days even if they had the money to spare, which they usually didn't. Insofar as the Issei folks were concerned, if an offspring "spiffed" up with a bit of fancy duds, such would be met with the condemnation of o-share or ha-de: "dandy" or "lamboyant." Coming as I do from a rural farm area, we rarely had occasion to encounter the admonition. It was quite an eye-opener to see the city-fied zoot suiters. Remember them?

not suiters. Remember them?

IN ALL THIS, however, there always existed a continuing contradiction. While growing up in a milleu of conservative conformance and Isses admonitions, many of the heroes touted in the samurai chambare (loosely, "sword fights") music shad alicked down ornate coffures (chonage) and wore bright, clorful outfits that would cause a Liberace to blush with envy. Now, that merited o-share and ha-de if anything did Yet, they represented macho manhood. The samurai were not alone: think about King Arthur and the knights of the Roundtable.

SO LONG AS it does not intrude upon one's privacy or rights, how others wish to adorn themselves should not be of concern. I note that there is a hair style among youths which leaves a strand of curly hair at the nape of the neck; others have two or three strips clippered along the sides of their scalp, and so on. And as for jewelry, we see more and more athletes showing a diamond earring: usually one side only. Then there's the sum owrestler. Now talk about an ornate hair-do!

COME TO THENK OF it even this inaka-

COME TO THINK of it, even this inc COMETO THINK of it, even this inakomone (country bumpkin) possesses a bit of jewelry from an earlier time. When inducted into the U. S. Army, I acquired a sterling silver bracelet with my name on it, which I wore almost always during my service. Every now and then, I'll come across the thing. I'll take it out and apply a bit of silver polish to try to bring back a bit of the old shine.

But no pierced ears for me. (5)

She accepted medal on behalf of her son

A report of the recent veteran's get-together in Seattle indicated that Mrs. Masuda, mother of Staff Sgt. Kasuo Masuda, refused to accept the Distinguished Service Cross awarded postumously to honor the memory ofher son. This is incorrect, General Still well, who presented the award, gave it to Staff Sgt. Masude's sister, Mary, in recognition of the courage she displayed in withstanding the terrorism confironting her upon her return to the family's farm in Orange County after the evacuation in September of 1945.

After receiving the Distinguished Service Cross, Mary pinned it on her mother, who was a gracious and humble person. Mrs. Masuda passed away in 1964 and Mary Masuda passed away in 1987.

Masuda passed away in 1987.

Staff Sgt. Masuda's youngerisister, Jun

Letter from the President

CONTINUING THE COMMITMENT

by Cressey Nakagawa, National JACL President

JACL's role in lobbying for redress is well known within our community.

Now, we'are continuing our commitment to Redress by monitoring the payment process that is being administered by ORA.

Last May, I was part of a JACL-LEC delegation that went to Washington D.C. to review the administrative procedure of ORA (Office of Redress Administration). We had the opportunity to meet with Assistant Attorney General Par Civil Rights John R. Dunne and Deputy Assistant Attorney General James P. Turner, who fielded our questions and concerns. Through ORA Administrator Bob Bratt, who hosted this event, we were able to observe firsthand the processing of cases for verification of eligibility through the review of proof documentation.

To date, 24,500 individuals have received payment, with an additional 300 final eligibility letters to be mailed out and another 200 to be verified and paid. This total includes the 1,497 servicemen who have already received redress payments, with approximately 500 more cases currently being reviewed.

The 1992 fiscal year payments are expected to begin this October. 15,000 letters of potential eligibility (pink letters requesting further documentation) have been mailed to those whose birth years are 1926 or before. The remaining 10,000 are expected to receive their pink letters by the end of July, and these will-include those persons born 1927 or prior.

Nearly 100 appeals have been made by those who were initially denied eligibility; these cases are currently being reviewed.

For 1993, ORA needs to estimate the number of potential individuals,

Legacy Fund Balance

This summer, as the mercury in your thermometer rises, we would also like to encourage you to help us to raise the number of contributions in the JACL Legacy Fund thermometer as well! Since its big start in October of last year, a total amount of $1,830,500 has been raised.

DEFERRED GIVING

On May 24, 1991, a meeting was held at JACL headquarters to discuss alternate ways of giving to the IACL Legacy Fund. Attending this meeting were Gravce Uvehara, Legacy Fund Chair; Cressey Nakagawa, IACL President: Bill Yoshino, IACk National Director: Thomas F. Jordan, Vice President for College Relations for College of Notre Dame: Steve Okamoto, San Mateo Legacy Fund Chair; Alan Nishi & Nancy Miyasaki, Sacramento Legacy Fund Co-Chairs: Clay Harada, Legacy Fund Administrator; and Elainé Gin, Legacy Fund, Administrative Assistant.

Several programs of deferred giving were highlighted during this meeting, including wills, gifts of insurance, and charitable remainder trusts.

"Deferred giving" means that the gift, which can either be specified or unspecified by the donor, is promised for a future date. The

THE LEGACY OF KAY KUSHINO

Legacy Fund, made "in the memory of Kay Kushino". Coming from sJACL members and non-members, and hailing from her hometown of Minneapolis as well as from far away states — many, whose lives were touched by this tireless, energetic woman, were now giving to the JACL Legacy Fund a mere fraction of all that she had given to them.

Born Kiyoko Marguerite Tanouye in Los Gatos, California, Kay was the oldest of the three children of George Naohachi Tanouye and Suzu Honda. At the age of 16, she married Tadao Kushino of Campbell, California.

Unfortunately soon thereafter, she was widowed with three young boys to raise. When the war broke out, she and her family were evacuated to the Santa Anita Assembly Center and then to the Heart Mountain Relocation Camp.

Whilein camp, Kay was not only the social editor of the Heart Mountain Sentinel, but she was also the unofficial "social director" — famous for being the hostess of a myriad of dinners and parties, as well as working with the Camp USO to entertain the visiting GIs.

After the war and facing the problems of single motherhood, she benefit to the donor is that there are certain tax benefits, often strengthening the financial security of the donor. In turn, JACL will benefit from being the recipient of the donation.

By far, the easiest way of deferred giving is to include the JACL Legacy Fund in your will. This can be done quite easily through a simple bequest or codicil in a will.

Another way to give is by making the JACL Legacy Fund a beneficiary of either an existing or a new life insurance policy. The benefit for this type of giving is that the donor receives a tax break on his insurance premiums, while the organization will receive a substantial gift sometime in the future.

Charitable remainder trusts are transfers of money or a highly appreciated asset (such as property) into a trust. The trust can be created in a way to pay you, a spouse 'or another beneficiary a fixed amount for life. The principal of the trust will pass to the charity upon termination of the trust.

There are both immediate and long, range tax advantages with trusts. While providing tax free growth, charitable remainder trusts also offer lower investment risks and a hedge against inflation.

Other gift giving options, such as giving securities, were discussed. To date, the JACL Legacy Fund has received four gifts of stocks.

The meeting was concluded with a planned campaign to support and develop these types of programs, with materials to be developed by the Legacy Fund staff.

These giving programs will allow the JACL Legacy Fund to diversify in order to accommodate the needs of our various donors, and allow both the donor and JACL to benefit.

CHAPTER UPDATE

Philadelphia

. With the cooperative efforts of five JACL Thousand Clubbers, who are longtime JACL leaders, the Philadelphia Chapter, with 150 members, has raised more than $54,275.

The Philadelphia Legacy Fund Campaign Committee, consisting of Roy Kita, William Marutani, Takashi Moriuchi, Tom Tamaki and Grayce Uyehara, initially met every month in order to successfully plan and implement a campaign strategy.

Among their many activities was a chapter campaign ferter that was mailed out along with Senator Daniel Inouye's endorsement letter. Each committee member then selected eight to ten members to personally contact and follow-up.

Also the bi-monthly chapter newsletter always featured a special Legacy Fund report that included a list of contributors.

Chapter members were asked to contact relatives and friends who live in other localities—particularly those who live where there are no JACL chapters. And additional campaign packets were distributed to those members who were able to personally solicit.

The success of the Philadelphia Chapter campaign is personal contact - meeting or calling on a oneto-one basis is a key and crucial factor for a successful campaign.

Also the Committee was carefully organized and structured so that the work load was evenly distributed. "Working together is important and is half of the fun," says Grayce Uyehara, Philadelphia Chapter Chair. "After all, that is what JACL is all about."

decided to resettle in Minneapolis where her sister was living. There, Kay worked at the Burgess Publishing Company for over 25 years as the editor of the Home Economics Division, where she thrived due to her enormous love of literature and books.

Kay had been actively involved in JACL since her early twenties and was one of the founding members of the Twin Cities Chapter. Serving as Chapter President and as a member of the Board of Directors for several terms, Kay was alst a charismatic leader in the Redress Campaign as well as a fixture at all of the National JACL Conventions. She was also a charter member of the UCL Credit Union, which eventually became the JACL Chapter Credit Union.

One of her most important contributions within her Chapter was promoting youth involvement. Since Kay had first become involved in JACL when she was 22 years old, she understood the importance of getting young people interested in the organization. The current Twin Cities Board is almost entirely comprised of Sansei as a direct result of her hard work in promoting youth leadership.

Survived by three some - Richard, Dr. Norman, and Allen -- as well as several grandchildren and great-grandchildren, the dedication and devotion of Kay Kushino will always be remembered. Kay Kushino was an incredible woman who gave a lifetime of service, and her memory will continue to live on.

Berkeley Chapter

The City of Berkeley, known for its "high-charge/take-charge politics," also boasts a high-charge/take-charge JACL Berkeley Chapeter - one of the outstanding chapters for the JACL Legacy Fund.

With about 350 chapter members, the Berkeley Chapter has raised $,34,495 of its total goal of $123,000. "Our chapter, which serves both the Oakland and Berkeley communities, is fortunate to have a very loval and committed membership that understands the role JACL plays in both the JA community and the Asian community at-large. We rely a great deal on word-of-mouth, so we are really committed to getting that word out - not only to our members, but to the general JA community as well," explains Neal Taniguchi, Legacy Fund Chapter Chair.

Some of the other key people in the successful campaign are Tad Hirota, Bob Yamada, Bea Kono, and Terry Yamashita, who are all currently busy planning a fundraising event for this fall.

Fund. Because it has maintained a highly active profile in the area, this chapter has had community support for its drive from the word "go".

Alice Kasai, Legacy Fund Chapter Chair, callsita "whispering campaign" — because the word has spread like wild fire throughout the area. "I always run the Legacy Fund list of chapter donors, that I receive from national headquarters, in our chapter newsletters. It gives people an idea of who has donated and how much they have donated. One of the problems is that people don't really know how much they should give." The Chapter has also been successful because of its youth involvement. "It's really important that we put some responsibility on the Sansei, and we've been really getting our young people involved in this campaign," said lefterson Itami, Chapter Co-Chair and a Sansei himself.

East L.A.

"The Legacy Fund is a timely and appropriate opportunity to show appreciation for the efforts of JACL. The belated apology and redress provides the opportune initial impetus for the creation of this Fund," asserts Dr. Robert Obi, Legacy Fund Chair for the East Los Angeles Chapter.

"One of our very first donors, was a longtime chapter member who had donated half of his redress scheck to the JACL Legacy Fund," continues Dr. Obi.

The East Los Angeles Chapter, with its 561 members have raised 532,875 to date, making them the outstanding chapter in the Pacific Southwest District.

A BETTER FUTURE FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS

by Grayce Uyehara Legacy Fund Campaign Chair

Established by the National Council at the San Diego Convention in June of 1990, the JACL Legacy Fund will enable us to have a perpetual endowment which will provide a solid and dependable financial base for the ongoing needs of our national organization.

With the passage of Redress, we remember that the Bill of Rights is only a piece of paper – until it is put into action through the sweat and courage of the people who believe and fight for it. Likewise, the JACL Program for Action will remain merely words – until our organization is able to fully implement the programs that address issues which affect all of us today and in the future. Therefore, it is paramount that the JACL Program for Action receives and continues to receive adequate and stable funding.

Thus, the importance of attaining the $10 million Legacy Fund for a more vital JACL cannot be emphasized enough.

To those of you whose generosity of spirit and understanding of the still important mission of JACL, we are most grateful for the more than $1,800,000 Legacy Fundycontributions and pledges that we have received through June. A full listing of contributors will appear as an insert in a fall edition of the Pacific Citizen.

We would also like to thank the chapter leadership and members, for their continuing support, as well as to the JACL Legacy Fund Campaign Committee, National Board and staff, for their hard work and leadership on the campaign.

On behalf of the Campaign Committee, Iespecially want to recognize and congratulate those Legacy Fund chapter chairs and chapters for raising their chapter fundraising quota which is based on membership, during the first phase.

And special thanks and recognition goes out to Steven Okamoto, Tom Jordan, and John Enomotes for their assistance with the deferred giving and gift option programs.

For the second phase of the JACL Legacy Fund Campaign, we need the active participation of all 113 chapters as well as national and chapter leadership to realize the goal we have set.

The Campaign Committee requests that every chapter establishes a JACL Legacy Fund Campaign Committee and send a chapter appeal letter to its membership and to the wind community to support the Legacy Fund.

We also ask that each chapter committee plan to meet once this summer taplan a local, one-on-one follow-up after the Legacy Fund Campaign materials are mailed out on September 1.

There is also a new brochure, which has information about JACL, and will answer questions asked about JACL and the JACL Legacy Fund.

in order to help ascertain appropriation needs for the Office of Management and Budget. All potential eligible individuals, who have not yet submitted a voluntary information form to ORA, are urged to do so --- regardless of their date of birth.

After the meeting, JACL-LEC presented to ORA a list of recommendations concerning administrative procedures that would help to streamline processing. Bob Bratt assured us that ORA would address and respond to these recommendations.
