Arizona creates strategies to fight hate crimes

Arizona is gearing up for tactics to deal with hate crimes.

According to a recent issue of the Arizona Republic, workplace "stings" and special training for prosecutors will be implemented by Atty. Gen. Grant Woods.

Woods recently met with Asian community leaders togasure them something was being done, especially in respect to the Aug. 10 slaying of nine people—six of them Buddhist monks—in a temple west of Pheenix.

ian community has been The Asian community has been actively watching the investiga-tion. Woods said that no motive for the killings has yet been deter-mined but that a 'hate crime has not been ruled out.'

The Republic story pointed out that many of the Asian participants at the meeting with Woods expressed concern over the rising anti-Asian sentiment; in the state.

expressed concern over the rising anti-Asian sentiment in the state. Speaking at the meeting, Chris-tine C. Iijima Hall, assistant vice provost of Arizona State Univer-sity West, said, "Tve lived and worked in many cities. Phoenix isn't the worst, but one of the most oppressive. People don't want to admit or know we're multicul-tural."

In reaction to complaints that government agencies don't make efforts to deal with minorities, Woods said he would expand prosecutors' training to include contact with the Asian community.

Last week, the attorney general's office sent undercover staffers to track down discrimination in hiring and housing, Woods said.

The strategy is already used by several other states, the Republic said, it "catches people in the act, and has the potential to have a great deterrent effect," Woods said. It's a good tool, and it needs to be done, especially now, so people understand we're actively enforc-ing the law."

Minorities not getting contracts in California

Government bureaucracy may be costing businesses run by California minorities and women, according to a report.

The report says that the largest government agencies are not doing a good job of abiding by the 1989 legist government agencies are doing a poor job of creating biding opportunities to underrepresented groups. Philadelphia event offers variety of talks, speakers

A total of 121 people attended various sessions and events of the Tri-District Convention at the Hershey Hotel in Philadelphia, Aug. 22-25. The, convention included the Mountain Plains, Midwest, and the Eastern Districts of JCL. Delegates from as far west as Denver, as far north as the Twin Cities, and as far south as Albuquerque attended the various sessions.

The event was highlighted by two keynote speakers, Pat Saiki, former congresswoman and recently appointed (highest ranking Asian American appointed by President Bush) to head the Small Business. Administration, and ing Asian American appointed by President Bush) to head the Small Business Administration, and John Dunne, head of the Civil Rights Division in the Attorney General's Office. In addition to the keynoters, the convention included several workshops. The Philadelphia Chapter presented Debbie Wei, who spoke on the topic of anti-Asian violence. Impressive was the chronology of incidence of Anti-Asian Violence in Philadelphia; disheartening was the response made by the police, district attorney's office, and the Human Relations Commission, she said. Wei said the most frustrating aspect of this is the limited response victims and would-be victims are able to make. The agency established by Debbie Wei, Asian Americans United (AAU) has become one of the most consistent Americans United (AAU) has be-come one of the most consistent advocate of the Asian victims of violence. A third workshop was presented by the New York Chapter, which arranged for Richard Suenaga, editor of the Pacific Citizen, to presentsome concrete ideas of how news organizations are structured and how they operate. This was all geared to meet the possible emphasis on the 50th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. It is assumed that plans for this anniversary have been made. Thus, it is anticipated that the print and electronic media will have much to present on this topic. Each chapter may be well advised to be prepared to meet this with various positive initiatives of their own, Suenaga said.

The final workshop was presented by Haruko Brown of the New York Chapter. Haruko has been active in training JACLers in the ways to conductoral history in the proper of the presented with the them of this conference, Legacy for the Future. The Japanese American who lived during the early phases of American history in America are diminishing. If we are to preserve their story, stories which are not found in libraries or history books, then those who are alive now must be tapped for their individual oral history.

and at the reception on Thursday night, where the delegates were given special name tags with their names (in Japanese characters). Delegates in turn sought out other who had similar "characters" in their names. Philadelphia foods and Mummer's string band were featured at this event. The following evening the delegates gathered for a "Karaoke" sing. This event was preceeded by a tour to the Japanese House and Garden in nearby Fairmount Park. It was adelightful to see that a number of attendees were not bashful of stepping up to belt out a tune in Japanese as well as in English. The Conference culminated with the Sayonara Ball. Julie Nishimura of the Philadelphia Chapter's Board played a theme and variation of "KOJO NO TSUKI". Julie is an accomplished pianist and teacher at the University of Dela-Board played a theme and variation of "KOJO NO TSUKT. Julie is an accomplished plannist and teacher at the University of Delaware. The featured speaker was Cressey Nakagawa, the national president. He charted the direction of the organization from the past through the present and to the future. Earlier, Gravee Uyehara paid tribute to Mike Massoka, perhaps the most visible of the pioneers in establishing JACL as an organization to be respected and to allow all people of Japanese ancestry in America to feel dignity. The final business meeting was chaired by Hank Tanaka, MDC governor.

The convention was considered to be a success by all who were in attendance. The speakers and workshops were said to be outstanding and the atmosphere was warm and condusive to creative thinking. The next the Ti-District Convention will be held in the Midwest in 1983.

The convention, sponsored by the Philadelphia Chapter was cochaired by Teresa Maebori and Herb Horikawa. San Diego Asians told to face crime issue

SAN DIEGO — Four Asian American judges and a juvenile court referee sternly urged the Asian community to confront the gang problem head on. They were panelists on "Orimer-Delinquency and Gangs in the Asian Community," at a forum Aug. 15 at Horace Mann Middle School.

Cowett said there is no easy fix to the gang problem. "The dynamics involved are very complicated," she added. Some parents also work long hours, leaving their children prey to gangmembership for companionship, identity and respect.

Nisei intelligence agent to keynote MIS reunion dinner

MONTEREY, Calif.—The unheralded story of Nisei intelligence agent, Richard Sakakida of Honolulu, will be told for the first time at the MIS 50th anniversary reunion dinner Thursday, Oct. 31, at the Hyatt Repency Hotel here. Nine months before Pearl Harbor, two bilingual Nisei—Sakakida and Arthur Komori—were recruited by a Nisei officer for duty with the Corps of Intelligence Police (CIP), predecessor to the Counter Intelligence Corpe (CIC). Both were sent to the Philippines posing as crewmen, but under guidance of the CIP had regis-tered in small Japanese-operated Sakakida posed as a draft dodger—a plausible story since several thousand Nisei were already in the U.S. Army. After the Japanese invasion, they were arrested by the Filipino police as Japanese collaborators but rescued from prison by the CIP and sent to Corregidor to assist General DouglasMacArthur.

How he survived until the end of the war will be the story to be unfolded by Sakakida himself. For tickets, contact MIS Re-union, P.O. Box 2350, San Jose, Pushing for 100% voter registration was designated by the Florin JACL Board, redress and civil rights committee as its top priority for the coming 1992 election year. "Every member and their families (3rd and 4th generation 18 years old and up) of the chapter shall be registered and encouraged to become a voting citizen and be counted," it was announced by Andy Noguchi and Mary Tsukamoto, redress/civil rights committee co-chair.

As voters, "we'll make a great difference together with other JACL chapters and other Asian organizations," they said. "We would then be empowered to influorganizations, they said. We would then be empowered to influence legislation that will truly bring equal justice for all.

To become a voting registrar, Tsukamoto (916/685-6747) explained basic instructions will be

Diablo Valley discusses JACL restructuring plan

PLEASANT HILL, Calif.—
Of the three chapters responding thus far to Northern California-Western Newade-Pacific district governor Neal Taniguchi's appeal for input on the proposed organizational restructuring of JACL, the Diablo Valley Chapter expressed the greatest concern. Because of that, Taniguchi recently explained the issue before members.
National wanted input about fore members.

National wanted input about the structure of JACL—confederacy, i.e. local autonomy with loose knit national organization vs. federation, where separate roles are defined for chapter, district and national, according to Unniquely who ataccording to Taniguchi who at-tended the Aug. 1 Diablo Val-ley board meeting here at the city hall conference room

Taniguchi noted that JACL has always been a chapter membership-driven organization. However, because of the current structure, decisions at the National level have been delayed with resultant makes delayed with resultant prob-lems. A federation system by giving specific authority and responsibilities to national, district and chapter could be a more efficient arrangement.

He requested the chapter to consider this issue and pro-vide further input and con-structive criticism so that coordination and communication to and from the chapters, dis-here are rowed. Chapter Boardmembers also condered: (a) Why it takes Na-ional so long to respond to tews in the media; (b) How loss National arrive at deci-tions, and (e) Why can't Na-ional take over the responsi-lity of membership renewals?

Serious questions raised at the June meeting prompted Taniguchi's presence as it appeared the National JACL's goals and objectives appeared uncertain and perhaps impact on the JACL Legacy Fund, according to co-president Dr.
Elsie Baukol. "If there are serious, anneabension, about rious apprehensions about JACL's future (re: restructuring) we must disclose these forthrightly to all members, especially to those who are soliciting for and to those who are contributing ..."

Four questions posed to the chapters were:

(1) Is there a need to change JACL's core mission? How well are we achieving our mission?

(2) What is JACL's desired sture? What should we be five years from now?

(3) What is JACL today? Its eaknesses and strengths?

(4) How do we get to our esired future?

Population boom poses challenges

By HARRY K. HONDA

The story of Asian immigration to the United States can be told in two thick chapters—(1) the first wave up to 1940 of some 425,000. Chinese and Japanese and (2) the new wave of 2 million Asians since 1965 when immigration laws were revised.

How this distinctive and sig-nificant increase is shaping the fortunes of Asian American stud-ies was the essence of Ellen Couglin's story and her interviews with a number of professors around the country involved with ethnic studies recently appeared in the Chronicle of Higher Educa-tion, a Washington, D.C. weekly.

Asian American studies first

And Dr. Ronald Takaki, today a professor of ethnic studies and author of Strangers from a Different Shore (1989), had just come on the Berkeley campus as a specialist in American black history. He spoke on race prejudice in Califor-

In Seattle at the University of Washington, Dr. James K. Morishims, a professor of higher education, headed the Asian American studies program as director when it opened in 1970. Now the campus stris to have all undergraduates take a "cultural diversity" course: one on U.S. racism plus another on specific American racial groups, preferably of color.

In Southern California, Larry Kubota and Alan Nishio (now at CSU Long Beach) launched in 1969 an Asian American experi-mental college at Inner City The-ater in Los Angeles. At UCLA, mental college at Inner City Theater in Los Angeles. At UCLA, Asian American courses were offered in the fall of 1969. Cal State Long Beach offered sew classes with Dr. Lloyd Inui, Dan Kuramoto and others. With interest developing at the high school level in the mid-1970s, serious attention was being paid to textbooks and multi-media—a concern that still persists.

At UC Davis, rural sociology professor Isase Fujimoto initiated Asian American studies. He was director of the bibliography project of relevant postgraduate thesis, "Asians in America" Other compilations were to follow.

At the University of Hawaii, Manca campus, after a year of planning, ethnic studies on five groups began in the fall of 1970 as a two-year experiment with Dr. Dennis Ogawa as program directives.

He later published several books on the Japanese in Hawaii, including Kodomo no Tame Ni (1978). On the Manoa campus, though not a part of the university, is the East-West Center. Times change: S.A. Nikkei job hunting in Japan

B ack in the 1930s virtually every liner sailing for Japan from the West Coast carried young Nisei who had the worried and uncertain look of job-seek-ers. They were going to Japan, probably for the first time, not as tourists, but in search of employment.

ers. Iney were gang to sapan, processly for the first time, not as tourists, but in search of employment. It would be wrong to say they were being pushed away from their native United States by twin forces of rejection. The Great Depression that made jobs scarce for everyone, and racial prejudice that held doors closed against them. Work opportunities in Japan weren't attractive. The standard of hiving was so low that unskilled jobs in field of factory were no lure. It was better to pick grapes in the Central Valley of California or can salmon in Alaska than to labor knee-deep, in the mud of a Japanese rice paddy or put in a 60-hour week in an Osaka textile plant.

So the goal was white collar employ-

So the goal was white collar employ-ment. Unfortunately most of the Nisei, whose work experience and knowledge of the Japanese language were limited, had little to offer potential employers other than English. Yet they were so desperate that the prospect of spending some time to learn enough dapanese to make them desirable on the job market seemed a viable alternative to menial dead-end employment in their native land.

It was not a happy time, but it comes to mind today under somewhat different circumstances.

Today, substantial numbers of Latin Today, substantial numbers of Latin Americans of Japanese descent are head-ing for Japan in search of jobs and to escape economic chaos, political instability and run-away inflation at home. The Japanese have an expression for them: The U-turn people who are making a U-turn back to the ancestral homeland. According to news items some 75 000

According to news items some 75,000 South Americans of Japanese descent had gone to Japan to seek work as of June a year ago. The Foreign Ministry eased immigration requirements at that time and now an estimated 100,000 are in Japan.
Most of them are from Brazil, which is the country with the largest number of ethnic Japanese.

Conditions in Japan today are far different from the time when Nisel from the United States were looking to the old courty for job opportunities. Japan is prosperous and is experiencing a manpower shortage. Even factory wage scales are comparable to those in the industrial West. Much of the menial work is being done by illegal immigrants from Southeast Asia. Many JACLers are asking themselves a question, what is next for JACL? Do we have any issues? Will JACL be needed?
However, I must report that yes, we will need JACL. The issues of the future will be more complex and require more energy than the issues of old.
My district, Mountain Plains has only a small population of Asians. Yet the explosive issues exist.

Now I know, many persons would say that if we "behave ourselves and don't make waves," we won't have these problems. I disagree. First, we should not have to "behave ourselves and not make waves to meet a standard of conduct beyond that which is required for any other American. We have earned the right to be ourselves, to show both courage and cowardice, industriousness and latiness, intelligence and ignorance, kindees and arrogance and to be both good and bad. Let us be guided by our hearts, minds, souls, and bodies, not by a need to Huffill a stereotype. At one time, we had to be a "model minority" to survive. But times have changed, and expectations have changed, we do not have to "step and fetch it" anymore. We must no longer accept being victims. Second, problems such as interracial tension and Asian gang violence will affect our communities. In Mountain Plains we have already seen these effects. To believe that we will be immune from the problems of Asian gang violence can interracial tension and Asian gang violence wall affect our communities. In Mountain Plains we have already seen these effects. To believe that we will be immune from the problems of Asian gang violence can interracial tension and Asian gang violence will affect our communities. Some may question if JACL should be come involved in these areas. But if JACL does not, who will address these issues? Only JACL has the track record to deal with issues such as these. So indeed, JACL's work is not done. Redress was not the end, but only the end of the beginning.

There are also internal issues that do directly affect us, and that we can do comething about, if we have the moral courage, and the convictions in our beliefs about civil and human rights.

'Gaijins' in Nippon

In METROPOLITAN AREAS in today's Japan, it apparently is not unusual to find Westerners engaged in what may be described as merital labor in the service sector of employment: waitress, flipping hamburgers at Johnny Rockets in Roppongi, and even cleaning mades for Magic Maid of America. In an affluent society where the young Japanese denizens smiff down at such menial tasks, more and more foreigners from Australia, Canada and some from the U.S. are filling the void. In so doing, these Westerners are joining what was previously the exclusive domain of Asian foreigners, primarily from South Korea and Taiwan. The jobs pay from about V1,000, give or take, an hour which comes to little over U.S. 87 which is a modest rate by almost any standard. Living on that in Tokyo or its environs is going to require some tough. its environs is going to require some tough financial juggling and a lot of belt-tight-ening. Even so, in a five-year span, the number of registered foreigners almost quadrupled to over 64,000. Inevitably, a certain number run afoul of the laws of Japan, ranging from pickpocketing to com-mitting murder. What happens to foreign miscreants within the Japanese justice system?

THE COURT SYSTEM in metropoli-tan areas such as Tokyo, Yokohama, Osaka as well as Okinawa, have set up "gaijin" (foreigner) courts. Tokyo's district court has set aside two sections for criminal proceedings involving gaijin miscreants charged with various offenses. Most ofcharged with various offenses. Most of-fenses involve comparatively minor charges such as overstaying a visa, drug posses-sion, pickpocketing, prostitution, shoplift-ing; there are also more serious charges such as major theft as well as murder. It is reported that most of those charged are Asians and few are Caucasians. Very often sentences of imprisonment are suspended on condition that the convicted offender be deported. Trials are without jury the judges deported. Trials are without jury, the judge sitting in full judgment.

COUNSELLOR EMIKO MIKI, a Japa-ese lawyer described as a "civil rights" lawyer, reportedly appears almost daily at the "Gaijin Court" in Yokohama, defendthe "Gaijin Court' in Yokohama, defending foreigners charged with criminal offenses. Counsellor Miki is reported as declaring that compared to Japanese miscreants, other Asians receive much stiffer sentences in Japanese courts. Citing to sentencing statistics over a period of almost five years, the counsellor says that whereas 62-56 of Japanese shoplifters are given suspended sentences, Asian foreigners experience only 23-68. This given the statistics that in this same period in Tokyo some 340 foreigners were arrested for pickpocksting while, at the same time,
