California creates commission to battle hate crimes

SACRAMENTO—A California statewide commission to prevent hate crimes was announced at a Sept. 24 news conference here.

The Hate Crimes Commission will develop recommendations for a statewide education and training campaign against hate crimes, according to Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy, who sponsored SB 98, a bill that would toughen misdemeanor and felony sentences for hate crimes and allow for unlimited punitive damages for hate crimes in civil cases. The bill is currently before Gov. Pete Wilson.

Named to the commission are Dennis Haysashi, JACL national director, and Ron Wakabayashi, executive director, Los Angeles

City Human Rights Commission.

Also appointed were Roberta Achtenberg, San Francisco County supervisor, San Francisco; Roger Coggan, legal services director, Los Angeles Gay & Lesbian Community Services Center; John Curran, civil rights attorney and community activist, Orange County; Dr. William Flores, chairman, Department of Chicano/Latin American Studies, CSU, Fresno; Rabbi Allan Freshling, University Synagogue, Los Angeles; Casey Kasem, entertainer, community activist, Hollywood; Gene Lightenstein, editor, Jewish Journal, Los Angeles; Bill Lockyer, state senator, author of SB 98, Hayward; Jim McElroy, attorney/co-counsel in civil suits against White Aryan Resistance, San Diego; Ann Noel, commission counsel, California State Fair Employment and Housing Commission, San Francisco; Fred Persily, director, Contra Costa County Hate Violence Reduction Task Force, Martinez; Vince Reyes, multicultural multilingual coordinator, Alameda County, Oakland; Brenda Steppes, principal, Hancock Park Elementary School, Los Angeles; Eric Vega, executive director, Sacramento County Human Rights Commission, Sacramento; Diane Watson, state senator, Los Angeles; and Steve White, district attorney, Sacramento.

Asian hot line proposed

The California Legislature has come up with a plan that would allow Asian residents to call a toll-free hot line to report crimes in their native languages.

According to a Sept. 22 story in the Los Angeles Times, the proposal was passed by the Legislature and is before Gov. Pete Wilson to sign into law.

The proposal is in response to the belief that too many Asians fail to turn to police for helping situations of trouble. In Orange County, the Times article reported, it is estimated that fewer than a third of all crimes in the Asian community are reported.

If signed, the bill will establish a three-year pilot program beginning Jan. 1, 1992. An 800 telephone number would be answered in a number of languages, including at this point the Cambodian, Hmong, Korean, Laotian, and Vietnamese languages, as well as the Chinese language, including the Cantonese dialect, and Mandarin.

Speakers

Rep. Robert T. Matsui (left), with former JACL President Jerry Enomoto, recently addressed the annual conference of the friends Outside National Organization (FONO) in Sacramento, Calif. FONO is a community-based prisoner support organization that helps build bridges between jail and prison inmates and their families. Matsui's comments focused on legislation he has introduced on behalf of youth, as well as his commitment toward recognizing and constructively building upon the increasing diversity in California society. Enomoto, a former director of the California Department of Corrections, was installed as the president of the FONO board of directors. He emphasized the increasing need for community involvement, in view of escalating prison population.

California bill would study state's contracting with minorities, women

SACRAMENTO—The California Legislature has passed a bill that would require study of the state's current practices and past record of contracting with minority and women businesses.

The bill, authored by Senate President pro Tempore David Roberti, is now before Gov. Pete Wilson for his consideration.

The study requirement is a response to complaints by many minority and women business owners and organizations that the state has not adequately monitored its own efforts to increase contracting with these groups.

The bill would also seek to assess the precise relationship between the availability of women and minority firms in the state and their past and present participation levels in state contracting.

According to Roberti, a recent study showed that the state is lacking in this area.

The state public contracting statutes require that the state seek to do 15 percent of its private enterprise contracting with minority-owned firms and five percent with women business enterprises.

The 1990 report, however, indicates the state is doing about one percent of its contracting with women and minorities.

Health plan for women, children is announced

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Children and Pregnant Women's Health Insurance Act of 1991, which provides universal access to health care for all pregnant women and children up through age 21, was announced by Rep. Robert T. Matsui Sept. 24.

Matsui pointed out that one-seventh of the population, or 87 million Americans, are without health insurance. One quarter of the uninsured is children under the age of 18, he added. Another 6.4 million youths between 18 and 24 years old, lack health insurance.

The act is based on a "pay or play" model that builds upon the current employer-based health insurance model by requiring employers to extend health insurance coverage to pregnant women and children. Employers can accomplish this by either purchasing a qualified insurance plan or by paying into public fund that would purchase health insurance for pregnant women and children.

The public plan would be administered through individual states, Matsui said. Each state would be required to establish a State Children and Pregnant Women Health Plan to contract with private insurers to provide health care services to pregnant women and children not covered under an employer-sponsored plan.

Stephen B. Sample (left), new president of the University of Southern California, and California Secretary of State March Fong Eu meet members of the Asian Pacific American community at a recent reception at the Japanese American Cultural and Community Center in Los Angeles. The new USC president spoke on his views about the university and its relationship with the Asian Pacific American community. Sample was installed Sept. 20.

Heart Mountain camp is sought as site of museum

POWELL, Wyo.—Bacon Sakatani, who lived at the Heart Mountain camp as a teenager during World War II, returned here this past week on a two-fold mission: (1) to check out the condition of a camp barracks to be donated to the Japanese American National Museum and (2) to lend support to local efforts for a museum on the site.

The Heart Mountain Memorial Foundation, which evolved from the Powell Centennial Committee, met at Northwest College on Sept. 18 to discuss the future of the old Heart Mountain Relocation Center but what happened, as covered by Chuck Hasser of the Powell Tribune, again confirmed that what happens at the site remains an issue close to the hearts of both local residents and former internees.

Reets sought to define guidelines to launch the project, determine the site of the museum and visitor center, how to preserve the existing view, etc., the organizers also wanted to include differing perspectives including those of the internees. And Sakatani spoke.

"We internees should put up our own monument because it's our job to say what we went through. To say we had modern sewers, modern schools, is to miss the point... We can't shove our ideas down your throats, but when our views are included, it will be the final chapter."

Sakatani stressed he did not want to rewrite history or drag up bad memories in relating his camp experiences, the "No Japs" signs all over town in nearby Cody and the anti-evacuee discrimination

Bush, Fujimori meet over U.S. aid

WASHINGTON—President Bush has urged Congress to release a $96 million U.S. aid package for President Fujimori's crop-substitution plan to persuade farmers to abandon coca leaf cultivation.

Soon after Fujimori was inaugurated in June 1990, he did not sign the military and economic portion of a $36 million package since there was no provision for crop substitution. Congress, withheld an earlier $60 million economic aid for Peru on grounds that the country's authorities were guilty of widespread human rights violations.

"You have made progress on human rights," Bush told Fujimori after their talk Tuesday (Sept. 17) at the White House. "Without this needed aid, cocaine traffic will continue unabated, and violence abuses will increase unredressed."

At the National Press Club the next day, Fujimori reminded that, "if we solve our problem, we will be helping you." While Peru produces 50% of world's coca leaf, the source of cocaine, the United States consumes 80% of the world's cocaine, he noted. And the nearly $100 million package is but one-

GARDENA, Calif.—P.C. senior editor Harry Honda will speak on "President Fujimori of Peru after One Year," at a joint South Bay, Gardena Valley and Carson JACL Chinese buffet luncheon on Saturday, Oct. 5, 12:30-3:30 p.m., at Nakaoka Community Center, 1700 W. 162nd St. Joining him will be Luis Yamakawa, long-time PANA advocate, and Jonathan Sanchez, active in the Southern California Peruvian business and social community. Honda and Sanchez were both present at Fujimori's inaugural last year.

Reservations are required by Sept. 30 through Ruth (213) 528-6842, Agnes (213) 599-2564 or Midori (213) 541-6899.

tenth of 1% of what the U.S. spends to fight drugs, he pointed out.

Fujimori, who inspected the farms where coca is being grown in the two main areas, added that coca happens to be the only crop sold on the open free market, most of it grown on untitled land and earning about $400 per capita a year. If they can switch to pigs, wheat, chickens or some other cash crop, the 250,000 coca-growers would be earning much, much more.

"While spending the first year in office talking to the farmers to change their crops, I was also able to gain their confidence," Fujimori continued, and at the same time received their assurances as well as from the 200 farming groups of their support. "They all want to grow legal crops, they want property rights and security from the terrorists," he said.

Aware of the red-tape, complicated Spanish customs and administrative laws in order to export products, Fujimori said he wants to give property rights to the farmers who abandon coca crops, and cut down the paper work as well.

Short takes

CARTOON CORRECTED—

The editorial page cartoon on the Iran-Contra hearings and showing three senators hearing Col. Ollie North, "There seems to be a loose cannon...." in the Indianapolis Star July 11 depicts the physical appearance of Sen. Daniel Inouye, seen with both arms in place and hands on the table. Elbert L. Watson, publisher of the World War II Times, not only corrected the artist but cited Inouye's war record in his letter to the editor appearing a week later.

PARADE ON TAPE—Video-tapes, VHS format, of the 1991 Nisei Week Festival parade in Los Angeles are available at $20, directly from Lou Remezar, Continental Cablevision, 8057 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA, 90048. Kate Kunitzuru, JACCC executive secretary, and Phillip Barton, NWF publicist, were the narrators.

COOL RECEPTION—Promoters of the Pearl Harbor symposium in Honolulu Dec. 6-12 featuring Japanese fighter pilots who flew in the 1941 attack it is not getting well in Japan.

Gary Beito, executive director of the Arizona Memorial Museum Association, a co-sponsor, who returned from Tokyo, added: "We tried to find people in Japan to sell it, but nobody would touch us."

MISSION—As part of the year-long ceremonies next year at UCLA Royce Hall remembering the 50th anniversary of WWII evacuation and internment, Sacramento undergraduate Eryn Tsuboi has identified 175 evacuee Japanese American students and faculty from UCLA archives and she is attempting to locate them.

Min Toniai of the Nisei Bruin Committee and other UCLA alumni are planning a Feb. 22 kickoff event. The UCLA Asian American Studies Center project is being directed by Professor Don Nakamichi and Genn Matsuda, 3232 Campbell Hall, Los Angeles, CA 90024, (213) 825-2974.

HISTORY REVISITED—Newly declassified U.S. papers show President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles seriously considered pulling all U.S. military forces out of Japan in wake of the 1957 William S. Girard incident, according to Los Angeles Times writer Jim Mann.

The case involved an American soldier in central Japan, annoyed by impoverished Japanese picking up empty shell casings from a firing range that they might sell for scrap, accidentally shot and killed a fleeing Japanese woman picker. Despite the furor in Congress and U.S. veteran groups, Girard was tried in a Japanese court, convicted and given a three-year suspended sentence.

The papers about the 1950s, which were declassified and published by government historians, also reveal how off-base U.S. intelligence was about the economic picture and potential of Japan.

MENTAL AWARENESS—Among the 60 organizations in greater Los Angeles representing psychiatrists, mental health professionals, hospitals and advocacy groups promoting mental illness awareness during October are Asian Pacific Community Mental Health Center, 3550 W. 6th St., Los Angeles 90020 (213) 738-4205, and some 20 Asian Pacific self-help clubs. Mental Illness Awareness Week is being observed nationally Oct. 6-12, through a Congressional joint resolution signed by President Bush.

Agenda

Cleveland

Controversy over a 59-acre "Golden Estate" development in Brunswick, Ohio, erupted when opponents learned the developer was from Taiwan and feared a "concentrated population of Chinese immigrants."

Henry Tanaka, chapter president and Midwest District governor, noted the issue had been discussed at its board meeting in wake of a May 18 article in the Plain Dealer, which reported residents in opposition had threatened a referendum to the council action approving the development.

"This case is but one illustration of the need for our chapter to be constantly sensitive and alert to potentially discriminatory actions," Tanaka said.

"Asian Americans in our community have become more visible numerically and play key roles in the development of our community in the financial, social, educational and economic arena. Similar situations are bound to occur," he warned.

Besides potatoes, pelicans abound in Idaho

CATCHING UP WITH THE MAIL—Frank Wada of Pingree, Idaho, writes that his son Albert has started his early potato harvest on 4,150 acres. Considering that 640 acres make up one square mile, Albert's hired help will be digging up nearly six and a half square miles of southeastern Idaho farmland which is a staggering amount of real estate.

Frank adds that fishing in his part of the state is miserable and has been getting worse since pelicans with a voracious appetite for trout moved up from Utah. He doesn't say whether fishing in Utah has improved.

Frank Iritani of Bakersfield sends along his "third and final" version of "Ten Visits," a labor of love. It's a slim guide, with commentary and maps, about the 10 wartime WRA detention camps and how to reach the sites.

Although some of the locations are well-marked, others are difficult to find. For example, he discovered that the town of Minidoka is about 60 miles east of the WRA Minidoka camp in southern Idaho. The Gila River campsite is only a few miles outside Phoenix, Ariz., but Iritani had to drive over dirt roads, past a small white tank and a hay barn, then climb a knoll from which he could see "several cement slab foundations among the tall weeds and shrubs."

Strange indeed that some campsites are memorialized with impressive monuments—Manzanar, Rohwer, Heart Mountain, among others—while others are returning quietly to the desert.

There were some responses regarding a column written some months ago about "karaoke," a marvelous Japanese invention that enables ordinary folks fortified by a little beer to perform as singers. In reality it's an electronic device that plays tapes of background music. It is installed mostly in bars where patrons are encouraged to pick up a microphone and sing to the taped accompaniment. The name derives from "kara," meaning empty or non-existent, and "oke" which is the first part of word

"orchestra" as the Japanese pronounce it. S. Don Shimazaki of Honolulu suggests an equally appropriate interpretation might be "empty orchestra," with the vocalist filling the emptiness.

Tak Kimura, also of Honolulu, wrote me a moving account of how he screwed up enough nerve one day to enroll in a karaoke singing class and discovered that he wasn't bad at all. He enjoyed the experience of performing so much that he has added a new dimension to his social life. I wish I could quote his letter at length, but alas, there just isn't enough space.

Sylvia Kobayashi of Anchorage, who is undertaking research in anticipation of writing a book on Japanese immigrants and Japanese Americans in Alaska, reports she met Fran and Joe Kawashima in Petersburg recently. Sam and Jim Taguchi in Juneau, and in Ketchikan interviewed 84-year-old Mrs. Ohashi and George Tanino. She is interested in getting in touch with Nisei who served in the Aleutians during World War II. Can you help her?

A thing about English in katakana

The Japanese have a thing about English. How big a thing? Judge for yourself.

Every year, tens of thousands of Japanese students come to the U.S. expressly to study conversational English at first hand.

Teaching English is a multi-billion yen industry in Japan, comprising private tutoring in the teachers' homes to nationally franchised juku. Tens of thousands of people make their livelihood at it.

Except in English-speaking countries, English studies have reached the highest academic level in the world in Japan.

Staggering numbers and quantities of books, dictionaries, periodicals and other papers such as no other country can match pour out from Japan's presses. No other nation spends as much money, time, energy and resources as the Japanese for the acquisition of skills in English.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt once said—on what occasion, and apropos of what have slipped my memory: "Of all personal attainments none can match for ostentation value the ability to speak foreign languages." Since for a great majority of Japanese conversing with an Englishman or an American in English is an unlikely happening, I propose a corollary to Roosevelt's wise observation: There is considerable ostentation value in the ability to toss off foreign words and expressions, in this instance English.

And the intellectual climate of Japan seems ideal to indulge in the self-satisfaction of using English words and phrases in appropriate contexts. Practically everybody goes to middle and high schools in Japan, and is put through 6 years of compulsory English. There are very few Japanese who do not have at least a smattering of English. It is a point of self-respect for them to recognize the English words and phrases they encounter in their daily lives, though these are mostly in the form of katakana English.

In view of the widely reputed, and often demonstrated ineptness of a great majority of Japanese in handling English the national hang-up on English words is quite puzzling. There is a possible explanation for this seeming contradiction. I hope to come to it later. Here let me concentrate on the katakana English phenomenon which indeed is the most conspicuous feature of the Japanese language today. Katakana English words are the Japanese versions of English terms expressed in katakana. Pronounced with Japanese intonations, and given katakana notations which not infrequently suggest the original terms have been mispronounced, they stand out in conversation or in print. There are so many that they often give the appearance of overrunning Japanese. And in many areas it is true.

In the 1974 best seller ad-5 The Sinking of Japan by Komatsu Sakyo, (There's an English translation, and it is worth reading.) I counted about 450 separate kana words, aside from the geographical, seismological terms. Actual count of kana words may exceed a thousand. Most of these are basic, common nouns, adjective-adverbs, and simple verbs, with perfectly usable membership director. Chapter President Carol Hisatomi and luncheon chair Titus Hisatomi extended greetings. Stan Umeda, scholarship chair, presented the awards to: Emily Lee (Elk Grove High), Wendy Murai (Kennedy High), Hilary Uchida (Davis High), Russell Ouchida and Doug Sugimoto (both UC Berkeley).

The voter registration drive was launched at the Florin JACL community picnic held Sept. 7. Aware of the importance of voting power at the polls, the chapter has set a 100% voter registration goal of its membership, according to Mary Tsukamoto.

Latin America

The third annual Latin America JACL Fiesta will feature music, dancing, displays and "authentic" foods of Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Peru on Saturday, Oct. 19, 7:30 p.m., at Ken Nakaseki Center, 1700 W. 162nd St., Gardena. It was announced by chapter president Larry Tokuyama (213/790-1916). The fiesta has become an evening attracting Latin American Nikkei residents in the Southland, students and JACLers who have participated in Pan American Nikkei Association conventions. Tickets are $20 presale, $25 at the door, c/o Keiko Masumura, 15011 Van Buren, Gardena, CA 90247. Check payable to JACL Latin America Chapter.

San Mateo

Volunteers who staffed the JACL Community Center, Japanese Library, senior women's Ichi no Tomo club, senior men's Kiraku Kai, Martin Luther King dining center, the center maintenance and newsletter mailing—82 in all—were honored at an appreciation luncheon Sept. 24. Jane Wakerman of the Retired Senior Volunteers Program was guest speaker.

Chapter president Steve Okamoto presented gifts and certificates of appreciation. Karyl Matsumoto, JACL Community Center Advisory Committee chair introduced the honorees. Dorothy Masuda and Jean Fujita are coordinators of the volunteer program.

Arizona

The Arizona Chapter JACL and Arizona JACL Inc., have been merged as the "JACL, Arizona Chapter." It was announced by chapter president Rick Matsui. The change eliminates a duplicity of efforts, facilitates operations and still retains the structural guidelines for which the previous two organizations had existed, it was explained.

On the calendar are the Chojukai bento bingo dinner Oct. 10 at the JACL Hall (RSVP by Oct. 6 with Helen Tanita 602/944-2050), chapter picnic Nov. 3, and series of important 1992 events: Chinese New Year (Year of the Monkey) festivities Jan. 28-31 at Patriots Park; ORA redress workshop, Thursday, Jan. 30, 4-8 p.m., at the JACL Hall (subject to confirmation); the gala Glendale city centennial parade on Saturday, Feb. 8; and Japan Week—Matsuri kickoff Feb. 22-23 at Heritage Square.

Sonoma County

Fall calendar, which began with the anti-Asian hate crimes workshop Sept. 8 at Enmanji Hall, continues with the annual Keiro Kai event in honor of seniors in October, the traditional sushi night in November and mochi-tsuki in December. "These cultural and social events are excellent ways to introduce potential members to our community," reminded Carol Kawase, chapter president.

Community

State Assemblyman Lloyd Connelly and Nisei pioneer Henry Taketa will be honored for their leadership and contribution to the Sacramento Asian community at the Sacramento Asian Community Center fund-raising dinner Oct. 19, 6:30-9 p.m., at Lincoln Plaza Atrium at 4th and P Streets.

As in the past, food selections, wine and soft drinks are contributed from a host of Japanese and Chinese restaurants and generous individuals. Proceeds go to the Asian Community Nursing Home. Co-chairs are Toko Fujii, Peggy Lim and Nancy Akabori. Tickets are $50 (916/393-9026).

The 36th anniversary party of the Golden Gate Optimists Club will be held on Saturday, Oct. 26, 6:30 p.m., at Miyako Hotel, San Francisco. George Yoshida's Sentimental Journey quartet will entertain with Larry Ching, the prewar Forbidden City singer who sang a la Crosby and Joan Tilson as vocalists. RSVP: Tats Ogawa (415/398-4110) or Tak Matsuba (415/931-5629).

Japanese equivalents. Yet such is the people's addiction to English that about 300 of them have permanently, or nearly displaced their Japanese counterparts. The following are a few of them picked at random from a few pages of a magazine: manner; center; unique; note; illustration; case; file; point; system; plank; copy; off record; sex; group; lion, etc.

MOTHER NATURE'S GRAPHICS, and THIS IS JAPAN, are titles of a big monthly magazine's special issues, and they are in English, but they are for Japanese readers. ZA ENTERTAINMENT (in kana, ZA is the kana notation for THE) is the name of an annual anthology of literary odds and ends, for Japanese readers. A newly published dictionary of the national language (Kokugo Jiten) is named Daily Concise, in English. Many new products have katakana English names. Of the many newly changed names of business and industrial firms, 44% are in katakana English.

The Japanese fixation on English is creating problems. But most critics seem to view them from the perspective of the number of the English words which are inundating Japan. As far as I can ascertain, little is being said about the more basic aspects of the phenomenon: What are the effects of the English invasion? What is happening to the Japanese language? And in the first place why the national fixation?

The Japanese language seems to be facing the moment of truth.

AGENDA

Cleveland

Controversy over a 59-acre "Golden Estate" development in Brunswick, Ohio, erupted when opponents learned the developer was from Taiwan and feared a "concentrated population of Chinese immigrants."

Henry Tanaka, chapter president and Midwest District governor, noted the issue had been discussed at its board meeting in wake of a May 18 article in the Plain Dealer, which reported residents in opposition had threatened a referendum to the council action approving the development.

"This case is but one illustration of the need for our chapter to be constantly sensitive and alert to potentially discriminatory actions," Tanaka said.

"Asian Americans in our community have become more visible numerically and play key roles in the development of our community in the financial, social, education and economical arena. Similar situations are bound to occur," he warned.

Seattle

A Seattle JACL six week pre-retirement workshop for the Nikkei community, which was hailed a success, featured expert guest speakers, exercises, discussions, and workbooks prepared by the American Association of Retired Persons. Persons interested in joining the chapter aging and retirement committee should call Misaoko St. Germain, Seattle JACL, 1414 S. Weller St., Seattle, WA 98144.

Meanwhile, the 1991 Northwest Wellness Conference for Seniors will be held at Ocean Shores, Oct. 27-Nov. 1. Members from JACL, Tomo no Kai, and Nikkei Concerns are expected to attend.

Fresno

"Soiree," a poetry-reading musical benefit, sponsored by the chapter Aug. 2 at Newman Center for the Central California Nikkei Foundation, was well-attended as the organizers estimated some $700 had been raised.

Dr. Lawson Inada, professor of English and poetry at Southern Oregon State College, clarinetist Miles Ishigaki and program chair Elise Kamimoto were applauded for their feature roles.

Others on the credit list were Virginia Houser and Patricia Watson who performed Mozart's Clarinet Trio with Miles; the trio collaborating with Lawson in a suite of Japanese folksongs and improvisations about Fresno.

in Powell, and the story of his family being uprooted from their San Gabriel farm in 1942. "My parents lost everything," he explained.

Sakatani also insisted the monument erected by the Legion in 1963 "doesn't tell the internee's side... (though) it was done with the best of intentions and to the best of their abilities."

Reetz said: "We've found there were differences of opinion, but I felt there was a real commitment towards working for the historical preservation of the site" and appreciated Sakatani's perspective. "No one else could have done that, only a person who lived there. He started us thinking of the continuum of history and to sensitize us to his feelings. For that reason, the comments were helpful. It points to the fact that we need to make sure that the former internees are involved."

(Tribune writer Hassler notes: Those who live in the shadow of Heart Mountain look to it as a source of comfort and inspiration, and when they return from a journey it's common to hear them speak affectionately of the landmark. For the more than 11,000 people who were interned in the "relocation" camp at the foot of Heart Mountain during the Second World War, the landmark is no less significant.)
