I am equally disturbed by the slurs hurled at us across the broad ocean by Japanese officials and business. There's no excuse for what's happen-ing, and it's about time we said so." The mayor showed the gathering a drawing he received from a local el-dementary school student. Similar to drawings sent to County Supervisor. Gloris Molina, the message-fread, "Americans yeal Japan no! Vote sgain before the Japanese bomb the LISA. again. Vote again." Bradley said he found the pictures "frightening" adding, "I worry that teachers, parenta, and televised pol-ticians have thoughtlessly planted the seeds of hatred in these young minds. I fear that these seeds will grow and that our youngsters will turn against all Americans of Japanese ancestry." The mayor used the opportunity to criticize local politicians who were involved in drumming up public out-rage against the Sumitomo contract to build the Metro Green Line

Line. These officials who should lead with patience and dignity have de-scended to the gutter level of politics with their mind-less criticism of Japanese companies. The ambition of these elected officials blinded them to the facts.

Boycott Japanese cars says NAACP

By GWEN MURANAKA istant editor

By OWER which defore Resistant editor Echoing the nationwide "buy American" senti-ment, Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the Na-tional Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), citing the low number of car fran-chises owned by African Americans, called for a boy-cott on Japanese cars: Speaking before a gathering in Baltimore celebrat-ing the 83rd anniversary of the NAACP, Hooks said, This is not Japanese bashing. We don't hate any-body, but we want to take care of our own." The NAACP action comes at a point when U.S. Japan relations have reached a nadir and fears of backlash have risen within the Japanese American commu-nity.

have risen within the Japanese American commu-nity. LeRoy Berry, commissioner on the City of Los Angeles Human Relations Commission and NAACP member, said about Hooks' call, "It's a reaction to a specific problem. "He's (Berjamin Hooks) not part of the Japanese bashing. People are going to tie it together. When the media or the press gets anything they lump it all together because it's more volatile and they want to make it as volatile as possible." Berry added, "As long as there are minorities in this country, unless minorities come together and put a stop to (racism), it's gonna keep going on. And if minorities ever feel that I'm more favored than the other minority so it doesn't apply to me, so let them bash them."

bash them." Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley, speaking on the boycott said that it was done "in order to sensitize industry in Japan that in this country we believe in affirmative action, we believe in promoting opportu-nity. I ahare that view." The Mayor noted that Hooks had conducted a survey which showed that only a handful of African Americans own car franchises. "When it is understood by major Japanese compa-nies that one of the identifications of corporate good citizenship is to open up opportunities for all, I think that measage will get through, "said Bradley. Ron Wakabayashi, executive director, Los Angeles City Human Relations Commission, said about Hooks"

California introduces language rights bill

SACRAMENTO-A bill has been introduced into the Califor-nia Legislature that would stop the practice of employers denying the right to speak a language other than English in the work-place without business justifica-tion.

Introduced by Assemblyman Xavier Becerra (D-Monterey Park), AB 2440 would codify ex-Park), AB 2440 would codify ex-isting regulations of the Fair Em-ployment and Housing Commis-sion which requires that an En-glish-only rule may only be justi-fied if it is a business necessity or other specified conditions. "Over the past few years, a number of employers in California have required their employ-ees to speak English at work, even during private conversa-tions," Becerra said. "Such broad rules which have no business jus-tification should not be tolerated. Imposing this sort of requirement offentimes brings about divisive. oftentimes brings about divisive-ness on the job and an atmo-sphere of intimidation for those oftentim ho speak English as a second during those times when English is not essential to their work-such as breaks, lunch hours and other circumstances. AB 2440 strikes a reasonable balance be-tweenacknowledging the business interests of employers and pre-serving the language rights of lin-guistic minority groups. Bob Bratt and his redress stories worthy to make their claims. In a brief address at a JACL chapter meeting Bratt said that by mid-March Re-dress payments, totaling one billion dol-lars, will have been made to roughly two-thirds of the 75,000 eligible claimants. That leaves about $500 million to go to 25,000 in the third and final year of the pay-out program. program.

program. Even in these times a billion dollars is no small sum. It has been distributed at the rate of $20,000 per head which also is no small sum. It certainly cannot be consid-ered adsquate compensation for psycho-logical and monetary injuries suffered in the Evacuation—in fact no price can be set for those damages—but on the other hand 20,000 tax-free dollars is not chicken feed for the vast majority of recipients. From a crassly economic point of view.

From a crassly economic point of view, Redress payments so far have amounted to a billion-dollar economic shot in the arm for what might be called the community. That is a major news story. Imagine press reac-tion if someone in an Uncle Sam suit had appeared in LiT Tokyo, San Francisco's Japantown, Seattle's International area, Denver's Sakura Square and other points and began to pass out $20,000 bundles of greenbacks to every Japanese American over the age of 45 or thereabouts who had been affected by Franklin Roosevelt's foul Executive Order 9066. Yet Lesis each pothing in the Japanese

Yet I have seen nothing in the Japanese American press about the effect of this belated, welcome and unexpected influx of cash which for lack of a better term will be called a windfall.

Have mortgages been paid off? Has there been a rush to buy new cars? How has the real estate market been affected; $20,000 real estate market been anected; $20,000 makes a comfortable down payment. Is there mere action for the stock brokers or have bank deposits scared? How about the little merchants; were there any saved from bankruptcy by an increase in business? Ard bankruptcy of an increase in orderiness. An there more restaurant meals being sold, more restaurant meals being bought? Have grandchildren been assured of college edu-cations? Are travel agents prospering anew? If the press weren't so busy catering to the natterings of publicity-seekers, we might be getting some answers to these question

We might be reading moving stories like the one about the pastry shop owner who helped establish the eligibility of a fellow who has been sleeping for years in a car and opened a bank account for him when the check arrived.

About the half dozen or so homeless Nisei street people who gained a new chance at rehabilitation, and the folks who helped them to apply for Redre 188

About the man who had been entrusted with a friend's bonds during the Evacua-tion and who, with the assistance of Bratt's office, was able to locate that friend and return the securities.

About the remarkable work done by JACL and other volunteers in helping the former evacuees to establish their eligibility and file their claims.

Getting Congress and the President to approve Redress was only part of the story. There is much more to be told.

One day in early summer of 1872 the British consul at Yokohama paid a call on the governor of the Kanagawa pre-fecture with an unusual request. The men of the British warship Iron Duke at anchor at Yokohama Harbor, were nightly dis-turbed by screams issuing from a Peruvian barque Maria Luz anchored close by. They suspected that men were being put to tor-ture. Would the governor investigate and if suspected that men were being put to tor-ture. Would the governor investigate and if the suspicions were confirmed would he order the captain of the ship to cease and docist?

The fortuitous circumstance that the g The fortuitous circumstance that the gov-ernor was not in due to indisposition led to the unusual development this little busi-ness took, for the man who received the consul that days as fill in governor was Ohye Take, the fiery advocate of human rights who, 4 years before, had single-handedly brought about the abolition of the Eta caste, emancipating the 380,000 untouchables and putting them into the commoner class. (I intend to write about this revolutionary event for this space later.) Ohye promised event for this space later.) Onye promised the consul the prefecture would take proper action.

That night, the Kanagawa police rescued a man who jumped overboard from the Maria Luz and was pursued by her crew. He was Mu King, a Chinese of Amoy. With half of his head and one eyebrow shaved off, he was.covered with marks of beating all over his face and body. There were about 230 Chinese aboard the freighter, he told the police, all tricked into slavery by Ricardo Herrera, the Perg and captain; that all of them had half the nead and one eyebrow shaved off, for easy identification in case they escaped; that those of them who pro-tested the ill treatment were mercilessly beaten. they escaped; that those or un-tested the ill treatment were

The case was right down his alley, as it were, and Ohye was raring to act. But there were obstacles. The first was the governor, were obstacles. The first was the governor, Mutsu Munemitsu, who contemptuously maintained that the foreign service, being a bunch of weak kneed milksops, would sweep the matter under the carpet, and whatever the prefecture did would he wasted effort. Onys solved the problem by manipulating to have Mutsu moved up-stairs as Vice-Minister of the Treasury. The second was a point of international law. low

So a meeting with foreign consuls was held. Herrera, who had changed his story sev-eral times, now maintained that the Chi-nese were indentured servants who had signed up and been paid for work in Peru. The German consul supported Herrera. Objects to racism in baseball

Unfortunately life is not fair. My father contributed to the allies of America before this country entered World War 11. He was an American ditizen. His constitutional rights were taken from him because of his race not his citizenship. He was forced to move and relinquish his business. His son grew up in an America that criticized him for his acareinquisit in some set the set of the set of States. After hearing the comments of Fay Vincent, I realize that racism is living and growing strong. I don't understand why a company that has been active in the United States and has a location in the State of Washington for over fifth a years when asked to purchase a baseball free short has a location in the State of Washington for over fifth in years when asked to purchase a baseball franchise, is denied, because of its Japanese origin. Vincent state that it is all right for Canada to have major league fran-chises. But for a man who has lived by the laws of this country and run a company that employs 1400 people for over 15 years to be denied ownership because of his race is zer-tainly an act that cannot be tolerated in the 1990's 1990's

1990's. Why are the politicians and Fay Vincent using Japan as a scapegoat for our economic problems. They make us believe that Japan is the cause of our economic problems. Noth-ing is mentioned of the saving and loans scandals that have cost and will cost this country billions of dollars, the junk bond scams, and the lack of leadership in educa-tion. Japan is used as a scapegoat. The U.S. auto industry who at one time made fun of Japanese cars now insist that Japan buy American cars. American cars that have not American cars. American cars that have not been designed for their highways. In Japan they drive on the left side of the street like they arive on the left side of the street like Britain. No American companies make cars with steering wheels on the right side. Also nothing is mentioned of the fact that Ameri-can cars don't sell well in Europe or that GM has decided to open a new plant in China. Little is publicized of the fact that Britain and Holland own more American real estate than any other countries. And the fact that Australia is buying American companies and real estatis at a fast rate or that Germans have just purchased Pan American Airlines. I love my American heritage. Let us build on it and show that international relation-ships can be made positive with our national game. Just as Jackie Robinson was given an opportunity, we should give Nintendo a chance. After all what has become more American to our children than Nintendo?

to buy a person as a virtual slave, for any length of time, is an act that went counter to civilized prac-tice, and a civilized state could not tolerate such an act; for Japan to except in the state of the state tice, and a civilized state could not tolerate such an act; for Japan to assert jurisdiction over its territo-rial waters strictly conformed to international custom, therefore Japan's action had been proper and justifiable. Deliberations by the consuls dragged on. Soyejima Taneomi, the Foreign Minister, was not the weak-kneed milkaop as charac-terised by Ohye's predocessor, but the man who had helped him to get appointed governor. Now he acted decisively. He ordered Herrers to release the Chinese at once. Then the Kanagawa police boarded the ship, and forcibly re-moved the Chinese. Herrera took an American mailboat home, and appealed to the Peruvian govern-ment. Peru dispatched its pleni-potentiary Oscar Heeren to Japan to demand restitution, which Ja-pan rejected out of hand. The bi-lateral dispute developed into an international affair. Finally, Ozar Alexander II of Russia wasbrought international affair. Finally, Ozar Alexander II of Russia was brought in to arbitrate. The Carr supported Japan's action as justified on moral grounds. Peru had to swallow the defeat.

defeat. Japan the Srd-rate country, the newest initiate in the society of civilized nations, proclaimed it-self as defender of human rights and human freedom, winning the respect of the world. * * *As I wrote this, I kept on thinking of the most abominable crime of wartime Japan: the forcible drafting of the Korean women and drafting of the Korean women and young maidens into prostitution. Where the responsibility lies has been established beyond any doubt. Claims for reparation have been filed by surviving victims. But the Japanese government has not admitted guilt, let alone apolo-gizing, and expisting the crime.

What a despicable picture of a morally bankrupt superpower Japan of today presents to the world! What a stark contrast it makes with the Japan of 120 years ago! The puny island nation just emerging from the coccon of medi-eval age, it stood at the forefront of the nations of the world with a moral stature out of all proportion to its insignificant military and economic status.

Hawaii's anti-Japanese movement detailed

By HARRY HONDA

Books

By HART FINDA Editor emeritus Gary Y. Okihiro, professor of history at Cornell University where he heads its Asian Ameri-can Studies Program, reviewed his new book, "Cane Fires: The-Japanese Movement in Hawaii, 1865-1945," at the Torranec Civic Center Library recently at a Japa-nese American National Museum-sponsored party.

ness American Ivational Museum-sponsored party. The Hawaiian-born professor uncovered indications of system-atic spying and a military intern-ment plan that dates back to 1922, noting that the racial discrimina-tion against Japanese was quite similar in Hawaii to the situation on the Mainland. It involved col-lusion between the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' Association, the 'Big Five' (corporations which dominated sugar production in the 'Dos: American Factors, C. Brewer, Alexander & Baldwin, Castle & Cooke, and T.H. Davies), the Ter-ritorial government and the U.S. military, who had interest in keep-ing the Nisei uneducated. noting that the racial discrimination ritorial government and the U.S. military, who had interest in keep-ing the Nisei uneducated. Based upon "a (1923) secret document" from General Summerall, which he "lucked upon," Okihiro said he detected a familiar scenario of the military being suspicious of Japanese Americane net Mised on any real Americans, not based on any real threat, but on racially-motivated fears, such as "they all live to-gether near military installa-tions." Okihiro suggests in his book that these original fears were fanned by the Japanese workers' strikes against plantation inequi-ties and the irrational idea that the Japanese would somehow be "taking over Hawwii." Since business interests in He-the Japanese would somenow be "taking over Hawaii." Since business interests in Ha-waii were the political interests, Okihiro concludes that the Big Five et al had a stake in keeping Japanese Americans neutralized. They tried "to steer the Nisei away from education" and into technical schools and blue collar work, he added. And the plantation bosses even tried To-keep track of how the Japanese voted. One trick was to tie a pencil to a string and hang it from a beam over the booth. By watching which way the string went, the bosses could see which way a person was voting.

way a person was voting.

Okihiro, born on Aiea, attended Hawaiian Mission Academy and a schoolmate of the current Gov-ernor John Waihee and his future First Lady Lynne Kobashigawa. He matriculated to Pacific Union College, majored in history and continued at UCLA graduate school. He began teaching at Humboldt State, then at Santa Clara and at Cornell since 1989. Clara and at Cornell since 1980. He has written four other books, including "Japanese Legacy: Farming and Community Life in California's Santa Clara Valley" with Timothy J. Lukes.

Fishing in New Zealand: This is one of the loveliest places on planet Earth. Its green hilly coun-tryside intersected by streams, rivers and lakes, makes one wonder if this may not have been the original "Garden of Eden." It is a perfect destination for the out-doors person. World famous hikdoors person. World itemous hik-ing trails and superb golf courses abound. Fishing here is world re-nown. Not only is there an abun-dance of rout and salt water game fish, but they are of trophy size. Yellowtail 300 or under are thrown back. Most New Zealanderg don't back. Most New Zealanders don't bother with trout under 54. You may have heard old timers tell you, "You should have fished here 50 years ago." Fishing in New Zealand is better than it was here 50 years ago. An added attraction is that New Zealanders are very friendly. I took a vacation there 9 consecutive years. Others from our com-munity that I introduced to New Zealand are still making annual treks. Should you wish first hand information, call Kobo Fukutaki at (818) 303 3699. He knows New aland as few others do. Go, you vill like it!

Saving travel for retirement. I have many friends who saved all their life so they can travel in their retirement. But now that they are close to retiring, they notice the cost of travel has inconsiderably

In the past, it was a good to plan lots of leisurely travel after retire-ment. But our government lead-ers let several things go wrong. The most serious is the deprecia-tion of our dollar on the world market. So, as our dollar weak-ened in relation to other curren-cies of the world, we have to pay more to travel abroad. The other, is that each year, the cost of trav-is that each year, the cost of travis that each year, the cost of trav-eling abroad jumps by 10% or more. Mathematically, you can'tafford to wait. Not when the can denote to which fock which the cost of enjoying a journey abroad isjumping at a rate which doubles in less than ten years. Also, the older you get, the less agile you become. Do the more adventure-some trips while you are young and save the more comfortable journeys for later.

Shyness hindering your travel plans? Alas, one handi-cap that we are all saddled with is shyness. I guess it was in the way were brought up. I find that it helps having a travel companion. Sometimes it is possible join a group of other Japanese Ameri-cans. And, after a few trips, you will find traveling less painful. I especially like cruises as there you are not stuck with the same especially like cruises especially like cruises as there you are not stuck with the same people for weeks at a time. You can be with people you know, make new friends, or be alone, depend-ing on your mood. Even if being the interfal the merid is the shy is painful, the up-side is the enjoyment that comes from trav-eling. Let us know what destination you have in mind and we will give you more specific recommen-dations. Remember, you are not alone. There are ten of thousands of others like you with the sam

Golfing Down-under. Golf enthusiasts will be delighted to learn that Santi Kushida after an absence of several years, is plan-ning another golf group. This time to New Zealand and Australia.

Sami ran several successful golf groups to the Hawaiian Islands. This time, she wants to play dif-ferent courses. And, what better place to go that to Australia where sufficient a way of life. Sami talls sful golf golfing is a way of life. Sami tells me that there are some areas in New Zealand where there are so New Zealand where there are so many golf courses that even if one every day, you could not cover them all. The best part, she went on to explain, that everything is so affordable down there.

Sami is formerly of Glendale, California. Following early retire-ment, she and her husband re-turned to Hilo to take care of her aged parents. She can be reached at 784 Koele St, Hile, HI 96720. Or, drop a line to Pacific Citizen and we will forward your request for details to her.
