As the Nisei and Issei approach old age, the question of taking care of the elderly is increasingly important to the Japanese American community. The workshop entitled, "Caring for our Parents and Ourselves," dealt with issues such as home care options, creating a durable power of attorney and financing long term care.

Speakers included Carol Kubta, licensed clinical social worker, Senior Care Network, Huntington Memorial Hospital; Norma Kato, who has a bachelor's in social work and is director gif social services, Keiro Nursing Home; and Cayleen Nakamura, who has a master of sciences degree in social work and a master of sciences degree in social work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree in second work and a master of sciences degree.

Internees deported to Japan in WWII sue for redress

Challenging government policy denying redress to children of families deported to Japan during World War II, 14 former internees and relocatees recently filed a lawsuit in federal court in San Jose. Filed by the Asian Law Caucus of San Francisco (ALC) and the firm Morrison and Foerster, the suit seeks to overturn a policy excluding redress from internees when were the result of the firm that the contract of the who went to Japan during the war, even if the trip was Involuntary.

These Japanese Americans had no option but to go to Japan, said Gen Fujioka of the Asian Law Caucus. They were interned or relocated as children. When one of their parents, often un-der pressure from the War Relocation Authority (WRA), decided to go to Japan the children had no place else to go.

Plaintiffs in the suit include Japanese Ameri-cans from both Northern and Southern California as well as Missouri. Ac-cording to the ALC, if successful, the lawsuit could provide the basis for the ventual inclusion in the redress program of more than 100 Japanese Americans who were sent to Japan as part of a pris-oner-exchange.

"While it is a great vic-tory that Congress re-cently approved full re-dress funding," said Fujioka, "full justice will still be denied until every Japanese American interned receives redress. The denial of redress in these cases continues the racist presumption of guilt and disloyalty of internees without any fac-tual foundation."

JACL protests slur on 'Northern Exposure'

The Japanese American Citizens League wrote a letter to the producers of the popular television show, Northern Exposure, to object to the use of the racial slur, "Japa," in the CBS show's preiere episode Sept. 28.

One of the show's character, rered astronaut Maurice One of the show's character, re-tired astronaut Maurice Minnifield, makes the remark while discussing a small tape re-corder with another character. JACL, responding to a number of protests by members, called the remark inappropriate and insen-sitive—and called for a public apol-sitive—and called for a public apology.

The term 'Japs' is both racially derogatory and defamatory, 'wrote Dernis Hayashi, JACL national executive director. 'Historically, the term was used to justify widespread discrimination against Japanese Americans, including the interment of 120,000 Americans of Japanese ancestry during World War II. Presently, we are seeing a disturbing increase in anti-Asian violence across the nation fueled by anti-Asian sentiment. In February, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights issue a report on prejudice against Asian Americans, and declared that racially biased statements uttered by political leaders

House passes increase in hates crimes penalty

The House of Representatives approved legislation Oct. 3 that would increase penalties for crimes motivated by hatred and crimes :

Under the act, the United States Sentencing Commission would be directed to develop regulations increasing recommended sentences by three offense levels for crimes of hatred or bias.

IN 1982, A TEAM OF ATTORNEYS, LAW CLERKS, AND STUDENT VOLUNTEERS TOOK UP THE CHALLENGE OF A LIFETIME.

With new evidence, a legal team--composed of ALC attorneys, former ALC attorneys, lawyers from private firms, law and undergraduate student volunteers--petitioned the federal courts to overturn Fred Korematsu's 40 year old criminal conviction for refusing to cooperate with the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II. They won.

For many in the team, most of whom were sansei, Fred Korematsu's case was not merely a chance to challenge abstract legal notions of "balancing rights between military necessity and constitutional rights." It was a rare opportunity to contribute their skills, their hearts and minds to seek redress for the untold cost of human suffering, lost properly, and shattered dreams endured by those closest to them: their parents, grandparents, aunts and

Our effort in helping overturn Fred Korematsu's conviction embodies the spirit of the Asian Law Caucus. For two decades, we have used the law affirmatively, to fight racial discrimination and to advance the rights of the most economically marginalized and most politically underrepresented in the Asian Pacific American community. We've worked to dislodge entrenched discrimination in the work place. We've advocated for reforms to rectify historically exclusionary immigration laws. In employment, we've strived for more humane work places and for fair pay. We've also worked for decent, safe and affordable housing. And with the ominous return of racial violence against Asians, we've doubled our efforts to organize a community response and to seek legislative solutions.

To ensure continued advocacy and protection of civil rights for Asian Pacific Americans, the Asian Law Caucus and the Korematsu family established the Fred Korematsu Civil Rights Fund. For two decades, we have sustained our work because the people we serve are the communities we belong to. This social and cultural affinity allows us to be more than just a public interest agency; it's what inspires us to work and serve with commitment and dedication. $\hat{W_e}$ invite you to share and be part of our work. With you, we will always know what our mission is all about.

Not so much for the story since there are similarities, but it is in the radiance of the sublication and a refined literary style recounting the history of the Japanese in Canada, of the 22,000 (75% were either naturalized or born in Canada) who were forcibly moved from their west coast homes to camps and ghost towns for the duration of WWII, and of their campaign in the '80s for re-dress and crediting the U.S. Nisei

One only wonders whether the U.S. redress campaign story can be similarly told.

he program offered little more than a mixer, a banquet and buffet brunch but 1,040 showed up for the fourth Heart Mountain camp reunion in Seattle early in September. Instead of listening to speeches, they indulged in a lot of yakking and pic-ire-taking.

Most of the throng, predictably, was from California. They were drawn partly by the opportunity to see the Northwest, still green and lovely despite a summer-long drought.

But they were also from diverse points across the nation—Chicago and other Illiacross the nation—Chicago and other lin-nois cities, Hawaii, Minneapolis and way points. Jack Hayano came from Fukuoka, Japan, and Ray Shimizu from Antwerp, Belgium. Ruth Hashimoto came from Al-Beigum. Ruth Hasnimoto came from Ai-buquerque, N.M., and Sam and Betty Hirabayashi from Arlington, Texas. Ted and Alice Hirabayashi hailed from Florissant, Mo., and Ken and Chiyo Hirata from Lowell, Ind. There was a substantial delegation from Ohio—Paul and Mitzie Matsumoto and George Taketa from Men-tor, Hideo and Paula Okubo from Dayton, Harlan and Lin Takahashi from North Olmsted, Harry and Sally Takets from

Cleveland. Frank and Daisy Mouri came from New Market, Va., and Joe and Irma Yokota from Hazelw

How did these people scatter from the Heart Mountain camp in Wyoming to these distant communities? What kinds of experiences did they have? How have they fared? ach must have fascinating stories to tell about their part in the Great Exodus of 1942inspired by Franklin D. Roosevelt and executed by John L. DeWitt.

And equally interesting, what moved so many of them to return as though for a gathering of the clan after nearly 50 years?

In a word, memories. Memories of shared experiences. Memories of dust storms and mess hall chow numbing cold and the friendliness of neigh-bors among whom there were no rich nor oor nor socially elite, memories of simple easures and making do and trying to gether to overcome the depression of being rejected by one's own country.

Seeking to recapture some of the feeling of the times, I looked up the Heart Mountain Sentinel dated Jan. 1, 1943. It was a 16-page issue observing the first New Year's day in camp. It had a literary section and I'd like to share several poems from that issue that captured the feeling of the times so poignantly. The first was by Kay Masuda and is titled "Evacuee."

Father, you have wronged me grievously, / know not why you punish me, For sins not done nor reasons known-You have caused me misery;

But through this all I look on you/As child would look on his parents true,

With tenderness commingling in / The nguish and bitter tears;

anguish and bitter tears;
My heart still beats with loyalty/For you are my father, I know no other.
Miyuki Aoyama wrote "Absence Makes-"
Freedom is a part of life/as vital as good

Taken quite for granted / 'til it's no longer

And finally, "Memories" by Miwako Oana: All the things I ever was they're gone

Just memories . All the things I ever did/they're gone, o... Just memories.

All the things I do today / they'll soon be...
ust memories.

'Yakuza': an update

F ALL THINGS, the marked increase in the surgical practice of a Japanese doctor specializing in skin trans-plants, provides clues at to the impact upon the yakuza (gangster organizations) of the "Organized Crime Group Countermeasure which went into effect in March Law which went into effect in marrin or this year. The doctor has been flooded with requests to restore the tips of yakuza un-derlings' pinky finger which its owner had once chopped off to demonstrate his fealty to his oyabun (boss). The replacement tip is to his oyabun (boss). The replacement up; is taken from one of the toes; measured in U.S. dollars, the restorative procedure is said to run between $5,000 to $8,000. Both coming and going, so to speak, it's all rather repulsive to contemplate. AS PREVIOUSLY REPORTED in this column, the yakuza gangs have changed their names to respectable sounding busi-ness names, but of course no one is being fooled by such tactics, especially the con-stabulary. Out of some estimated 3,500 gangs in Japan, the police have targeted ten major gangs as böryoku-dan (böryoku = violence, dan = group, gang). The three largest ones by themselves are said to have half of the total number of gang members; these three are: Yamaguchi-gumi (Kobe based), Sumiyoshi-kai (Tokyo) and Inagawa-kai (Yokohama). JAPANESE LAW ENFORCEMENT officials have identified some eleven rack-eteering offenses as a medium to strike at the yakuza, criminal offenses such as ex-tortion, blackmail, protection shakedowns, narcotics, etc.—activities with which viois associated. Interestingly enou gambling and prostitution are not on this "hit list." The yakuza having tidy-sized treasuries (more on that to fol low) and by no means being dull-witted, have retained counsel and challenged police tactics in handing out labels such as "boryoku-dan," contending such impinges upon the right of free association as well as denial of occupational choice protected un-der the kempo (constitution). Talk about chutzpa.

The "take" of these gangs (hold on to your seats) comes to something around $10.1 billion U.S. dollars. Some one-fifth is said to come from legitimate enterprises into which they invested their initially ill-gotten gains. Ten billion! Why, that's more than the national budget in many third-world countries. It is also said that narcotics account for over one-third of the yakura income. So when you see the customs inspectors at Narita south, you can surmise what they're searching for. Narcotics and

ARE THE YAKUZA in their twilight year? In the mid-60's it was thought that they were then on the way to practical extinction. But today, some quarter cen-tury later, they're not only raking in billions but their membership reaches over 90,000. But the Japanese constabulary is not giving up: a hill is demolished one shovelful at a time. Some gang members snoveill at a time. Some gang memoers seeking to cut away from their gang, have taken advantage of a police 'hotline' set up to assist defectors, and in one four-month period, one telephone line reportedly received some 327 calls, including many wishing not only to restore their stumped pinky finger but also a few who also wished to have body tatoos eliminated.

Makina the Colorado connection

By LILLIAN C. KIMURA JACL National President

One of the satisfactions of participating One of the satisfactions of participating in JACL is the opportunity to meet other members from across the country. While one comes into contact mainly with the leadership at district and national meetings, it is at chapter gatherings that one meets the real JACLers.

My first such visit since assuming the presidency this past weekend to the Fort Lupton JACL's 50th anniversary celebration. It came about because President Alfred Watada waylaid me immediately after the election results in Denver to tell me of this event and he hoped I might attend. Fol-lowed by a formal invitation from Sam chair of the dinner, plans were made for me to participate.

When Alfred and Nob Furuya picked me when Airred and Noor Jurya, picked me up at Denver's Stapleton Airport, I kidded them by saying I could not find Fort Lupton on my map. When Ray Uno visited during his term in the early 70's, he wrote that there were 100 Nikkei's in town which had a total population of 2,500. Al said there are now about 5,500 people but not many more Japanese Americans. As in many small rural communities, the children go away to rural communities, the children go away to school and don't come back.

Spending the afternoon at Sam and Katy Koshio's, I learned about the history of the Japanese settlement of Fort Lupton and the organization of JACL. Al's father, who is now 93 and still living alone on the farm, called together in 1941 young Niseis to form one consolidated group among the second generation to serve the Japanese community. In 1942, the dues were $2.50, $1.00 going to national. At the dinner I met the first treasurer. Saburo Tanaka, and the first treasurer, Saburo Tanaka, and Lee Murata who was the second president. Fifty years later, they are still young look-Lee Murata who was the second president. Fifty years later, they are still young looking, vigorous men.

Fort Lupton's an active chapter bringing the Nikkei community together. It is famous for its potluck dinners and the annual chow mein dinner was held on Feb. 18, 1956 with dinners selling at $1.25. They sold 300 tickets and made a grofit of $40.12.1 hrs 1952 dinner cost $6.00 and 1,700 dinners were served. The program did not say how much profit was made but I heard from a good source, it was $6,000 or thereabouts. More than 200 people were involved in this effort. Al Watada told me they ran out of chow mein and had to refund money. (This is the reason, he thought he shouldn't be president gain. Incidentally, he has served as president four times, once for three years.) Most of the time when you meet. Niseis of a certain age, you make instant contact by asking. What camp were you in? You couldn't ask that question here since most of the Nikkeis are natives of Colorado and, in fact, of Fort Lupton.

of the Nikkei are natives of Colorado and, in fact, of Fort Lupton.

The Fort Lupton JACLers are warm, friendly, unpretentious people. They worry what will happen tet he organization as the members grow older. (I did meet several Sansies, one being the president of the bank and another couple who had lived in Reston, Virginia and now operate the health club in town.) There does not seem to be other Asians in town so I guess their growth needs to be toward recruiting from nearby towns such as Brighton.

I was impressed with the regard and support of the chapters in the district for each other. A number of members from Denver came to the dinner as well as Sei Tokuda and Harry Watson from New Mexico and George Ushiyama of Arkasas Válley. Apparently, in the wild west people think nothing of driving five to seven hours to attend functions. Denvertes included Jim and Tillie Taguchi, Bob Sakaguchi, Roy and Yoshiko Inouye and Ruth Yamaguchi. Of course, Sharon Ishii-Jordan, the new governor of Mountain Plains, was also there.

The next day I met a group from the Mile Hi Chapter for breakfast. We met early since the Broncos were playing that afternoon. More of that visit later.

I want to thank all the members of the Fort Chapter for their invitation and for the magnificent clock I received. Special thanks to Alfred Watada, Sam and Katy Koshio, Fuzy Hissamoto and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Tochihara for their hospitality.

"It is critical that the Office of "It is critical that the Office of Civil Rights continue to recognize race as a factor in admissions," said Dennis Hayashi, JACL national director. However, we are deeply disturbed by individuals such as Rep. Dana Rohrbacher (R-Calif.) who, under the guise of concern for the Asian American community, are using the findings to dismantle affirmative action."

Rohrabacher, who has con-demned the racial goals that Ber-keley established, was quoted in the Washington Poet as saying. It was racist and the hardest hit were Asian Americans, and to some degree, Caucasian Ameri-

"The loss of affirmative action policies will not help the Asian policies will not help the Asian American community," said Hayashi. In fact, it was clear from the admission statistics at Boalt that Asian Americans exceeded the target entry goals set for them. The data leads us to question the motivation underlying Congressman Rohrabacher's actions. © 1992 TANAKA TRAVEL TOURS
