Despite local JACL protests, 'Jap Road,' 'Jap Lane' remain in towns near Beaumont, Texas

By GWEN MURANAKA Asistant editor

You're hungry, so you hear about a restaurant with spicy, blackened catfish and a blueberry cobbler like your mother never made—but wait a minute—it's on Jap Road, "wanaay down to Jap Road," as the signs and commercials for the Boondocks Restaurant tell you. Makes you lose your Jap Road is located in Beaumont, Texas, a city on the Gulf Coast near the Louisiana border. There is also a Jap Lane in neighboring Vidor, known for its concentration of Ku Klux Klan. The Boondocks is a popular restaurant which happens to be on Jap Road and advertises on local TV. Elementary school teacher and Houston Chapter, JACL, member Sandra Tanamachi Nakata, a resident of Beaumont, finally decided enough is enough and is trying to change the ies of the roads.

Although the roads have been around for a long time, the school teacher said she first became vocal about Jap Road after a politi-cal cartoon touting the "grand reopening" of the internment camps ran in the local paper in March '92

"When I didn't do anything my conscience started bothering me, I didn't /ceel right inside," said Tanamachi Nakata. "Once I did it, there's no turning back. At different times I will get negative reactions, but that's part of it. Tanamachi Nakata said that she has re-ceived so many harrassing phone calls that TAKING OFFENSE-Road sign, top photo, and billboard in Texas show that insulting word is still seen today.

"I've gotten phone calls at school, telling me to leave and go back to my own country. The secretary at school told them, 'This is her country.'

Study: Whites dominate L.A. sports positions

Amateur Athletic Foundation says minorities under-represented in major non-playing jobs

By BARRY ZEPEL Special to the Pacific Citizen

Whites control every top level position in Los Angeles sports or-ganizations, according to a study conducted by the Amateur Ath-letic Foundation (AAF) of Los Angeles. The study also found that while African Americans, Latinos and African Americans, Latinos and Asian Americans comprise about 53 percent of the population and about half of the civilian labor force in greater L.A., they occu-pied only 33 percent of the admin-istrative, coaching and support positions in the sports organiza-tions.

The AAF study, entitled, "Ra-cial hiring practices of Los Ange-les area sports organizations," was begun in late 1991. It examined begun in late 1991. It examined the non-player personnel of LA. area high school, intercollegiate and professional-level sports or-ganizations during their respec-tive 1990-91 sports sensons. Included in the study were seven L.A.-area professional teams(Los Angeles Dodgers, Cali-fornia Angels, Los Angeles Lak-ers, Los Angeles Clippers, Los Angeles Rams, Los Angeles Raid-ers and Los Angeles Kings), three L.A. Division I universities (UCLA, USC and Loyola Marymount), and 47 high schools Marymount), and 47 high schools of the Los Angeles Unified School District.

'This report calls attention to the need for the people who run sports in this country to fully commit themselves to providing truly equal opportunity."

On the professional level, ac-cording to the study, the sole or primary owner of all seven sports teams was white; the chief executive officer for six of the seven teams was white and one was African American; and white ex-ecutives held 43, or 80 percent, of the 54 senior executive positions. On the intercollegiate level, the position of athletic director at all position of athletic director at an three universities was held by a white male, while 86 percent of the sports' teams head coaches were white, six percent were black, and eight percent were Latinos or Asian Americans. And eggin percents were Bathlosof Asian Americans. At the high school level, 35 (74 percent) of the 47 high school athletic directors were white, six (13 percent) were African American, two (four per-cent) were Latino, and four (nine percent) were Asian American. However, according to Dr. Wayne Wilson, editor of the study and AAF vice president of research and library services, L.A. area sports staffs were more racially diverse than their countérparts nationally at the professional and intercollegiate levels (compari-sons at the high school level were not possible due to lack of na-tional data).

Opinions

From the frying pan BILL HOSOKAWA

Tales of Karaoke and Catfish

seems likely that George Bush must live with the indignity of being re-membered in Japan as the Ameri-can president who upchucked into Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's lap before television cameras at a state dinner in Tokyo. That's unfortunate because Bush did much to keep U.S.-Japanese relations from becoming rockier, even though he made the mistake of taking a gang of disgruntled automobile salesmen with him on his illfated final visit.

So a new era opens with Bill Clinton of Arkansas in the Oval Office. And even though he doesn't have much of a track though he doesn't have much of a track record in foreign affairs, anecdotes about him are springing up from Japanese sources. Let me share two of them with you. Ed Mitoma of Rancho Palos Verdes brought the first one to my attention. It was an item from the Mainichi Daily News, one of several English language newspapers published in Japan. The gist of it was that when Clinton, then governor of Arkansas, and his wife Hillary visited Osaka on a sales trip in 1988, their host for an evening was Satoshi lue, president of the ciant was Satoshi Iue, president of the giant Sanyo Electric conglomerate.

lue is quoted in the story as saying "He (Clinton) fascinated other people by sing-ing very well and playing the saxophone like a pro." The headline over the story: "Clinton big on bergade." Clinton big on karaoke.

It doesn't seem likely that Clinton would It doesn't seem inkely that childs would have had a sax in his luggage, but I suppose it's possible he could have borrowed the instrument from a member of the band, and also that in a first class establishment such as would be patronized by the president of Sanyo, there would be a band in addition to a karaoke machine.

Question: Had this story surfaced before the election, would the Republican campaign strategists have made something of it? . . .

The second story has to do with Hirohisa Mitsuchi, who is familiar to many Americans in his important role as general mancons in his important role as general man-ager of external affairs for Sumitomo Corp. Mitsuchi happened by coincidence to meet in Tokyo Dr. and Mrs. Alvah Nelson who attend Hillary Clinton's church in Little Rock. Mitsuchi became friendly with them to the extent that his son lived with the Nelsons for a year while attending high school

On one of his visits to Little Rock Mitsuchi had dinner with the Nelsons at which an-other guest was Governor Clinton. Some months later Mitsuchi went to Little Rock with a Keidanren survey mission which was invited to the governor's mansion for a formal dinner.

Roast beef was scheduled to be served Quite innocently, one of the Japanese guests indicated an interest in Arkansas catfish. Clinton was anxious to please his guests but of course it was too late to change the menu.

Then, according to Mitsuchi, someone on Clinton's staff came up with the perfect solution. Catfish tempura was served as hors d'œuvres with the drinks and everyone was happy. Mitsuchi's conclusion: Clinton can achieve the extremely difficult task of re-ducing the American fiscal deficit while increasing capital spending in the same way he harmonized catfish and roast beef by choosing the right assistants. 💌

IN-SIGHT

By ULLIAN C. KIMURA

Recently, what was to be a routine visit to San Francisco for a personnel commit-tee meeting and a conference with the executive director turned into a flurry of activity for me.

On my arrival staff informed me of a surprise reception for Sox Kitashima whose involvement in the community includes membership on the San Francisco JACL board. Sox was named one of the 1000 Points of Light, an honor bestowed by President Bush to an individual, nonprofit group or company for "making a difference in their communities." Sox was nominated by the Office of Redress Ad-ministration, represented at the recep-tion by Bob Bratt and Paul Suddes who also gave Sox an award from the Justice Dep rtment Organized by Carole Hayashino, it was a wonderful recognition of someone who does so much to make the Bay Area community a better place. Congratulations, Sox! (The day after, the buzz around Japan Town was whether Sox really was surprised and if so, the 350 attendees did surprised and it so, the 350 attendees aid a great job in keeping a secret.) While at the reception, I was happy to meet Sue Haydshi and Roy Yoshino, sib-lings of the late Ruby Yoshino Schaar in whose memory a playwright award is administered by the New York Chapter. (The award was established to encourage talented playwrights to tell the story of the Japanese American/Canadian expethe Japanese American Canadam expe-rience in North America. In 1992 the award was not given because the panel of judges was not able to arrive at consensus on the dramatic excellence of the manuscripts received.) I also met Lily Abiko who told me that

Taiso met Lily Abiko who told me diad she learned through my column that her grand-nephew was following in the foot-steps of her husband, Yas, and brother, Henry Tani, by being involved in JACL. She was so, proud of Geoff Tani of Chicag

On Saturday as I entered headquar-ters, I ran into JACLers Chizu and Ernie liyama, Mei Nakano, Mollie Fujioka, Pat Orr and Paul Igasaki who were attending Orr and radii igasaki who were attending a meeting to support Jean Ishibashi and her sexual harassment case against the American Friends Service Committee. AFSC was one of the few organizations during World War II to protest the internment and then worked on helping Nikkei ment and then worked on helping Nikkei in the resettlement process. It is very difficult to bring charges against respected organizations and people like Sen. Robert Packwood. However, harassment of any kind must not be tolerated. After the personnel committee meet-ing. I stopped briefly at the memorial service for Dr. Karue Togasaki to pay my recents the her surviving family. The respects to her surviving family. The Togasakis are a remarkable clan; I only hope their story is being preserved. John Kiyasu, a former New York Chapter Board member now residing in San Francisco, invited me to a rehearsal of the J Town Jazz Ensemble at the community center. A saxophonist, John says he fills in when needed and enjoys doing so.

It was also delighted to see a fellow national board member from the '70s, George Yamasaki, Jr. During my first stint on the board, George was legal counsunt on the board, deerge was signal coun-sel. If I remember correctly, at the 1972 convention he was president of the San Francisco Chapter and brought the pro-posal for JACL to construct a-headquar-ters building in Japan Town. I had forgot-ten that George is an accomplished jazz.

ten that George is an accomptished jazz pianist. It was good to see both John and George. Speaking of reunions, the personnel meeting allowed me to greet former Chi-cagoans, Richard and Karen Suzuki Okabe cagoans, Richard and Raferi Source Oklaw of Salt Lake City. As a specialist in human resources, Karen is on the com-mittee. At one time, Richard was the na-tional youth director. Chaired by Neal Taniguchi, other mem-bers of the committee are Boh Sakasuchi

T DON'T RECALL when I first ever saw a golf course. Living in a farm community in the Pacific Northwest, there would be no occasion to be on one. Even if there were, we were too preoccupied with either schoolwork or farm work, which with either schoolwork or tarm work, which left little or no time for taking a half day off on the links. Anyway, there would be the matter of a set of golf clubs, green fees, and so on. And I haven't even mentioned the roadblock term that the parents would surely have interposed: zei-taku (extravaance, wasteful, etc.) I HAVENT FOLLOWED up on what happened to the Pebble Beach golf course that Japanese interests acquired a few years ago in Monterey, California. As I recall, the Japanese investors had or were about to "take a bath" on the investment and were seeking a buyer—for about one-half of what the investors had paid for the golf course. Well, things aren't that much better in Nippon either. A WHILE BACK in this column, the subject was the golf mania in Japan. The sports department of major stores carried every golfing paraphernalia imaginable all very expensive. The driving "ranges" (actually, large enclosed cages with netting into which the golf balls were driven) in the metropolitan areas were filled at multi-levels, with the thwacks resounding. Membership in a golf club, particularly one that was not too distant from a metropolitan area, had waiting lists and average en-trance fees ran into six figures (measured in U.S. dollars) and more. In such demand were such memberships that they became articles of commercial trading with brokers buying and selling club memberships. And making handsome commissions. After all that high flying, the "golf mar-ket" in Japan itself has suffered a precipi-tous fall. So sharp and prolonged has been tous fail. So sharp and prolonged has been the fail that predictions are that unless the situation makes a turn-around (as it, in fact, did in the 1970's following the "oil shock"), then within the next five years, there will be has an (bankruptcy) filings among the golf entrepreneurs. ABOUT THREE YEARS ago, the average cost for a golf club membership came to something above $400 grand; today, that average has dropped to about $170 grand, almost a 60% drop. But don't dash out to buy a membership; predictions are that the price is yet to drop further. One giant op-eration in Gunma-ken (Asama Sports Arena Country Club) had the misfortune of enter-ing the market at the top of the slide. At that point, the resort, with an 18-hole course, placed a membership entry tag of $1.25 million-and that's still measured by U.S. dollars. Because of the ensuing economic slide with the resulting paucity of subscrib-ers, the entry fee was cut back to a mere ers, one entry nee was cut back to a mere $670 grand per memberahip. Even at such bargain basement rates, the word is that the resort complex will need to lower the entry rate abit more in order to sitr up some takers. However, at such sub-bargain rates, however, at such sub-bargain rates, takers. However, at such such such such as a member will not be entitled to use of club facilities—only access to the golf links. In which case such member might as well go back to that driving "range" cage. Tennis, anyone?
