U.S. Justice Departmentto investigate Hattori killing

The U.S. Department of Justice has responded to requests by the Japanese American Citizens Leigue (JACL) and the National Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium for a federal investi-

Legal Consortium for a federal investi-gation into last year's killing of Japa-nese exchange student Yoshiro Hattori. Initially, James Turner, the acting assistant attorney general of the Civil Rights Division, wrote a letter stating that upon a review of the press reports, the department had determined that was "no basis for any further fed-action" because none of the informaeral action because none of the informa-tion in those reports "suggests that Mr. Peairs was motivated by an invidious intent to interfere with a federally pro-tected right of Hattori."

The letter also noted that there is currently no federal statute which pro-hibits racially motivated violence alone. There must also be interference with a

JACL Washington, D.C., Representa-tive Karen Narasaki and attorneys for the consortium, William Tamayo and Stan Mark, raised the Hattori issue in a meeting with Attorney General Reno and Criminal Section Chief Linda Davis. Narasaki acknowledged that the information in the press reports did not dis

Hattori case jurors polled about guns

Shedding light on the Baton Rouse, La., jury that found Rodney Peairs innocent in the shooting death of Yoshihiro Hattori, recently released court question-naires show that eight of the jurcors own guns or have had a gun in their home at some time.

An AP-Story reported in the Chicago Shimpo quoted Judith Corley, the elected foreman, who said, 'I feel it is my right to own a gun. But I do feel I should also take the responsibility to learn how to use it and when to use it.'

Peairs was acquitted of mandaughter charges in the May 23 shooting of the squares exchange student. The case has brought attention in Japan to the prevalence of guns in America, with Hattori's parents urging for stronger gun control laws in the United States. According to the questioniaire, all 12 jurcors said they were familiar with the shooting and all expressed a concern about crime. Most of the jurcors said more police protection was the solution.

Originally, State District Judge

Most of the jurors stid more police protection was the solution. Originally, State District Judge Mike Erwin refused to release the forms, esping it was an invasion of the jurors' privacy. The forms were released, after an appeal by the Morning Advocate of Baton Rouge, with personal material deleted. Concerned about the negative publicity surrounding the original incident and the verdict, Louisians Gov. Edwin Edwards said, "If you don't agree with the decision of the jury, then you certainly have to say whether you're going to retire from being an American."

Redress Education Fund needs help

The last hurdle of the redress program— the Education Fund—may be a high one. During an appropriations bill hearing be-fore the House Appropriations Commit-tee the week of June 25, the Education Fund drew opposition as a "new" pro-gram, which is difficult to overcome in the current budget slashing environment, ac-cording to JACL officials. As a result, the bill does not contain a separate appro-priation for the Education Fund, but does allow any funds left over from the $100 million appropriation for individual payments to be used.

President Clinton's budget for the 1994 budget for the Department of Justice had requested $5 million for the Civil Liber-ties Public Education Fund and $100 million to complete the individual redress payments.

"Given the Department of Justice's cur-rent estimates for individual redress pay-ments in fiscal year 1994 and our hope that many of the ineligibility rulings will be reversed, there may be little, if any, funds available for the Education Fund,"

said JACL Washington, D.C., Represen-

before the July 4 recess. JACL is urging constituents of Sens. Bumpers (D-Ark.), Lautenberg (D-NJ.), Sesser (D-Fnn.), Kerry (D-Neb.), Stevens (R-Ark.), Hatfield (R-Ore.), and Domenic (R-N.M.), who are on the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee, to write or call to urge their senator to support the president's 45 million budget request.

At a June 18 meeting with local townspeople opposed to changing Jap Road, Domingue declared the issue dead, saying that he wasn't going to change the name of the road. Many of the protestors said that the word "Jap" isn't a racial slur and the name is historical, commemorating the lasei farmers who used to the Issei farmers who used to

While JACL focuses on the specific issue of Jap Road, a June 27 letter in the Beaumont Enterprise, shifted the emphasis to accusing elementary schoolteacher Sandra Tanamachi Nakata of teaching prejudicial viewpoints. Susan LeBlanc of La Belle, Taxas, said, "She walked into a classroom and taught young 7 and 8 year olds that prejudice surely was the reason for the name of Jap Road."

Kimura to co-chair march on Washington, D.C.

Japanese American Citizens Loague (JACL) National President Lillian Kimura will join several civil rights leaders as a will join several civil rights leaders as a co-chair of the 30th anniversary March on Washington, D.C., Saturday, Aug. 28. The event commemorates the 1963 March on Washington, D.C., 1ed by Dr. Martin Luther King who delivered his famous "I have a dream" speech on the steps of the Lincoln memorial.

JACL participated in the 1963 march and the anniversary marches in 1983 and 1988. Many of the civil rights laws in housing, employment and voting enjoyed today grew out of the mobilization from

"Unfortunately, the problems of dis-crimination and racism have not been crimination and racism have not been eliminated in the past 30 years," Kimura said. "America still has much work to do in said. Americas and has much work out of a society where all Americans are judged on the content of their character rather than on the color of their skin. The march is an opportunity to recommit ourselves to work-ing together to build a better America. Kimura joins Coretta Scott King, the widow of Dr. King, and labor, religious and civil right leaders such as Joseph Lowery of the Southern Christian Leader-

Florin Chapter, JACL SACRAMENTO—Shouting "Save KTSF!" "Save KTSF!," more Save RISF: Save RISF:, more than 200 sign-carrying Asian Americans rallied in front of City Hall June 18 to support the popular, multi-lingual TV station threatened with ouster June 30 by Sacramento Cable TV/Scripps Howard.

by Sacramento Cable TV/Scripps Howard.

The Coalition for Quality Multi-Cultural Cable TV also scheduled a June 28 community hearing on asying KTSF and quality multi-lingual TV at City Hall.

The June 18 rally was only the most recent outpouring of support from the local Chinese, Filipino, Japanese, and Vietnamese communities. A multi-ethnic news conference on June 9 received the support of 200 members of the Japanese American Tanoshimi Kai senior lunch program.

More than 30 community, civic, student, business, church, and civil rights groups have endorsed the campaign to:

© Carry two multi-lingual cable channels
© Hold Sac Cable responsible for the usual copyright fees. Thus far, more than 5,000 people have signed petitions to this effect.
According to the 1990 Census, 24 percent of Sacramento residents speak a language other than English in their homes. Some 10 percent speak Spanish, 10 percent Asian languages, and 4 percent European. Only 1 of 63 chisnnels is dedicated to Asian/European languages. That current of ferings include Japanese news and cultural and drams programs.

Many local people fought last summer to keep KTSF's local news, entertainment, and cultural programs when Sac Cable attempted to drop them. Sac Cable responded then by agreeing to carry KTSF partially. Sac Cable currently carries KTSF for 20 hours per week on the local cable channel 2. The rest of the time it carries the International Channel (IC) out of Los Angeles. Although IC carries 19 language programs in comparison to 12 for KTSF, IC lacks a Northern California focus, adequate Asian programming, and the quality of KTSF.

The coalition said it protests the discriminatory impact of this decision to cut KTSF, and called for the $65 million operation to respect the needs, languages, and national origins of Sacramentans.

Additionally, Sac Cable is requiring that KTSF pay a$140,000 fee to the U.S. Copyright Office. According to some local concerned citizens, the company hasn't made any requests for copyright or commercial fees from dozens of other channels, except possibly one. It pays more than $120,000 for the

The coalition group also argues that it's customary when a cable system buys a broadcast, that it pay for it. Sac Cable has always paid all copyright and commercial fees for all other stations-including ESPN, CNN, Nashville, and Black Entertainment.

A Sac Cable spokesperson responded by saying that the company was making a business does not buy to recoup the copyright fee from KTSP.

Clinton popularity drops in Japan

With confidence levels for President Clinton slipping in the United States, it's no surprise that they've also declined in Japan. A national survey taken in May by the Nippon Research Center Ltd. and reported in the Hokubei Mainichi, shows that Clinton's flavorability rating in Japan has eroded from 62 percent in February to 44 percent. Similarly, the percentage of respondents who said they were not favorably impressed by Clinton rose from 34 percent in February to 51 percent.

News from Washington, D.C., the week of June 23 that the Defense Language Institute (DLI) at

Something lacking in Nagasaki

o trip to Japan would be complete without visiting Hiroshima where a handsome new city has grown out of the pain, death and destruction wrought by the first nuclear form detonated in ager.

The citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have done not be sufficiently and the citizens of Hiroshima have a sufficient where the citizens of Hiroshima have a sufficient where the citizens of Hiroshima have a sufficient where the citizens of Hiroshima have done not consider the citizens of the citizens of the citizens of Hiroshima have done not consider the citizens of the citize only an excellent job of rebuilding on bitter ashes, but of constructing a striking peace memorial to remind mankind of the insanity of war.

What was the second city to suffer nuclear what was the second city to suffer nuclear destruction? Many Americans would have difficulty remembering Nagasaki, whose historic connections to the Western world are far richer than those of Hiroshima and whose obliteration was even less necessary.

Is there a psychological handicap to being second? Or is Nagasaki simply inclined to be more low key than Hiroshima? Whatever the reason, Nagasaki has not been as successful as Hiroshima in showcasing elther its histo ner its history or its misfortune. Having visited Hiroshima not infreuently, I looked forward to seeing trip to Japan. It turned out to be a largely dreary city of misplaced priorities in a beau-tiful setting not unlike a smaller Hong Kong.

As students of Asian history know, Nagasaki was Japan's window to the world during the two centuries of isolation that preceded Commodore Perry's hammering at the door in 1853. In fear of being overat the door in 1853. In fear of being over-whelmed, Japan cut off thriving trade with England, Spain and Portugal and permit-ted only the Dutch to keep a small outpost on an island called Deshima just off on an island called Deshima just on Nagasaki.

Deshima is now a grimy part of Nagasaki with little to remind visitors of its past importance. An expensive Dutch theme park called Huis ten Bosch, like a Disneyworld with windmills, is one of the few reminders of the area's historic ties with the Netherlands.

Perhans lack of anges because of

with the Netherlands.
Perhaps lack of space because of Nagasaki's hilly terrain, as compared to Hiroshima's broad plain, is partly responsible for the unimpressive Peace Park and memorial. In a place that should bring tears, Japanese sight-sers seemed to be in a carnival mood. Along one walkway were distant of the property of the a carnival mood. Along one walkway were displayed a group of sympathy memorials and all were from Socialist states behind the Iron Curtain. Whatever the intent, this display appeared to be a cynical Commu-nist jab at the United States endorsed by Nagasaki. Had Americans ever been in-vited to contribute?

The standard tour leads past impressive nemorials to the martyrdom of early Japa-nese Catholics who remained steadfast in the face of bloody persecution. These relics deserve solemn contemplation about the deserve solemn contemplation about the meaning of faith.

Next, high atop a hill on the estate of an early British merchant named Glover, is a early British merchant hamed clover, is a memorial that may be most incongruous of all. It is a statue of Tamaki Miura, a singer of some renown who is depicted in her favorite role of Cho-cho-san in Puccini's favorite role of Cho-cho-san in Puccini's Modome Butterfly, an opera with some hauntingly beautiful arise.

Why incongruous? While Tamaki Miura and her voice were genuine enough, her vehicle to fame was the invention of an Italian composer and based on a fictional story about a faultless American naval officer who wronged a nice Japanese girl. Is this the stuff of immortality?

Excuse me if I seem to be disillusioned by what should have been an inspiring visit to one of Japan's great historic areas.

A long hot summer

as officially ushered in on June 21 but it started to get very warm here back in May. In the East where you would expect to experience the seasons, it seemed as if it went from cold and rainy to hot with hardly any pleasant spring days.

But it is not the weather I am concerned about these days. One only needs to read the newspapers or watch television to know that things seem to be going from bad to worse in our nation and in the world. A recent Sunday edition of the New York Times showed these headlines:
"As Hispanic Presence Grows, So Does

Black Anger"
"Race and the American Workplace"
"Murder Trial in Beating by Detroit Of-

'Japan's Crisis: U.S. to Profit?"

"Where the Chinese Yearns for Beautiful' U.S." The June 18th issue of the Pacific Citizen carried these headlines: "Date set for Nikkei's suit against AFSC"
"Jap Road issue heats up"
"Spokane Democrats targeted by colleagues"

Recent editions of the Rafu Shimpo carried such articles as:

"AIDS Cases Continue to Rise in Asian Pacific Islander Communities"

"Attackers Not Charged" (Assault and robbery in Japantown)

"Maryknoll School Embroiled in Controversy" (Filipino teachers will not have con-acts renewed)

"Probe of Judge's Racial Remark Re-sested"

By headlines such as these, we know the must continue to be vigorous in our work for justice and equal opportunity. Stories of racial and sexual harrassment, rogatory remarks by leaders and physiderogatory remarks by leaders and physi-cal violence abound. And the increasing animosity between Americans of color is particularly disturbing. The New York Times article quoted Dr. David Hayes-Bautista, a UCLA sociologist who has twice ied minority group relations. "As a nation, we have pretty much developed our notion of minority policy based on the black popu-lation, and just stuck Latinos and Asians into that profile. The problem is that profile does not fit. We're used to thinking of a unified minority agenda, but as the minority population becomes less black, the issues become different. Language and im-migration, for instance, have never been part of the traditional black agenda, or are in conflict with it. On the other hand, low levels of participation in the labor force, high levels of family disintegration and certain types of health issues are not Latino Primarily about the Miami area, the article went on to say that prominent blacks are saying that Hispanics, especially Cubans, should not be considered as a minornens, should not be considered as a minor-ity group because of their numbers and economic success. A black lawyer was quoted as saying "Cuban Americans are simply white people whose native language is Spanish."

Reader says too much made of 'Jap Road' issue

There are times when stirring up the dry dusts of decades only covers the surround-ing areas of beautiful and clean environment. I have been reading (and hearing) about Sandra Tanamachi Nakata's "Jap Rd." con-Sandra Tanamachi Nakata "Jap Rd. "con-troversy with much annoyance . . . I know that some of them think as I do. A tiny, bit of real estate in that out of the way place need not have been made into such a big issue. Or to garner so much publicity, when it had lain unheeded and unnoticed all it has lain unheeded and unnoticed all these many years. Nor was there a need to arouse such strong enotion among the lo-cal inhabitants; nor to be let known to those who did not know, or had not heard that there exists a "JAP RD."

there exists a "AAP RD."

There was not a taint of racial animosity when it became a name of a small country lane years ago. The Japanese inhabitants never took any notice of it then, or now.

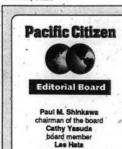

To right a wrong is a wonderful attribute. However, causing unneeded publicity that tears up a community on an issue so nonessential and leaving seeds of hatred and suspicion does not serve any purpose. It could have been done quietly by getting a petition signed by those who lived on that road to see if they wanted it changed, the American way.

Refuting this argument, Kimura said, Whether people believe that Jap' is a shortened version of Japanese or that no ill-intent is meant misses the point. 'Jap' is a racial slur, plain and simple, and its usage.

The Arizona Chapter, JACL, also sent a letter June 24 to Domingue. Joe Allman, chapter president, noted that "Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary lists as 'usually used disparag-ingly." "It has been our experience that Members our experience that wherever such sure are directed, Japanese Americans have paid a price for the emotional messages as during World War II when virtually all Japanese Americans were forcibly removed from the were forcibly removed from the West Coast and incarcerated in internment camps for the dura-tion of the war," said Kimura. Yoshino in a letter to the Beau-mont Enterprise supported Tanamachi Nakata who has been the target of criticism since she first brought up the issue last

"Sandra Nakata does not stand

Sandra Nakata does not stand alone in her belief that the term Jap' is a racial slur, "said Yoshino. Referring to the Issei farmers who once lived on Jap Road, Yoshino said, "It has been argued that changing the name of 'Jap' Road would somehow affect the history provided by the early Japanese settlers, thereby dishonoring them. Those early Japanese settlers, men such as Seito Saibara. Hihei Onishi, Kichimestan Kichi mark Woshin Saibara, Hihei Onishi, Kichimatsu Kishi and Yoshio Mayumi, should be remembered for their contributions to Texas agriculture and not through a road designation which is offensive by any standard of usage."

Speaking to Pacific Citizen, Yoshino said he would be in contact with local civil rights groups such as Anti-Defamation League such as Anti-Detamation and a local Latino organization and others to thank them for supporting efforts to change Jap Road Tanamachi Nakata said the chapter is proceeding with a meeting previously scheduled for July 12 previous with the with the county commissioners. She said she has received notifi-cation that at least one of the five

This issue did not belong in the classroom. She taught her or prejudices that day. She led those 7 and 8 year olds to believe people nd 8 year olds to believe people the Fannett community must

"There's no way I'm going to use that word (Jap) in front of chil-dren," said Tanamachi Nakata.

She said she did teach her second graders from an anti-preju-dice curriculum guide developed by the Anti-Defamation League called "A World of Difference" and that the guide had a lesson on calling people names.

"I asked them, what if there was a street name called 'Stupid Road,' would you want to live there?"

Tanamachi Nakata said she never mentioned the name or location of Jap Road while she was teaching. Once the road became an issue in the local media, Tanamachi Nakata said, the chidren would hear about it from their parents and if they asked her questions she would answer. But the schoolteacher reiterated that she didn't bring her involvement in the issue into the classroom. Tanamachi Nakata said she ecently finished a grueling, three-weekend training ses-sion on mediation and recon-ciliation. I took the course feeling that it would help me in my work missioner on the newlyformed Human Rights Commission in our county. Now that I'm through, I know it will help. But more importantly, it will be useful in dealing with my own personal relationships. Not surprisingly, the training turned out to be mostly about effective communication in a problem-solving envi-ronment, I had a lot to learn. Boy, did I have a lot to learn.

I would guess that, like me, most Nisei have not been patterned with great communication skills in this area. And to some extent, Sanse seem to have inherited this unfortunate minus. Given the choice of airing our feelings about a prob-lem, large or small, or stuffing our feelings in, we most often choose the latter. But when we vent our feelings, we don't always do it in constructive ways, so that the problem escalates into a larger one, or changes its shape. Eit way, we still have a problem. Either

More times than I can remember, a Nisei woman has told me that in trying to get her husband to discuss a problem, he says, "Why bother? Either way, you get mad. I'm damned if I do, and I'm damned if I don't." It's true. But it's also a cop-out. Talking out problems is not comfortable, and it sometimes not comfortable, and it sometimes takes us to a place we don't want to be. But if we value the quality of our relationship and the evergrowing richness that can come from the flow of expression back and forth, we need to be willing to find a way of accomplishing the find a way of accomplishing that. Communication skill specialists give us counsel. The guiding principle behind good communic they say, is to express your feelings rather than offer criticism and judgments. Example: "You never talk. You never want to discuss problems when they come up. "You can see how this simple criticism can make a silent mate turn to stone or how it might escalate into an ugly argument that ends up isolating you further from each

Better to say: "I feel frustrated and angry when you shut down and refuse to talk, and I need you to talk to me about... "(name a pecific problem). This statement, couched in an "I message" formula has three basic components, which appear in italies. Note that you: 1) state how you are feeling. 2) name the specific incident or behavior that triggered the conflict and 3) tell what you would flict and 3) tell what you would like to have happen. When we talk about a problem, we're often angry and the "you word spurts from our mouths like spit. "You took the car without asking." "You don't understand." "You're so damned stubborn." Remarks like these usually provoke defensive and angry responses. They don't help the hearer to respond in a way that would ac-knowledge the speaker's feelings. If, for instance, instead of saying, "You took the car without asking," Dad says, " I feel angry when you borrow my car without asking, and I need you to check with me before taking it," he would-allow his offspring to appreciate his feel-ings. "Yeah, Dad," the son might say. "Sorry. I see what you're say-ing..." In any case, a dialogue is more apt to ensue with a lead-in like this. And the two are more likely to reach an agreement about the use of the car.

Another point worth noting is that when two people in a close relationship are dealing with a problem, no one knows better than they how to push the other's hot buttons. When my husband says stubborn" to me, I immediate go into the attack mode and go for the soft underbelly. Which only reinforces his notion that I am stubborn. Which only makes me more stubborn. No one wins.

It isn't easy re-patterning our speech habits. Can you imagine yourself saying, for instance "I feel hurt when you..."? I'm having a hard time with that, and I'm going to need a lot of practice before it becomes second nature to me.

And, as I alluded to earlier, I suspect this style of communicat-ing is harder for those related to our culture than for those rooted in the Western culture. For one thing, somewhere way back in our ancestry, it must have been de-creed that silence coupled with See SIDEBAR/page 8 bushido, perhapa. For another, pronouns don't appear nearly as often in Japanese speech as English, which suggests that 'I message' feelings might be more difficult to express. And we Nisei could easily have patterned our speech relationship was a constant checking out of each other's feelings. Questions like "Do we need to talk about this?" popped up often. I would guess that the next sen-tence would be an "I message." In any case, their willingness to consider snarly matters, however large or small, seemed to me to put them in a risky, vulnerable place. On second thought, though, theirs might be a safer place than many of us occupy, shored up as it is by trust.

And I guess that's where it's at:

trust and good communication, accruing to each other in an evergrowing upward spiral. That's where I want to be.

Dennis Hayashi's appointment to head the Office of Civil Rights at Health & Human Services was at Health & Human Services was criticized by a syndicated columnist in the San Francisco Examiner. An African American, Juliette Mahreaux, objected to his appointment because she felt he would not have sensitivity to African Americans.

She wrote, "My resentment that a Japanese American got a job I would have liked an African American to get is not politically correct, but it's honest. My pre-sumption that Hayashi would not be fair to African Americans on public assistance is an unfair one, but it has its roots in Black-Asian history history."

Tom Kometani, president of the New York Chapter, JACL, brought to my attention an article in Business Week about Asian Americans at AT&T Bell Labs in New Jersey.
They are 22 percent of the company's 22,000 employees but leave at a higher rate than white males. The diversity manager was quoted as saying that many Asian Americans prefer to stay techni-Americans prefer to stay techni-cal workers rather than to move up to management. The diversity manager is African American. Much work has to be done to educate our fellow Americans of color that we are not the enemy. Our mutual concerns are rooted in the racism which is so endemic in this nation. One of the ways to make an inroad is to participate in the 30th anniversary of the March on Washington on Aug. 28. More about this later. That's thirty for now Po
