Lim Report: PSW seeks discussion

Board unanimously passes Mizobe's motion to air report at Salt Lake convention

By GWEN MURANAKA

Assistant editor

The National Board voted unanimously May 22 to conduct a plenary session at the notational convention in Salt Lake City in which the Lim Report would be open for review and discussion.

Ruth Mizobe, governor, Pacific Southwest District, who presented the motion, said she did so in order to educate the membership and dispel rumors that there was a ogger-up of the report. Commissioned by the 1989-90- JACL Presidential Select Committee, the Lim Report, authored by Deborah Lim, was a study of JACL's activities during the pre-evacuation and internment period.

"The intent is to educate the membership and show that we are not trying to cover up something," said Mizobe. "Until we do that our organization will continue to be criticized."

The PSW governor noted that in a letter to the Rafu Shimpo, James Omura said that he couldn't forgive JACL for its treatment of him during the war.

"Paul Ito sent a letter to PC on this issue. He said the organization has not taken a position (see the article dated April 12 in See LIMpage 3

Grant criteria for Legacy Fund re-evaluated

SAN FRANCISCO—Speaking before the May 21-22, JACL National Board meeting, Grayce Uyehara, chairwoman of the JACL Legacy Fund Campaign Committee, reported on the group's May 11 teleconference.

Here are the major points of disussion:

Grants selection criteria: Eligibility requirements were discussed in light of achieving a fairer distribution of money for projects.

The committee talked about developing a reward factor or an additional bonus for applicant chapters which have carried an active and successful fund-raising campaign for the Legacy Fund.

Some suggested that extra points be added for each level of goal achieved or that a percentage of goal achieved be recommended as a primary criteria.

Hank Tanaka commented that the Bruce Yamashita and Fred Korematsu pose together at the May 20 reception in San Francisco held in Yamashita's honor. Korematsu, who challenged the constitutionality of the Evacuation in the case Korematsu vs. the U.S., said of Yamashita, 'He reminds me of me when I was young.' The event was sponsored by JACL and the Levi Strauss Asian Pacific Islander Employee Association: Yamashita told the gathering that he would be filling with this Naval Discharge Review Goard challenging the Marines' admission process.

Health care reform set on convention agenda

Health care reform remains a major JACL health care reform task force, said, presenting the committee report May 21 before the National Board accepted the committee report and instructed them to continue working on health care issues and education through to the convention.

Instructed to review the various proposals on health care reform, the committee came up with recommendations which were printed in an earlier edition of *Pacific Citi*zen (PC, April 15-21, 1994 issue.)

The committee did not recommend any one proposal currently being discussed. Ishiyama listed the following as priorities for JACL until convention:

Make health care reform a major priority program.

By HARRY K. HONDA Editor emeritus

Under the supreme command of General-Dwight D. Eisenhower, some 176,000 Allied troops landed on Omaha Beach, Utah Beach and other Normandy shores on June 6, 1944 — now remembered as the "D-Day" of World War II, cracking open the Nazimilitary grip of continental Europe facing Britain.
While many mark this 50th an-

While many mark this Joura anniversary of D-Day, the country should also remember that the 442nd Regimental Combat Team had landed four days earlier in Naples, in sight of Mt. Vesuvius, and headed for Anzio, where German airplaines raided the ammunition dumps. "It was the first time that the 442d came under

Three more convicted in killing of Vietnamese

William Madalone, 23, Terry Jamerson, 22, and Christopher Anderson, 20, were convicted May 24 by a Broward County, Fla., jury of the second-degree murder of Luyen Phan Nguyen.

Anderson and Jamerson could each face between seven and 22 years in prison. Madelone, who has prior convictions, may face a life term without parole because of Florida's "habitual offender" statute. Sentencing is scheduled for June 28.

Seven men in all have been charged with the Aug. 15, 1992, killing, according to the Miami Herald. Bradley Mills had already been convicted in December of 1992 and is serving a 50-year sentence.

Three other defendants, Derek Kozma, Chris Madelone and Michale Barychko are scheduled for trial June 22

Nguyen was chased, beaten and kicked to death by a mob of young men outside a Coral Springs, Fla., apartment building after being called "chink," "Vietcong" and "sayonara" at a nearby party according to a press release by the National Asian American Pacific Legal Consortium (NAPALC).

According to the Herald, defense attorney Herb Cohen intends to appeal the convictions. The newspaper also quoted an alternate juror who said that she did not agree with the jury's decisions.

The clase has been followed by a number of Asian American organizations. In addition to the NAPALC, the Organization of Chinese Americans, the National Network Against Anti-Asian Violence and the Japanese American Citizens League have been present a trial proceedings.

It was also agreed that printing costs for the deferred planned giving brochure should be included the program is intended to be adopted as part of the Legacy Fund Campaign. A motion to adopt a budget of $65,000 was unanisly passed.

Constitution revisions: Cherry Kinoshita, member of the JACL Constitutional Revision Committee reported on discussions that were relevant to the Legacy Fund. Specifically, she pointed out the approval process for emergency utilization of the principal and questioned whether at present there is any protection for the Legacy Fund corpus Kinoshita noted that the organi zation has seven endowment funds in total.

Discussion then focused on the correct language to use in revision. One suggestion was that emergency utilization of the principal of funds over $1 million would be determined by two-thirds of fund management/campaign management committee and

A New Area Code RINGS IN Los Angeles

In response to the exploding demand for telephone numbers in the Los Angeles area, Pacific Bell and GTE are introducing a new area code. It's 562, a new area code that will overlap current area codes 818. 213 and 310. Area codes 818, 213 and 310 will continue to be area codes and their boundaries will not change 818 213 310 The first people to be served by the new area code will be new cellular and paging customers, beginning March 1996. Some existing cellular and paging customers may be required to change to area code 562 in 1996, but business and residential customers are not expected to be served by this area code until the turn of the century.

For more information on the new 562 area code and how it may affect you, please plan to attend a public meeting with Pacific Bell and GTE at one of the following locations:

Monday June 6	Santa Monica Library 1343 Sixth Street, Santa Monica	7 p.m.	Thursday June 9	Davidson Conterence Center, USC 3415 S. Figueroa Street, Los Angeles	7 p.m.
Tuesday June 7	Lawndale City Hall 14717 Burin Avenue, Lawndale	7 p.m.	Monday June 13	Burbank Hilton 2500 Hollywood Way, Burbank	7 p.m.
Wednesday June 8	Canoga Park Community Center 7248 Owensmouth Av., Canoga Park	7 p.m.	Monday June 13	Long Beach City Hall 333 W. Ocean Boulevard, Long Beach	7 p.m.
Wednesday June 8	Whittier City Hall 13230 Penn Street, Whittier	7 p.m.	Tuesday June 14	Almansor Court 700 S. Almansor Street, Alhambra	7 p.m

 Talk specifically about health services to be provided under health care reform.

 Membership education through articles in PC and letters to the membership. Ishiyama also said he would like to see a work-shop at convention devoted to the Doinother minority coalitions, such as the Asian Pacific Islander Americah Health Forum. Karen Narasaki, Washington, D.C., representative, said that JACL is currently working with the forum and that JACL has provided of-fice space in the D.C. office for forum staff to work.

• Work seriously on post-legislation activities.

The committee was also asked to look at the potential impact of health care reform on JACL-Blue Shield members. While not mak ing any specific recommendations about retaining members. Ishiyama said that health care reform could affect JACL membership numbers.

Ishiyama said, "If the Clinton plan goes through with regional alliances, programs like JACL Blue Shield will become obsolete What will happen to an organiza-tion like JACL depends on legislation passed.

Citing the importance of retaining the Blue Shield members. Larry Ishimoto, governor, Cen-tral California District, recom-mended that JACL support a tral health care reform proposal that would allow for choice of health

The reason the group was cre ated was to make recommenda-tions on how to maintain members in Blue Shield. We need to tell members which way to inform their legislators. To me, Blue Shield would be willing to help fund ads through the PC," said Ishimoto

Ishiyama responded, "I would feel more comfortable if the issue is not Blue Cross-Blue Shield, but choice (of provider)."

Other issues discussed:

Bill Kaneko, vice president, public affairs, asked the committee to address the issue of cover-age for abortion. Narasaki pointed out that the national council in 1992 took a pro-choice position, so supporting pro-choice issues in health care reform is consistent.

Trisha Murakawa, vice president

ent, planning and development, asked that JACL endorse universal access without any preconditions such as age, sex or medicine.

U.S.-Japan workshop planned for Salt Lake convention

Discussion to focus on how Nikkei affected

By ALAN DASH Member, PSW USJR Committee

How U.S. Japan relations affect Japanese Americans is the focus of the U.S. Japan relations workshop Aug. 5 at the JACL national convention in Salt Lake City.

Unfortunately, each time there is a worsening in the relationship between Japan and America, the Field of dreams

international figure in Little League baseba

Japanese American population suffers from an increase in hate crimes, deleterious remarks, and a variety of undeserved indignities ties.

This workshop will emphasize these aspects of the problems. It is essential that the Nikkei community understands that U.S.-Japan relations are not just the province of the politicians, but that every Japanese American is affected in some way by the fallout.

Panelists will present several views of the present situation followed by a question and answer session. Panelists include: moderator Steven C. Clemons, executive director, Japan Policy Research Institute; Glen Fukushima, vice president, American Chamber of Commerce in Japan; Jonathan Kaji, director, California Offise of Trade and Investment (in Tokyo); Sheridan Tatsuno, president, Dreamscape Productions and Nancy Yoshinara, Los Angeles Times.

The workshop is being airranged by the PSWD U.S.-Japan relations committee. A similar forum was successfully presented by this committee last October at the Nakaoka Community Center in Gardena, Calif.

Panelist profile: Sheridan Tatsuno

Tatsuno is president of Dreamscape Productions of Aptos, Calif., an interactive media research consulting, and production company that develops high quality multimedia anomulticultural programs for corporations, schools, homes, public performances and broadcasters. The Japanese Americans were denied this gesture of being the first_in Rome. But the men did board trucks and rolled through the city on June 5 in the middle of the night when it was difficult to rec-

UCLA lecture explores issues affecting elderly

One-fifth of all Japanese Americans are age 65 or older. This figure exceeds that of all other Americans, and is expected to continue to rise rapidly in the coming decades. How will the aging population cope with retirement, maintaining one's health and staying active and productive? These and other issues will be explored in a special lecture, "Is there life after retirement?" on Sunday, July 12, from 2 p.m. in the James E. West Alumni Center on the UCLA campus.

Co-sponsored by the UCLA Nikkei Bruin Committee and the UCLA Center on Aging, the speakers include: James E. Birren. Ph.D., associate director, UCLA Center on Aging, Sally E. Good stories made better ru Joe Kanazawa likes to say that it took him 83 years to have his first book published. The book was a semi-autobiographical novel called Sushi and Sourdough based in part on his boy and sourdough based in part of his body hood in Alaska. It was published in 1989 when he was 83 years old. With that kind of track record, it was not surprising that a few weeks ago, at age 87, Kanazawa should climb into his station wagon in New York City and set out for Las Vegas, Nev., with his wife Mae and daughter Joy. Kanazawa says his reflexes are no longer sharp enough so he leaves the driving to others. But he had a mission, which ing to others. But he had a mission, which was to deliver his second book, Close Support, the story of Cannon Company of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, to his buddies holding a reugion. Since this book is, based on his service with the 442nd in World War II, he figures it has taken him 50 years to write it

Obviously a late-bloomer, Kanazawa goes back a long way. He was graduated from the University of Washington in 1931 with a degree in journalism. That would be 63 ago this spring. Tooru was the guy carrying the editorial load at Jimmie Sakamoto's weekly Japanese American Courier when I went to work part-time there as a raw cub in 1933.

A kid fresh out of high school, my only journalistic experience had been as sports editor of the school paper. For a long time my pay at the Courier was lunch at Mrs Yagi's Rose Cafe where her specialty, tendon—bowl of rice with a couple of tempura shrimp on top for 25 cents. Tooru was paid more, but not much. That's all the Courier could afford Tooru had to make a living. He moved on after a while, but not before he underscored a lesson I was learning in college: Almost any piece of writing can be improved by editing. He demonstrated it often by put-editing. He demonstrated it often by put-ting a pencil to my efforts.

What is editing? Norman Podhoretz said it very well in a 1965 magazine article: The obligation of an editor, he said, "is to improve an essentially well-written piece or to turn a clumsily written one into, at the very least, a readable and literate article. and, at the very most, a beautifully shaped and effective essay which remains true to the author's intention, which realizes that intention more fully than he himself was able to do. He cares about the English language; he cares about clarity of thought and of grace of expression ..."

Tooru dropped in on his way west and left a copy of Close Support. It is a moving account of the ordeal of Cannon Company's five officers and 115 enlisted men who lived and, in the case of six, were killed in WW II It is the story of how, in the process of war the men developed an indissolvable broth-

As he gave me the book Tooru said in his self-deprecating way: "I wish there had been time for someone to edit this before it was published. Some of the writing is pretty Tooru was right. As Podhoretz said, an editor can help a writer say more eloquently, more clearly, what he wants to say. I felt a pang of disappointment that I had been unable to return the favors Tooru had done for me so many years ago.

Hosokawa is the former editorial page editor of the Denver Post. His column appears weekly in the Pacific Citizen.

Family names

APANESE FAMILY NAMES (myó ji) are not difficult to pronounce once a few general rules are understood My secretary (Caucasian) picked up the formula and it wasn't long before she could spell-myô-ji sjust by listening. The first and principal rule is that each syllable incorporates a vowel or a vowel sound. Thus a newscaster need not have butchered pronunciation of ex-Prime Minister's Hosokawa's name had he deciphered the syllables as "Mori-hi-ro Ho-so-ka-wa," enunsyllables as 'Mori-hi-ro Ho-so-ka-wg.' enun-ciafed without plause between the syllables. If a name starts with a vowel, such as Inouye," the opening vowel is itself a syl-lable, as in 'I-no-u-ye,' and not 'Anyway.' There are some names that start with two wowels, such as 'Ueno' (Pronounced 'U-e-no'). Some anglicizing, along with some corruption is beund to creep in. For ex-ample, 'Honda' is pronounced like the Jāpa-nese word for 'book' (hon) plus 'dah,' and not 'Hahn-day.' Corruption widely taints other Jāpanese phrases, such as the craft of other Japanese phrases, such as the craft of miniaturization of trees being referred to as "ban-zai"—a Japanese term meaning "hooray" usually repeated three times, as we do in shouting "Hip-hip hooray!" IN THESE PARTS, more particularly down in Washington, D.C., way, there's a Nikkei whose family name is "Chiogioji," first name "Melvin." When I first came across the name, I must confess that it threw me. Aside from such a distinctive family name, the owner of that family name happens to hold a flag rank of rear admiral in the U.S. Navy, no less—which is quite a distinction. Back in White River Valley, qistinctom. Back in White River Valleg, (Washington) there was a family by name of Hichihiyakuda. "Now, don't let the pro-nunciation throw you; rémember, one syl-lable at a time.) That's 13 letters. And I used to feel loaded down with eight. I en-vied classmates with myō-ji's such as "Doi" or "Ito." "Jun Ito" would have been just creat. This how much time it would support the provied classmates what myou'r seach to or "Ito." "Jun Ito" would have been just great. Think how much time the would save in a just a lifetime. A READER sent me a clipping from the Rafu Shimpo listing the top 10 most com-mon myô-ji's. Perhaps yours may be in the top 10. Starting with the most common name, they are: Sato, Suzuki, Takahashi, Tanaka, Watanabe, Ito, Nakamura, Kobayashi, Yamamoto, and Kato. Names which I thought would be in the top 10. were: Doi, Endo, Honda, Murakami, Taketa—just to name a few. I'm sure you have your own candidates to the list of probables. I don't know whether anything could be read into being among the top most common myó-ji's. One, of course, is that these particular families were prolific; or when the time came to select a family moniker, certain names were then popular for whatever reason at that particular point

I DON'T KNOW what the top 10 list looks like in other Asian communities in the U.S. I've run across a lot of "Kims" and "Parks." The other day as I was looking up a name under "L" in the Philadelphia tele phone directory, I came across a whole column of "Lam's." My amateur view is that other Asian cultures, unlike the Japanese, economized or were at least frugal in the length of family names. Having said that, some linguist in Oriental languages may come forth with data proving how wrong this conclusion is. But then, such as it is, my source of authority is only the Bell Telephone phone book.

After leaving the bench, Marutani resumed practicing law in Philadelphia. He writes, regularly for the Pacific Citizen.

Letters

JA group helped many achieve education goals

I read with great interest the three letters I read with great interest the three rectains from the Nisei who were helped by the Na-tional Japanese American Student Reloca-tion Council (NJASKC). The three, Judy Austin Rantala, Miyuki Takeuchi and Toshiko Baba Yonejiyeach spoke about how grateful they were for the assistance re-ceived in going from camp to college."

In all, close to 4,000 young Nisei were helped to leave camp and given the opportu-nity to continue (or begin) their college edu-cations because of the NJASRC. This was cations because of the NJASRC. This was accomplished through the enormous, combined efforts of the American Friends Service Committee, heads of colleges and universities, the YMCAs and YWCAs, churches and countless individuals who comprised the NJASRC, and who believed in the ultimate fairness and justice of the system. It was an arduous undertaking that required maneuvering through a bureaucratic mass difficult enough for college-bound stu-quired maneuvering through a dureaut and maze difficult enough for college-bound stu-dents, but with the added burden of FBI clearance, obtaining sponsors for housing, and getting not only the colleges, but the towns to "accept" the Japanese American students.

My parents were two students who were also helped. My father had already gradu-ated from UC, Berkeley, and my mother was ated from UC, Berkeley, and my mother was still at Call when they were sent to Tanforan and then Topaz. My father received clear-ance to go to the University of Texas (Aus-tin), and my mother to-Boston University My parents are not the type of people who forget things done to them or for them. In 1980, they got together with a group of New England Nisei who were also helped by the N.JASRC and formed the Nisei Student Relocation Commemorative Fund — a scholar-ship fund. They named it "Commemorative" Fund to honor the work of the original National Japanese American Student Relocation Council

The fund has enabled them to i) pay trib ute to all those who helped them in their time of need, and who gave them hope for the future; 2) give hope to others today who are in a similar situation; and 3) look beyond the borders of the Japanese American community to the broader community of Asians in America. I make this last point because the fund awards scholarships to young, college-bound Southeast Asians. (The board of directors chooses a city or area nationally with a large concentration of Southeast Asians, then recruits a local committee to organize the awarding of the scholarships. The 1993 scholarship awards ceremony was held in Stockton.

By continuing the legacy of "lending a helping hand," the Nisei Student Relocation Commemorative Fund is concrete proof that the NJASRC's hard work and effort over 50 years ago was successful in keeping alive the hopes and dreams for a better future for all ericans

A walk through history

On one side of the river are the towns of Locke, Hood and Walnut Grove: on the other side of the river are the mansions of the old bridge every daybreak to work the fields of the haoles for two bits

—From Jeffrey Adachi Maniwala Boy, The Life and Times of a Walnut Grove Boy

apanese Americans of the Northern California stripe have long been intrigued by the story of the "ghost towns" of Walnut Grove and Locke. The latter has the distinction of being the only village in the U.S., financed, built and lived in exclusively by the Chinese. Hundreds of people visit the area annually.

Now, thanks to the National Japanese American Historical Society of San Francisco, I, along with more than a hundred others, had a go at exploring—with some wonderment—the remnants of those historic towns that once flourished in Sacramento Delta. NJAHS-which, incidentally, should be roundly lauded for the should be roundly lauded for the myriad worthwhile programs they sponsor—wisely provided speak-ers, real live persons who had dug in the dirt, raised families and maybe raised hell in Welnut Grove and Locke. I came away greatly stirred by this history.

To read about events in history is one thing, but to be there, right there on the spot where it happened is quite another. There you are, inside the self-same gambling hall in which a Chinese laborer found himself more than a century ago. Right down to the green, felt-topped tables (built tall so that a gambler would have to stand, not sit, to provide more spaces), the creaking, wood plank floors, the small "Lottery Room," "Money Room," "Caretaker's Room" and the "Emergency Exit" (for guess what?), the gambling joint stands as it was. Then, by way of contrast, you find yourself seated in a hard chair in the Buddhist Church. The wooden structure with its stunning gilded altar was built when most Nisei were still toddling around in diapers. It feels inexplicably awesome.

The story of Walnut Grove/
Locke goes way back to the 1870s, when thousands of Chinese, who had worked on railroads and in the gold mines, came to Walnut Grove to hire on as farm hands Gradually, many became successful tenant farmers, specializing in potatoes and pears, the latter being a major crop to this day. To serve the needs of this roughhewn, mostly male, population, businesses like bar-restaurants, rooming houses, gambling halls, and houses of prostitution, even onium dens flourished

I should mention here that, after the completion of the Transcontinental Railroad in 1869, jobs became scarce, and many white settlers who had stayed in California after the Gold Rush, bitterly resented the Chinese for tak-ing jobs they felt were rightfully theirs. Anti-Chinese violence occurred frequently in California To give some idea of the intensity fifteen Chinese were hanged, six shot, in Los Angeles in 1871. The U.S. halted Chinese immigration in 1882 with the Chinese Exclusion Act, not to be repealed until

In this context, it's pretty much predictable that the Chinese com-munity, and later, the Japanese community, in Walnut Grove would be segregated from the whites. Even when their children came of school age, they were sent to segregated schools. And except for governance (there was very little) and municipal services, the Asian population more or less provided for themselves

Japanese laborers came to the Delta area hard on the heels of the Chinese, the first in the late 1880s As they, in turn, became success ful tenant farmers (you will recall that Asians were barred from buy-ing land), they hired Japanese workers. Brides arrived beginning around 1908, and the Japanese began to establish what would be began to establish what would be a thriving, self-sufficient Japantown right along side Chinatown in Walnut Grove. What distinguished this community from J-town ghettos in urban settings was that it served the burgeoring farm community, not See SIDEBAR/page 8

unlike a town in the Old West. One could imagine "cowboys" (farmers) from the ranches going into town for a night of drinking, gambling and women, wives shopping for a week's supply of groceries in one of the many Japanese food markets that proliferated. But many Japanese settled in the town itself. And when the Chinese section of the town burned down in 1915 and a whole tong left to establish themselves upriver, the Japanese likely felt a sense of ownership about Walnut Grove that inhabitants of urban J-towns did not feel. At one point, the Japanese population in Wal-nut Grove swelled to 1,500.

Walking through the narrow streets of the town, I imagined the Issei living contented, if physically hard, lives here. You could almost hear the animated Japanese being spoken on the streets, in one of the nine Japanese-owned grocery stores, nine boarding houses, two bath houses, two tofu houses or at the performance theater, not to mention in the gam-bling joints and bar-restaurants

That must have contributed . greatly to their sense of identity and wholeness. Organizations including a Japanese Association, a Buddhist Church, a Methodist Church and a Women's Club formed the nexus of a satisfying social and spiritual life as well

But what about the prejudice and discrimination? The isolation? "No worse than any place else," said 80-year-old Toshio Sakai who grew up in Walnut Grove and still lives there. "We accepted it. That's how it was." Then he adds with a grin and tongue-in-cheek: "We never had problems until the Sansei grew up and started

But Sakai's daughter, a Sansei, who was born and raised there and now lives elsewhere, remembers Walnut Grove with deep affection "It was a special place she says, "Safe and comfortable. I remember the close friends, the candy store, the annual picnics candy store, the annual picnics, the activities at the Buddhist Church. And," she adds with a laugh, "even though I'm only five feet tall, I wasn't short!" Insularity, she said, provided safety, which, in turn, provided freedom within the boundaries.

Despite living this insular life, both generations of Sakai's even tually flowed easily into the mainstream in a different era, the elder taking a leadership role in the now-mixed township, the younger moving out to the city, as most ni did

Today, starcely a hundred Japanese Americans live in and around the Walnut Grove area, mostly Nisei who have retired. But every Fourth of July, former residents and their extended families gather for a festive reunion. That's strong testimony to the enduring sense of community forged there some eighty years ago.

But what about Locke? That story, born of the ashes of Walnut Grove's Chinatown, is perhaps of Walnut Grove
