Holiday Issue

Once again, Pacific Citizen's presents its Holiday Issue—the 1994 edition.

As always, it is an amalgam of efforts from JACL members from across the country.

The theme that ties together this issue is the same that ties the organization together.

Pacific Citizen presents "JACL in the Community," stories written by chapter members about individuals, programs and events that best characterize community involvement.

PC asked JACL National President Denny Yasuhara to write an introduction to this theme (see below) since he has personlified community involvement. For some, it is a diversion oran aside. For our JACL president, it has been the hallmark of his career, as much a part of his resume as his professional positions.

Read all about these individuals and chapters whose view of community is wide and diverse . . .

The Pacific Citizen staff must also again thank all of the people who help publish this giant issue. In particular, we thank PC helpers, some of whom are shown in the photo above. This year, their assistance and experience made this the most efficient issue ever published in recent times.

We must also thank the JACL volunteers who gather all of the materials for all the chapter greetings. It is work on a grand scale and we offer our profound thanks.

Finally, we thank all of the writers who participated in this edition. It is their thoughts and words that make the Holiday Issue something worth reading and keeping.

JACL in the COMMUNITY

The Spirit

Community By DENNY T. YASHARA JACI. National President Service

The strength of JACL has always been the chapters and the network of chapters that spreads across America. While the vast majority of our members and chapters are located within California's borders, it is the chapters and districts outside of California that gives JACL credibility and strength as a national organization.

However, without active, viable chapters the network, itself, is useless. All strong chapters have activities that attract a wide diverse group of people with different needs and aspirations, not just civil rights. While civil rights is an important dimension of JACL, these issues, by themselves, will not sustain this organization through the 21st century.

Currently, still, the broad financial support, not only in membership, but fundraising comes from loval IACL members who do not ask, "What's in it for me?" This ethic or attitude that everyone in a civilized society or community has an obligation and duty to those entities they are a part of, is fast declining. It is precisely this ethic of the Issei and older Nisei that has sustained JACL all these years. With the gradual diminution of this quality in people, JACL must depend more and more upon activities at the grassroots level to attract members. Thus, the chapters today that are strong and maintaining and even increasing their membership are those that have activities that attract a wide range of people, relevant to their locality, and have leadership that are not one dimensional, but have broad interests that people of all walks of life relate to. It is these social ties and relationships that bind a chapter together, as well as districts and the national organization.

National organizations, such as ACL, must be more sensitive and responsive to what goes on at the chapter and grassroots level and prioritize and tailor its programs and activities accordingly. If they do not, there will be a continuing decline of support for such organizations as is occurring today.

In the stories and pictures that follow, the reader will see the quality and experience of activities and people that make JACL what it is and if other chapters and members take heed, JACL will be a strong and vibrant organization for many years to come.

Pacific Citizen Holiday Issue, December, 1994—A7

Seeking a PC support system

By CHERRY KINOSHITA

Cherry Kinoshita was appointed chairwoman of the Pacific Citizen Editorial Board following the August national convention in Salt Lake City. She is among the most well known JACL leaders across the country, particularly for her efforts on redress as a member of the JACL LEC. In this article the PC chairwoman addresses the serious financial problems besettina the Pacific Citizen.

"News is the first rough draft of history." So said Ben Bradlee, editor of the Washington Post. History did indeed unfold before my eyes as I very carefully turned the yellowed pages of the 50-year old Pacific Citizens.

"General DeWitt Defends Policy on Evacuation." "91 Japanese Americans Killed, 221 Wounded on Italy Front." "Women's Army Corps Offers Opportunity for Nisei Girls." "U.S. Supreme Court Grants Review of Evacuation Order." "Evacuees on Move Again as Jerome Closes." "President Roosevelt Praises Combat Record of Japanese American Soldiers."

Browsing through the fragile pages, taking care not to break off the brittle edges, it brought back bittersweet memories of those years past. The PC was our only link to life outside of camp in those internment years when we were so hungry for news. Like so many, things of value, news was something you never realized you'd miss until you were deprived of it. Later, once outside in a strange mid-wester city, that lifik was then important to maintain our ties to the widely dispersed IA community.

For JACL member and non-member subscribers, the PC provides that link to other JA's and the Asian American communities across the nation, particularly in those areas where there may be no other vernaculars. When those 20,000 readers subscribed to the PC, there was an implied contract—that they would receive the number of issues they had paid for. It is a commitment that the Pacific Citizen owes to its subscribers and its advertisers. That pledge was broken when in September the PC was forced by the financial crisis out back to a monthly publication.

To face the facts, the $12 allocation for the PC, which has not changed since 1989, falls far short of the actual need for production of an 8 to 12-page weekly. Although advertising revenue has fallen short of projections due to adverse economic conditions, it is unrealistic to expect a membership subscription rate set six years ago to be adequate, given rising production, mailing, overhead, and newsprint-costs. Employing draconian measures of financial restraints, reduction of two staff members, and cutting down to approximately $13,466 for 1994.

The Pacific Citizen Editorial Board on Nov. 20 voted unanimously, in view of the continuing severe financial situation, to recommend a semimonthly publication schedule beginning January 1995, with continued monitoring to assess whether the financial status will permit returning to a weekly publication. Even going to a semimonthly schedule, the deficit projected for 1995 may be in the range of $30,000 to $50,000, dependent on the variables of membership/subscriber losses and uncertainties of advertising revenue balanced against cuts in production/ administrative expenses.

How do other publications make a go of it? Although there are several dozen ethnic newspapers in Seattle, when we think of Asian American vernaculars of particular interest to JA's, three publications come to mind.

The oldest, first published in 1974, is the semimonthly international Examiner, which started out under the aegis of the Alaskan Cannery Workers Union, and thus inherits a distinctly social issues and human rights advocacy focus. "People issues as opposed to money issues," says Editor Jeff Lin.. With a staff of 3 full-time and 3 partimers, supplemented by a host of, volunteer contributors, the International Examiner publishes 24 16-page issues a year with two special supplements. Circulation is 12,000 and the subscription rate is $18 yearly:

Started in 1982 as the English edition of the Seattle Chinese Post by energetic Assunta Ng, the 28-page weekly covers a wide-range of Asian American issues in the fields of business, ethnic concerns, politics, entertainment and sports. "An alternative to the mainstream press" explains current Editor Deni Yamauchi. When Editor/Publisher Ng realized the title of Seattle Chinese Post tended to restrict a wide coverage of Asian American news, she embarked on a name-change contest and settled on Northwest Asian Weekly. A staff of 3 full-timers handles the editorial, graphics, and sales, with 2 part-time free lancers. Circulation is 16,000 and the subscription rate $14.50.

The newest vernacular, the Northwest Nikkei, started in 1989 by publisher Tomio Moriguchi, and edited currently by Sandee Taniguchi, focuses on the Japanese American community as its ame implies, featuring Nikkei human interest articles, personalities and events. One full-time and one part-time person handles the editorial responsibilities and a part-time staffer takes care of circulation and business duties. Circulation of the 16-page monthly is 9,000, and subscription rate $15 yearly.

All three papers are heavily dependent upon ad revenue with the Northwest Asian Weekly probably the most successful in snagging the large corporate accounts, which may account for its relatively modest subscription price. The circulation figures do not represent paid subscriptions but include freebies distributed at places like Uwajimaya and other well attended shops and offices in the International District and outlying areas.

So there you have rates of $18 for a semi-monthly, $15 for a monthly, and $14,50 for a weekly. The Pacific Citizen normally a weekly of 44 issues and a foliday Issue, scrapes by on $12 a year from membership subscriptions.

Without having any second thoughts, each year I write out checks totaling $47.50 to be able to receive all three local papers, even though I could pick up most of the issues free. Would JACLers willingly supplement the $12 PC allocation by voluntarily donating a few dollars more yearly?

Floated at the PNW District Council meeting and Pacific Citizen Editorial Board teleconference were suggestions that the new membership form could include a line for additional donations earmarked for the PC. The membership renewal form could include a line for PC donations, similar to the "check-off" mode used fairly successfully for redres fund raising. If just half our membership of 20,000 voluntarily donated $5 or more, PC could publish without a deficit.

Since an increase in the PC allotment cannot be effected without essentially a dues increase, which takes National Council approval, this donation-viadues method could keep a perpetual stream of funds coming in. Isn't the PC worth your support?

'For JACL member and non-member subscribers, the PC provides that link to other JA's and the Asian American communities across the nation, particularly in those areas where there may be, no other vernaculars.'

Ethics are rules of behavior based on values of right and wrong. Where we disagree as to whether or not behavior is ethical, we are actually disagreeing on the core values underlying the behavior.'

Ethics, Values and Organizations

By Paul M. Shinkawa

any of us in JACL are volunteers with day-today lives involving little interaction with other Japanese-Americans.

Japanese-Americans.
Consequently, our lives involve passing back and forth between so called "real world" activities and JACL activities. This provides for some interesting contrasts between our thoughts and experiences in what sometimes seems like two distinct worlds.

I recently attended a seminar for government ethics advisors. In our state, there has been a strong movement to place a specialist in governmental ethics in each department of government to act as an advisor to both managerial and line staff. Since I have also been involved in legal ethics peer review for several years with the State Bar, the seminar gave me a multi-dimensional insight into how ethics, or as some feel, the lack of it, directs the course of events.

A prominent part of the seminar was based on the concept of core ethical values as de\(\)critical of core ethical values as de\(\)critical of the fosephson, a founder of the fosephson Institute of Ethics. The Josephson Institute is a non-profit organization devoted to ethics awareness and training. Mr. Josephson, in a small booklet he authored entitled Making Ethical Decisions, describes six core ethical values, They are: trustworthiness; respect; responsibility, justice and fairness; caring; and civic virtue and citizenship.

The ideas he espouses are not new. They are based on, and acknowledge, principles laid down by Confucius, Aristotle, Mahabharata, and Jesus. However, he has secularized them by placing them in context with the thoughts of Immanuel Kant and Jeremy Bentham so that they can be used in, everyday business and governmental decision-making without the feeling that one is making religious decisions. The "Golden Rule" has thereby become the "Rule of Reciprocity."

What was particularly striking to me in this seminar was the statement that, "Ethics are rules of behavior based on values of right and wrong. Where we disagree as to whether or not behavior is ethical, we are actually disagreeing on the core values underlying the behavior." That is precisely where we have taken JACL!

The seemingly endless debate over inclusiveness of certain groups of people, our failure to come to agreement on actions which may or may not compromise example of racism, and our marked failure to accord each other even a modicum of respect when we gather together to try to resolve such differences, all point to a severe divergence of values from each other. The prevailing opinion is that everyone else's opinion is wrong. No one seems willing to listen or even disagree in a civil manner. As a result our identity as a community with common values and beliefs is being shaken and torn apart.

One of the elements of our being a community, despite our wide physical dispersion, is our subscription to common values. In broad terms, trustworthiness; respect; responsibility; justice and fairness; caring; civic virtue and citizenship have always seemed to me to be what Japanese-Americans believed m. However, this not what I've experienced at recent JACL meetings and from talking with other folks from around the country, my experi-ences are no longer unusual. Anyone who attended or heard about the 1994 National Council sessions this past summer should have some understanding of what I am describing. 1994 is JACL's 65th Anniversary Year. Perhaps it is time, given the tremendous investment our community has placed in it over the years, to begin a process to salvage it for the years to come. Our leadership has already begun a process of fiscal reform which, if supported by the members, could prevent us from bankrupting ourselves. But, leadership alone is not the solution. Just as community values are the foundation of ethics, so is community involvement the foundation of leadership. If we, as members of a community, cannot come together and reaffirm our belief in values which are common to us all or, confirm our belief in newly held common values, we will no longer be a community.

It is time for JACL members around the country and from within our own diverse sub-groups, to begin to examine what our own values and needs are as a larger community...In chapter, district, and national meetings, we should gather to share our ideas and hopes for the future. If in some instances, professional facilitators are needed to keep things civil, then we should not shrink from their employment eithe It may be that one outcome of such self-examination is our conclusion that we are totally assimilated into American society and no longer need JACL. While I doubt that will be a consensus position, no plausible viewpoint should be dismissed without exploration.

The outcome of every meeting, the agreements and disagreements, should be shared throughout JACL in order to promote discussion in other meetings. The community values we still hold in common should rise to the top of the agendas, and we will be able to tell our leaders where we want them to take us in the future. Once we can confirm what we still hold as common values, common goals, and common fears; we will be able to understand why we still need one another as members of a community.

JACL needs to step back from its present difficulties and reassess what we believe in, whaf we are capable of doing and what we are willing to do to get there. We can only do this if we are willing to honestly look at the way we conduct ourselves, what our common core values are, and how these values affect community and organizational behavior. This process needs to be initiated at the most basic, grass-roots level of JACL in order to be successful.

If we are to have any hope for ourselves as an organization with a future, we must re-create our belief and commitment to our own set of core values. We must decide what it is that we believe in, and we must ensure that our organization behaves in a manner consistent with those beliefs. It is only when we are all committed to our own "ethical". behavior within JACL, an ethic that is based on common values, that we can have any confidence that we: are still a viable organization setting out to perform our mission of producing, "Better Americans in a Greater America."

Paul M. Shinkawa is a former JACL National Board member and chârmaïn of the board of the Pacific Citizen, and a current member of the Houston Chapter JACL. He is an attorney with the Texas State Department of Parks and Recreation.

Pacific Citizen Holiday Issue, December, 1994-A11

Taking on the

Domestic Partners issue

Assembly Bill 2810, which would have granted rights to domestic partners, was vetoed Sept. 11 by California Gov. Pete Wilson. According to the Diablo Valley Chapter, there are plans to reintroduce the bill next year.

he July 22-August 11, 1994 edition of the Pacific Citizen, one of the prime vehicles for disseminating information within the Japanese American community, included an article by Peggy Liggett, a member of the Fresno chapter, that made members of the Diablo Valley Chapter aware of the domestic partners issue and the domestic partners legislation, Assembly Bill 2810, that was pending in the California legislature. In the article, Peggy suggested that a Domestic Partners Act be considered by the National Board of the JACL. What a good idea we said and so began the Diablo. Valley Chapter's venture into the domestic partners issue

"This article does not explore the issue of domestic partners itself, but serves to illustrate how one idea can spark a movement, and how one JACL chapter learned the lessons of grassroots organizing to support a cause it believed

At the July chapter board meeting, we organized an emergency resolution committee consisting of seven chapter members Mike and Leah Hamachi, Eizo and Mary Kobayashi, Jon Kubokawa, Ted Tsukahara, and Milo Yoshino. Mike and Jon did the early research to find out how we could introduce the domestic partners subject at the National Convention which was only two weeks away. Mike received advice and guidance from Dale Ikeda, of the Glovis Chapter, who was chairperson for the Resolutions and Amendments Committee. Milo contacted California State Assembly Member Richard Rainey's office in Walnut Creek for a copy of AB2810. Mike recruited the eighth member of the committee. John Sugiyama, whose legal background allowed him to be the primary draftsman of our domestic partners emergency resolution. Ted provided constant reminders of the importance of domestic partners legislation for the disabled and for our mature JACL members. After several closely spaced committee meetings and many telephone calls, our emergency resolution was ready.

Now we needed the endorsements of delegates from five chapters. Jon contacted Patty Wada, NCWNPD Regional Director, who said that Joanne Iritani from the Florin chapter had called and expressed interest in the domestic partners legislation. She too had read Peggy's article and had contacted her Assembly

CONVENTIONEERS—From left, Aaron K. Owada of the Olympua Chapter, JAGL, poses with Miske Hamachi, Diablo Valley Chapter, Joannie Intani, Florm Chapter, and Leah Hamachi, Diablo Valley. The same-sex issue as well as the domestic partners bill was a big topic of the evenu.

Member's office for a copy of the bill. Ion called loanne and advised her of our progress on the emergency resolution and received the Florin Chapter's support and endorsement. Carol Kawase from the Sonoma County Chapter was persuaded to support the emergency resolution by the Hamachis Now we needed just three more signatures. The Kobayashis met with Karyl Matsumoto of the San Mateo chapter

Ion attended the Contra Costa Chapter board meeting, and the Kobayashis and Milo made a presentation before the Berkeley Chapter board meeting. All three chapters agreed to support and sign . . . we now had commitments for the required five endorsing signatures and the feeling that we were not alone in this quest Now it was in the hands of Mike and Leah Hamachi who were already enroute to the National Convention.

Mike and Leah had never been to a IACL National convention and were under standably nervous about presenting a potentially controversial issue. When asked by the committee to introduce the resolution on the convention floor, Leah remembered some of the lessons she had learned at the IACL-OCA Leadership conference she had attended earlier in the year. Upon reflection, Leah said, "At the Washington D.C. Leadership Conference, I had learned the importance of striving for collaboration, the tremendous effort and determination required for legislative action, and the importance of teamwork and persistence." So, empowered with these skills and motivated by the memories of inspiring speeches, the Hamachis embarked on the great adventure

Their lobbying efforts began upon arrival in Salt Lake City and they quickly obtained the actual endorsing signatures from Eden Township, San Fernando Valley, and Sonoma County. The following day Contra Costa, Florin, San Mateo, and Lucy Kishiue, NCWNP

District Governor, signed. The emergency resolution was submitted to the Resolutions and Amendments Committee-hey, this wasn't so hard then the resolution was rejected.

Ernest and Chizu liyama from Contra Costa and Marielle Tsukamoto from Florin joined Joanne and the Hamachis in rewriting the resolution which was resubmitted and rejected again. We were getting no where fast. Then a chance meeting with Aaron Owada, an attorney from Olympia Chapter, got us back on track. Aaron joined the committee. Aaron's knowledge of the convention Rules of Procedure and Robert's Rules of Order gave us hope that the emergency resolution could be introduced on the convention floor.

He was meticulously accurate and successful in lobbying committee members and their chairpersons, district governors, and national officers. Aaron became the chief strategist and authored the final Amended Emergency Resolu-

The committee worked feverishly into the late hours lobbying, caucusing, and reproducing a mountain of legislative, legal, and lobbying materials. Impasses and frustration, was this really worth it? But Leah remembered, "The need for repeated efforts to follow one's goal; networking, explaining, garnering support, collaborating and then success." Finally, we were allowed to present our emergency resolution now known as Emergency Resolution 3, on the convention floor where it was passed by a large majoritý.

The convention was over, our resolution had passed. Was this mission completed and the end of the story? Not quite yet, for Assembly Bill 2510 was still pending in the California State Legislature. How could we have impact on this legislation? Alone, we would have very little impact, but with the strength of the JACL perhaps we could make a difference.

The emergency resolution committee became the AB 2810 Committee. Mary Kobayashi volunteered to be our primary contact with California State Assembly Member Robert Campbell's office in Martinez to track the progress of the bill. Milo developed a telephone and fax relationship with Assembly Member Richard Katz's office. It was Kaiz from Sepulveda who authored AB 2810.

Katz's office said that the bill would probably pass in the State Senate and State Assembly and that we should concentrate our letter writing and telephone call campaign at Gov. Wilson. They also advised us that once the bill was passed by the legislature, the governor would have 30 days to sign or veto the bill. Since the state legislature was scheduled to recess by Aug.31, we realized that we only had about 30 days to mount our campaign.

We contacted members of our chapter to explain AB 2810 and to encourage them to write or to call the governor's office. We felt the need to do more. Could we get a letter writing campaign out to all of the JACL chapters in California? Both National President Denny Yasuhara and National Director Randy Senzaki encouraged and supported our grassroots effort and wrote statements that we included in our letter to the JACL chapters. In addition, Randy wrote a letter to Assembly Member Katz's office stating the JACL's support for domestic partners legislation. The JACL national office supplied us with mailing labels with the names and addresses of the presidents and co-presidents of the JACL chapters in California. Patty Wada, our regional director, helpfully edited many of our letters, and patiently answered numerous telephone calls and fax communications

On Aug. 23, AB 2810 was approved by the California State Senate. It was quickly approved by the Assembly on August 25. The 30day clock was now ticking.

As we dropped in the mailbox the 76 letters to the California JACL chapters, we wondered if there was anything else we could do.

How about contacting organiza-tions outside of the JACL? George Fujioka (you know, Mollie's husband), a past member of the Contra Costa County Human Relations Commission, asked members of that commission to write. Mary Kobayashi's daughter, Keiko, who contacted organizations at Whittier Law School. Mike wrote to and visited with Mayor Ron Beagley of Walnut Creek who wrote to the governor. Analysis

An APA Perspective on 1994 Elections

By ARLENE OKI

Due the quirky nature of the 1994 political season, it is very difficult, even after almost one month, to assess the ramifications of the elections on issues important to Asian Pacific American (APA) communities in Washington state.

To begin with, no one here could have predicted that there would be such a radical restructure of the state's congressional delegation. Along with Democratic majorities in the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate, this state's congressional delegation has been composed of mostly Democrats since 1976. Suddenly, in one swoop, eight Democrats and one Republican were replaced by seven Republicans and two Democrats who will return to a Congress controlled by Republicans. No where was citizen discontent (helped by inaccurate, but catchy, campaign commercials which had nothing to say about the real issues or maybe helped by persistently effective grassroots organizing activities) more evident than in Washington state which witnessed the most sweeping changes in the makeup of its congressional delegation of all 50 states. Voters in the state's 5th congressional district even had the audacity to oust the Speaker of the House Tom Foley, whose position is third in line in ascendancy to the presidency.

Though the state's largely Republican congressional delegation will join Republican majorities in the House and Senate, it cannot be assumed that the delegation will be unified enough to forge consensus on such key issues as health reform, welfare reform, deficit reduction measures, or even the GOP Contract with America. At least four of the new members have strong allegiences to Christian conservative groups and may be quite independent of their more traditional, mainstream Republican colleagues.

APA leaders are concerned about provisions in the GOP Contract with America-which proposes to eliminate the eligibility of immigrants, whether they be illegal and legal, for approximately 60 federal programs. It is feared that many vulnerable

APA elderly immigrants will be cut off of federal benefit programs if these policies are implemented.

The successful passage of California's Proposition 187 has spurred activity in Washington state to prevent similar efforts here. Latino/Hispanic, civil rights, immigrant rights, and APA organizations are already working to develop networks and strategies to prevent such a movement in Washington state. It is hoped that a coalition of organizations will work together to thwart anti-immigrant initiatives.

The JACL LEGACY FUND

The need, the programs

Project passes 4.5 million mark, non-profits competing for dollars

By GRAYCE UYEHARAChairwoman, Legacy Fund Committee

he Legacy Fund Campaign Committee report was presented to the JACL
National Council at the August JACL
National Convention held in Salt Lake City. The campaign kicked off in September 1990 reached $4,516,077.63 as of June 30, 1994.
Additional contributions from June 30 to Oct. 31 has added
$22,436.87 for the unaudited total of $4,538,464. Campaign expenditures for the four years is under $500.000.

The economic downturn which impacted on contributions became evident not only to IACL but to most non-profit organizations. Individuals who are on the mailing lists of non-profits note the intensity of fundraising efforts by these organizations to increase their donor numbers. The reports of established non-profits and the religious denominations show that IACL has joined the ranks of organizations which has been forced to downsize its budget and to face the reality that individuals do not feel secure about their financial security in America.

JACL is going through a period of drastic change. What funds we have will have to be used with thorough consideration of how best we can complete programs which will make a difference in our communities and our nation. Program priorities need to be selected and fully funded for what IACL can do best remembering that we have a great structure of 116 chapters to move programs forward with the support of staff. If JACL undertakes a select few but those that not every other organization can also do, we should be able to take such projects to corporations and foundations for financial support.

The Chronicle for Philanthropy recently reported that the non-profit organizations whose mission is clearly articulated and established continue to receive increased support, the Salvation Army leads U.S. charities in raising funds, followed by American Red Cross. Ranked third is Second Harvest, followed by United Jewish Appeal.

Looking at these organizations there is no uncertainty about the role and mission of these organizations, The Salvation Army works directly with the poor and the homeless, the American Red Cross is ready to respond to disaster situations and Second Harvest is a national network that supplies food banks across the nation.

United Way, performing-arts groups and Jewish Federations did poorly last year while those organizations with no growth were the environmental, public-advocacy health charities and religious groups. Most of the major Protestant denominations have had to downsize as a result of its membership's reduced contributions.

With giving patterns changing in the past five years; corresponding with the uncertainty of our present economy. Non-profit organizations must be sensitive to providing accurate information to those who are being solicited.

The philanthropic advisory service of the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York in its 1994 giving guide assessed the 200 most asked-about charities in the city. Today.

"donors are concerned about everything from the elaborateness of the invitation to the price of the postage to the deductibility of the gift."

The guide committee states that information is needed to determine the effectiveness of the organization; reference to an annual report is simply not enough.

Besides these reports often don't give you a percentage breakdown on managerial and fund-raising costs, which is crucial to know in the effectiveness of an organization.

The guide assesses the charities against six standards: "public accountability"—the extent to which the charity makes financial records available to donors; how effectively it uses its funds; how truthfully it represents itself inits solicitation and informational materials; the fundraising practices of the charity, how well governed the charity is and whether the charity abides by all applicable laws and regulations."

As JACL has to develop its fundraising efforts, this guide gives some basic direction before lundraising programs are to be initiated. Professional fundraisets state that an organization must have a clear and working mission to market to potential donors. In other words, the donors must feel their dollar investment will show results of the organization.

The Legacy Fund Grants Program is a result of the earnings from the Legacy-Fund. Keeping in mind the giving guide's recommendations that donors need information about the results of their giving, the Legacy-Fund will be describing the awards for the first three years. Thus, it will be timely to follow up on this more notable JACL Legacy-Fund program. Many of the programs have been completed. There is need to follow-up on the awards to find out whether the grants made a difference in our communities.

Note: Denny Yasuhara appointed Grayce Uyehara to chair the Development Committee on Dec. 4 at the National Board Meeting. Until such time as the organization is stabilized and funds are available, the development program will be operating with volunteers. The committee is seeking professionals who will be willing to establish the JACL development program. Please write to Grayce Uyehara, 685 Bridlington Way, Medford, NJ 08055 if you can help.

Annual Giving broadens JACL funding base

The Annual Giving fundraising plan was initiated in September, 1994, to allay as quickly as possible the mounting deficit of JACL. The idea was to get out the mailing at the earliest possible date before the year end mailing crunch. With 24,000 members in JACL, the idea is to fest if we can receive contributions from 2,400 or ten percent of our members to start giving an average of $30 to Annual Giving: The result will be $72,000. A budget of $5,500 was developed for printing the solicitation material, postage and administrative costs. The appeal to the membership was delayed and was mailed in mid-November.

The first returns were from California, then Oregon and Washington, followed by the Mountain states chapters.

The first contributions arrived on November 21.

The following reports the contribution activity!

Date Number of Contributors

11/21		77
11/22	1	. 79
11/23		118
11/25		65
11/28		223
11/30		69

As of Dec. 8, there were 1,218 contributors. If the present rate continues for the rest of December, it seems this fundraising effort should meet its goal. With one quarter of the estimated contributors after seven days and with higher than planned amount of average contribution, the goal will be surpassed, Please support the program in your leadership program. Thanks to the help of Bill Yoshino and Clay-Harada; we managed to carry through this new IACL plan for annual fundraising.

The grants program

Accounting for ten percent (10%) of the annual earnings, the Grants Program was established specifically to provide funding support for chapter and/or district sponsored programs that reflect and implement the organization's biennial Program for Action.

Goals and objectives of the current biennium Program for Action are as

- To secure and uphold civil and human rights.
- To create programs to address the needs of IACL membership.
- To increase IACL's organizational capabilities to carry out its mission.
- To pursue the conclusion of redress and reparations on the injustices of the wartime internment of Americans of Japanese
- To increase the number of Japanese and Asian Pacific Americans in leadership positions.
- To preserve the cultural heritage and values of lapanese Americans.

Serving on the selection committee for the 1992-94 biennium were Trisha Murakawa, VP Planning &

KELLY WICKER

Development, John Hayashi (NCWNP), Yas Tokita (IDC), Fuzzy Hisamoto (MPDC) June Schumann (PNW), Tom Kometani (EDC), Kathy Akiya-Vaughn (MDC), and Kerry Kaneichi (CCDC)

During the 1993 selection process Kelly Wicker (PNW) replaced Kerry Kaneichi as the youth representative on the panel. A project chairperson of a submitted proposal, Kerry voluntarily disqualified himself as a judge to avoid any conflict of interest. National Youth Council Chair Kim Nakahara and CCDC District Governor Larry Ishimoto confirmed the committee member change.

In 1994, an illness prevented Fuzzy Hisamoto from participating and she requested that Tom Masamori (MPDC) serve in her place.

1993 Program

Ten percent of the previ-

totaled $12,000. Over thirty applications were received, three times as many as the previous year. The committee selected eleven projects, offering grants ranging from $500 to $2,000. Awards were distributed by mail in August 1993

Of the eleven projects awarded, three have been completed, one canceled, and seven were pending completion this summer/ fall. Extenuating circumstances have caused alterations to project completion dates. Two of the pending projects coincided with the National Convention in Salt Lake, City. The following provides a brief summary on the status of each.

$2000.00 award Riverside-Asian Pacific Youth Education Program

The program covers a series of monthly interactives that highlight various Asian Pacific groups and the professional and cultural contribution of each. The year-long program will culminate in a leadership conference. Project pending

Mount Olympus-Public announcement of donation of Masaoka memorabilia to University of Utah library

This project coincided with the 33rd Biennial JACL National Convention. A combined Masaoka Tribute and JACL Oldtimers Reunion Luncheon was held on August 4, 1994. Etsu Masaoka presented Mike's memorabilia to the Mariott Library. Speakers included Greg Thompson from the development staff at the Library and Bill Hosokawa. Project completed.

Portland-The Oregon Nikkei

The book will cover 100 years of Nikkei life in Oregon. Harold Onishi, project chairperson(sent an update requesting an extension on the completion date because the book's author, Deena Nakata, was changing jobs and moving. Currently the text is being reviewed by a professional editor and accompanying pictures are being collected. Materials were scheduled to be sent to the printers by September 1994. Project pending.

"Nemawashi: Protect the Roots"

This docu-drama film is about three young people who become concerned that their family stories will be lost when their grandmother dies. The project has experienced a delay due to an illness to writer Velina Hasu Houston. The project was about four months behind schedute, making completion of the film last October 1994. For accuracy outside sources have been sought: Smithsonian Institution, Manzanar Committee and the Japanese Historical Society. Project pending.

$500.00 award

Seattle-"Building Bridges" Two cooperative workshops promises to bring tegether the African and Asian American communities; 1) Scheduled for September 1994, an interracial/ intercultural workshop for students and educators sponsored by the Seattle School District and the Dept. of Justice. The twoday workshop was designed to train students and educators on conflict resolutions skills and cultural understanding. A joint presentation of the IACL Seattle chapter and the NAACP was being discussed. 2) Patricia Wasta-Kim, music director at Cleveland High School, has successfully used music as a medium for bringing cross-cultural awareness and sensitivity to her students. A workshop and joint concert will bring together her music group and a local Taiko troupe. Prior to the concert students will learn about lapanese culture and have an opportunity to talk with troupe members. Project pending.

Selanoco-"Chibi no Gakko"

The two-week summer activity program, held in the July 1994, was designed for Japanese American children to learn about their culture and heritage. Project completed.

1994 Program

This year's program has $16,500 to offer in awards. Sixteen applications were received by the postmark deadline of June 1. Similarly, the application and selection procedures closely followed that which was set in the two previous years. Applications were made available through National Headquarters on March 1. Announcements regarding the grant program and application availability were made in several issues of the Pacific Citizen (Feb.25 Mar.3, Mar.4-10 & April 8-14, May 20-26, May 27-June 2) as well as at the February 1994 National Board meeting and through letters to all district governors. DENVER CENTRAL OPTIMISTS EXTENDS HOLIDAY GREETINGS

This has been a year of renewed interest in the former War Relocation Center known as Amache. The U.S. Department of Interior has placed the former camp site on the Register of National Historic Places. Also, the Colorado Historical Society has given grants to provide better access and to develope interpretive signs and to restore a portion of the camp site as a visitation area. The Denver Central Optimists have shouldered the major responsibilities in this effort. Progress has been made but additional funds will be needed to complete this task. An appeal is therefore being made to all interested persons. Donations for the 'Amache Fund' may be sent to the Denver Central Optimists, 2390 Vance Street, Lakewood, CO 80215.

Alaska JACLer shares stories at Air Station

By Harry K. Honda

ommunity Involvement comes in different weights and colors, especially in May of each year when Asian Pacific American Heritage month is celebrated.

For Alaska JACL, Sylvia Kobayashi of Anchorage was invited by the men and women at Eareckson Air Station of the Pacific Air Forces to speak on their theme: "Asian Pacific Americans: Dedication, Dignity and Distinction.

For Sylvia, it was a four-day trip to a remote military base on Shemya Island at the end of the Aleutian chain-1,500 miles from Anchorage and pick up on local history and tour the airbase and the island studded with Japanese fortifications.

A closely guarded secret military outpost during WWII, the enemy Japanese forces had occupied the isles but were to slip out under dense fog while the U.S. 4th Infantry Regiment landed in May, 1943, from the other side for what was to be the Battle of Attu. Found were two Japanese military dogs, trained to warn of approaching aircraft and ships in the thick fog or at night. The U.S. Navy, at first thought, they were only canine pets.

The Army Corps of Engineers, a group of Alaska Scouts and men of the 4th Infantry built the runway for B-29 Superfortresses, though they never used it. C-53 transports and B-24 bombers were launched from Shemya from June '43, then known as APO 729 and later named Shemya AFB.

For Sylvia, Heritage Month meant meeting with a veteran of the famed Alaska Scoots, who recalled meeting with Nisei MIS interpreters in the history of the pioneer Alaska Issei, it was an unexpected visit and luncheon with a 97-year-old Issei woman, Mrs. Nakamura, in Whitehorse (Canadian Yukon Territory). The spectacular Aurora borealis over the Arctic horizon was another special.

Wearing her Alaskan fur, she and her husband Mas (MIS) staffed the Alaska JACL-MIS display at the recent Family Expo at the Los Angeles Convention Center. "Anything can happen, anytime, anywhere," she vowed as 1995 loomed.

GRANTS -

displayed during Asian Pacific Heritage month, May 1995.

Las Vegas-"Strength and Diversity" exhibit

As part of the Smithsonian Institution's Traveling Exhibit, the "Strength and Diversity" exhibit is scheduled for viewing from July to October 1995 at the University of Nevada's Marjorie Barrick Museum. Preceding the exhibit which centers around the histories of Japanese American women from 1885 to 1990, the scheduled advertising and publicity will include a traveling suitcase exhibit assembled for distribution through the Clark County School District to familiarize students and teachers. During the exhibit chapter members will participate in and organize panel discussions as well as art displays. A grant from the Nevada Humanities Committee has been secured.

San Diego-"Curriculum Resource Kit"

To accompany the JACL Curriculum Guide" the San Diego chapter will develop. design and field test a prototype teacher resource kit that would utilize materials available in the Guide. Currently envisioned the kits will include: a video tape on the relocation, photo-study prints, poster-sized graphics including a local evacuation notice and a set of maps showing military relocation zones, size and location of assembly centers, newspaper articles and interview transcripts.

San Francisco-"American Sons"

Academy award winning producer/ director Steven Okazaki's new film "American Sons, currently in postproduction; examines how racism shapes the lives of four Asian American men. Based on over 100 interviews, the film is a one hour dramatic presentation which exposes how prejudice destroys selfesteem and thus perpetuates systems of oppression. Prior to the film's showing on PBS in May 1995, promotional outreach will be done in the schools and through community groups.

$1,200 award National Youth Council-"NYC Newsletter"

Focusing exclusively on youth/student activities, the first two issues of the "NYC Newletter"(tentatively titled "Trends") will increase visibility of the NYC and work as an outreach tool for new member recruitment. Proposed articles will be solicited and collected from the various district youth representatives.

$1,000 award Midwest District Council-"Rohwer Memorial"

Repairing the severe and continued deterioration of the Rohwer internment camp memorial built by internees themselves, will provide a lasting educational impression of Japanese American history. Registered as a national historical landmark, this site will be made accessible, especially to those living in the Midwest, South and East. Actively working on this project since 1990, MDC has also applied for funds from the Arkansas Transportation Enhancement Program (ATEP).

$800 award Honolulu-"Born Free and Equal"

His only work of integrated photojour-nalism, photography and text, Ansel Adam's "Born Free and Equal" is a book about the relocation camp experience which he was-invited to photograph by the WRA. The Honolulu chapter's project will endeavor to reprint the book and provide additional chapters recounting book burning episodes following its original publication as well as the AJA experience following World War

$750 award Seattle-"Career and Community Involvement Symposium"

Various Asian Pacific

American professionals from the fields of social work, media, law, government; education and politics will talk with youth about career and community involvement in their respective areas. Focus group sessions will provide youth the chance to learn more about each occupation and how volunteer work can be applied towards career goals. A resource pamphlet listing names of organizations, types of volunteers needed, addresses and phone numbers will be made available to participants: enrollment with JACL or other partner organizations will also be available.

Wisconsin-"Chapter Outreach to Students and Educators of Wisconsin"

With fewer than 3000 Japanese Americans in Wisconsin, according to the 1990 census, information about the history of Japanese Americans is sorely lacking in the local classroom and public-at-large. Utilizing chapter membership, the Wisconsin chapter project will work toward making available information about the incarceration through the distribution of promotional and program materials and organized personal visits.

This workshop provided a forum for meeting and discussing with FBI officials and police crime unit leaders about how their respective operations perform and investigate, and the implementation of the 1992 Hate Crimes Reporting Act, its ramifications as it becomes effective in 1994. Participants learned about what their communities may do to effectively report hate crimes to their local police agencies. Panelists included William Johnson, deputy superintendent, Boston Police Department.

San Jose-"Follow up to 1942 &1943 interviews"

Original interviews of 20 families during their incarceration in 1942 & '43 conducted by anthropologist Margaret Lantis could be the only set of its kind, according to noted scholar and University of Santa Clara Ethnic Studies Director, Stephen S. Fugita. This project aims to locate and re-interview the respondents, determining how the evacuation, incarceration and resettlement impacted their life course. This study will contribute to JACL's continuing public education efforts.

Sonoma County-"Taking Charge: Making a Difference"

This conference was designed for women (but not-excluding men) to provide effective and assertive communication at work, in education, with political issues, in health care and crosscultiural environments. Highly successful and profiled widely in the ethnic press in Northern California, the conference was held in June 1994.

Christmas Cheer Thanks All Its 1993 Donors

Dear Friends:

Your contributions to the JACL Christmas Cheer Project made the 1993 Holiday Season a more joyous time for many of the less fortunate members of the Japanese American community. Your generous donations totaled $17,701 of which 92% was distributed in December 1993.

Thank you for your continued support to these often tough times forgotten Japanese Americans.

Dare to be old

Mei Nakano, Nisei author of "Iapamese Americane Women: Three Generations," is presently working on a book about her father. She writes a monthly column in the Pacific Citizen.

By Mei Nakano

ultwardly I am 83 years old, but inwardly I am every age, with the emotions and experiences of each period. The important thing is that at each age I am myself, just as you are yourself. 'During much of my life I was anxious to be what someone else wanted me to be. Now I have given up the struggle. I am what I am.

-Elizabeth Coatsworth

The photograph on the outside of the large chvelope shows a hand-some, white-haired man, muscled, wrinkle-free, smoothly tanned; smiling through white teeth obviously his own. He is, says the caption, 72. A sign.right behind him, the size of a billboard, blares the message: "OLD AGE ISN'T NATURAL"

Excuse me?

The envelope contains an ad for Prevention, a magazine widely respected for its progressive approach to matters of health. Inside, a fold-out lures us with: THE SECRET TO YOUNGER SKIN and HOW TO DEFEAT LIVER SPOTS and BUILD A YOUNGER BODY and 101 WAYS TO TURN BACK THOSE SIGNS OF OLD AGE. Although in its content, Prevention emphasizes the health aspects of aging, it knows what everybody else knows with these come-ons: that oung (looking) equals good, old is bad (or at least not good). Which is what makes the ad such good bait. And if we're not careful, we stomach it wholesale

We old folks have a lot to think about. Are we content to be as saulted with this kind of oblique insult that tells us our wrinkles. hearing aids, memory losses, our shuffling steps and our thickened wastelines aren't natural? I don't think so. What could be more natural than growing old? Some people do it with more luck and grace than others, but let us not allow society to define us as diminished human beings because we have various diminished faculties. Sure, we want to be healthy, vital, in touch with the world. And we should strive towards those things But if those things are not to be had, for whatever reason, we ought to demand respect nonetheless. Old age, as Helen Hayes once said, isn't something we must stave off: it's something we have achieved.

And didf say "old?" That "o" word appears to be a no-no word in polite society. Just try saying something like, "Oh, it's just old age creeping in..." and you'll likely get a snappy response like "Why, you're not old!". It's supposed to make you feel good, help you deny you're mirror. My mirror says I'm seventy. And that's old, by anyone's standard.

Why are we as a society, so out-and-out detr mined to deny old age? A-var ir reason, various authorities tell us, is our terror of death. Old age and death go together like today and tomorrow, one bound to follow the other. For most of us, that thought is not easy. It is the mountain, looming over which we don't wish to climb, reluctant to leave what's behind and to face the unknown before us. Denial blurs its outlines, pushes it beyond our sight.

Old age may also mean loss of independence, that prized possession we've come to covet in our retirement years. With the help of IRAs, Social Security, Medicare and Medical insurance, most of us old folks have attained unprecedented financial independence and all that flows from it. But old age with its attendant characteristics of diminishing faculties and illnesses gradually erode that independence. We take pains not to face that loss. As an example, those of us who have served as models of sacrificial parents have great difficulty redefining that role. Heaven forbid we should have to tell our children we need them, much less have to rely on them.

Another reason we want to deny old age is the undercurrent of prejudices that surges beneath the surface and bubbles up. Notes Ralph Nader, that knight of meck-rakers, "There is pervasive prejudice in our society, based not on ability but on age." He cites examples of discrimination against the old in the most critical aspects of their lives: bousing, health, employment and means of moving around. No one wants to be victim to that.

Wants to be vicini to that.

Old people of color know how that feels. Most of us have passed through a stretch of denial at a time when it was "uncomfortable" to be lapanese. We negated our Japanese selves in tavor of our American selves so to better fit in, so to move about in society more. It was always an uneasy fraud, preventing us from planting our feet on solid ground.

Stereotypes of old folks don't help matters eigher. We are often seen as witless, sexless; miserly or self-centered. Marcia Seligson, that amusine writer for LEAR'S magazine, offers the delicious observation that once you pass a certain age threshold "people begin to speak to you as if you don't quite hear normally—their voices become unnaturally loud, their words slow and deliberate, as if you can't understand things very well or have lost English comprehension."

On the other side of the coin, old folks sometimes do create the basis for the stereotype. Like "Ma" on the TV program "Golden Girls," we take the stance that old age confers on us the privilege of being rude, hurtful or insensitive to other's needs. (She. by the way, has never registered funny to me:) More times than I can count. I've he'ard this ill-tempered remark from an oldster: "Well, now that I'm old, I can at least say what I want!" Okay. But should we be rude, crude or hurtful just because we've journeyed a lot of vears?

And some of us do behave self-centeredly. It derives largely from the notion that we have "paid our dues" and now deserve the benefits.

Examples: older citizens in/an upscale "senior" housing development in Arizona vote not to pay taxes for school since they no longer have children in school; the major 'y of the aged in California vote for Proposition 187; fearful that hordes of immigrants are raising their taxes. We want, no, we demand, our fullest complement of government entitlements, at the expense of other, more urgent, programs, Not pretty.

Here, nearing the end of our visit here on earth, we old folk are a group more advantaged than any other old group in history. There are more of us. More of us vote, thereby giving us political muscle More resources than ever exist for the old, like health care, care for the inner-self, housing and the like. And if we are among the fortunate, we have acquired some wisdom; grace; and strength over the years, enough at least to handle the trials that lie before us. Let us make the last years the best years, both for ourselves . and for our progeny as a legacy. Dare to be who we are. Dare to be he fragrance of pines at this time of year brings forth a myriad of memories as I sit here admirring our Christmas tree. The tall, beautiful pine trees were the first things I noticed about Southeast Texas. Growing up in the Rio Grande Valley, the only pine trees we saw were the ones we purchased at Christmastime.

Pine trees were both a source of beauty and hardship for my father, Jerry Tanamachi, and his family, when they first moved to Texas in 1921. I remember my father telling me that they had to initially clear the land wherethey wanted to farm. They used dynamite to rid the fields of the stumps of the pine trees. after they had worked laboriously to cut them down. The stumps that remained had to be farmed around. "It was back-breaking work to plant the seeds and drive the farm equipment around those stumps," I remember my father saying. My grandparents, Kumazo and Asao Tanamachi, brought their family to Texas in 1921 as they were not able to purchase land in California. My grandparents, like so many other Issei, had emigrated from Japan to the United States to begin a new life and to raise their children as Americans.

My grandparents also helped many families settle in Texas. They welcomed them to Texas by offering them a place to stay in their home and shared their land with others so that they could begin farming. One such family was the Isamu Taniguchis, originally from Stockton, Califor nia. This summer at the National JACL convention in Salt Lake City my sister, Debbie Galvan, and I were able to meet one of the sons, Dr. Izumi Taniguchi, of Fresno. Dr. Taniguchi said he remembered my grandparents with fond memories. His father, Isamu, designed the beautiful Japanese garden that graced my grandparent's backyard for so many years, as a gift of thanks to them. Mr. Isamu Taniguchi also designed the Japanese Gardens in Zilker Park in Austin, Texas. Mr. Taniguchi's other son, Dr. Alan Taniguchi, resides there.

On the day that my grandparents arrived in Active, involved - on many levels . .

By CHIZU IIYAMA

o you remember when the media first began to focus on a revived women's movement in the campuses and communities at the end of the 1960s? Of pictures of women burning their bras, and picketing the Miss America contests? There was a small active group of women who agitated for social change as it related to the position of women in the society.

They met in groups for consciousness raising—of examining their lives and their families. They pushed for birth control, abortion rights, end to job discrimination, and for equal rights. They took over campus buildings and developed Women's Studies in many colleges and universities.

Many had been active in the social movements of the 60s and 70s—in civil rights groups, anti-Vietnam demonstrations, etc. They deeply involved. This was the period of the Third World strikes at S.f. State and Berkeley, and was a time of awakening on the part of Sansei students to their social and political history.

There was an outpouring of works of art and literature—poetry, short stories, essays, magazines, songs, etc. Asian worken contributing to publications, including those exclusively for women. In a sense it was "consciousness raising," of students discovering their own history, stories about their families, and the incarceration of their parents in concentration camps during World War II.

And from this ferment, which included taking on community issues such as saving the International Hotel in San Francisco, of confronting the S.F. Redevelopment Agency to insure the viability of Nihonmachi, marching in Third World contingents against the war in Vietnam that the seeds for the Redress campaign developed. Sansei leadership was crucial in pushing and winning the "Coram Nobis" cases in which the government vacated the judgment against Fred Korematsu, Min Yasui, and Gordon Hirabayashi for their challenge of restrictions and internment of Japanese Americans during WW II. And women were an integral part of these movements.

But what about mainstream women's groups? They have become more moderate in their activities, although they retain many of the same objectives—pro choice, equality in all phases of their lives, concern for families, health issues,

Are there any groups of Japanese American women active on women's issues today? What are the primary concerns of Nikkei women? In terms of what is considered a

In terms of what is considered a Japanese American women's group, I can point to two in the Japanese American Citizens League.

The Northern California Western Nevada Pacific District Council has had an active Womens Concerns Committee since 1984. Our first venture was a humorous but realistic skit about a typical JACL meeting, poking fun at some male dominated assumptions, and the role of women. There are real changes today: In looking at the rosters of present presidents and officers, including the national board, there is a good egalitarian mix. And in 1992 we actually elected the first woman national president Lillian Kimura.

Our Committee has sponsored resolutions at national conventions which have passed on pro-choice, family leave, and health care; in the last convention we supported same sex marriages and domestic partners legislation. We help women who have faced discrimination or sexual harrassment; we sponsor workshops and social activities, and write articles. Mei Nakano is a columnist for the Pacific Citizen. We work together so well - Nisei, Sansei, and now women from Japan. And in true Nikkei fashion, we pot luck our meetings.

The local Florin chapter also has a very active women's group.

Ms. Eileen Namba Otsuji spoke

Ms. Eileen Namba Otsuji spoke with enthusiasm about the workshop they recently held on "Preserving the Family," in which they presented panels including Japanese American Gay and Lesbian Issues. Nikkei Identity, and Speaking Out.

Nisei women have sometimesbeen criticized for lack of activism —but there are many ways in which one contributes to the well being of their communities and nation. They have been the cement that fies families together. They have taken care of their Issei parents, their aging spouses, and their young grandchil-

They have been very involved in programs for their children—in P.T.A.'s, developing Japanese schools, leading Girl Scouts and Cub Scout troops, etc. Today in their retirement they volunteer in many ways — in the schools, libraries, museums, Japanese American agencies, etc. Tikey help cook, bring hot meals to homebound people, teach classes, land sponsor health fairs. ences during World War II. Women like Sox Kitashima continue fighting for people denied redress, but she also volunteers daily at Kimochi Kai "peeling potatoes and cleaning vegetables." She's been helping for over twelve years. Or Mollie Fujioka, well know her work with JACL and LEC for years, worked most recently with the Women's Political Caucus. Mei Nakano, writer and author of "Japanese American Women: Three Generations" was one of the organizers of the JACL Womens Concerns and more recently the Sonoma County Human Relations Commission. And there's Kiku Funabiki who has led à class on "Total Fitness" at her church for fourteen years in addition to supporting feminist causes. But I could go on and on. Then our unsung heroines—the numerous women church leaders and workers who volunteer time not only for strictly church functions, but also are part of a wonderful network with families. Nisei women are generally not a part of the

had been frustrated by the male attitudes they encountered.

Were there any Japanese American women involved?

I spoke to my daughter Patti who was one of the leaders in the Free Speech Movement, and had been arrested and sent to jail in 1966. She reported there may have been several other Sansei women protestors; but when a professor writing a book about Japanese Americans, interviewed some Nikkei stydents at Berkeley at that time, he reported that they "disowned the radicals."

However, in the seventies when the issue of Asian, Black and Chicano studies were on the forefront of the colleges, many Japanese American men and women were etc. They have become a vital force in the political life of this country. There are now many publications about women, herstory, studies, etc. Are there Japanese, American women active in these movements?

I was invited in 1987 to Washington D.C. for a conference sponsored by N.O.W. (one of the largest organizations of women in our country) for women of color. Their leadership was very much aware of the lack of minority women in their organization. I spoke on a panel on "Racial Minorities and Empowerment," I noted that although many Afro American women responded to the conference, there were only a handful of Asians. And this is probably true today.

MOVEMENT

mainstream organizations, but focus on their families and communities

"What are the primary problems of Nisei Japanese American women?"! asked some women. Reflecting the diversity in our community. I received different answers. Most spoke of the problems due to aging of family and health. Nisei women are concerned about long term care. They are very reluctant to become a "burden on their Sansei children, and some are not averse to nursing homes, as compared to the Issei. probed, "Did they favor the Single Payer plan which included long term care in the California Initiative?" and most replied that no one talked about it, although speakers were presented at some of the community centers.

Most felt that Nisei women were brought up with a strong emphasis on family, including an extended family. Many did not have the opportunities nor the inclination for careers. It's an interesting commentary that at a recent Sansei Legacy group skit, a Nisei family conversation was primarily centered on what family members were doing. As one Nisei woman put it, "We sounded so dull '

Others felt Nisei women were reluctant to speak out, but my experience in a Nisei discussion group set up as part of a senior citizen program in Berkeley is that the women are very vocal. We talk about anything - including politics and sex. Perhaps as we get to know one another, we can truly speak our minds. And as we get older, we don't have to "enryo" as much.

Sansei women are very interesting Diverse, many into careers Nisei women never imagined, they experience the common problems of other women in our society divorce, single parenthood, working mothers. But they also face subtle racism and sexism as Japanese Americans

I found many Sansei women in organizations with an Asian American focus — also primarily in the social service field. So they are active in the newly formed Asians and Pacific Islanders for Reproductive Health in Oakland. Karen Chin pointed out that Asian women are invisible so their needs are not met. This agency is building advocacy regarding health needs, generational problems, sexual orientation, and AIDs prevention: Sansei staff and volunteers are involved; many of their concerns revolve around immigrant women.

I attended the third Asian and Pacific American Women's Retreat organized by ASPIRE, organized to build community and sisterhood for college women on and off campus.

I really felt my age. Everyone was in their teens or early 20's, except for the artists who were their speakers. There were about 25 women-Eilipino, Japanese, Chinese and

Japanese American Women

Three Generations, 1880 to 1990 by Mei Nakano

Co-published by the National Japanese American Historical Society and Mina Press, Japanese American Women, Three Generations, 1880 to 1990 is now in its third printing and one of our most popular books.

Mei Nakano's work is compelling history told from the inside. She not only describes each generation of Japanese American women by combining personal narratives with historical data, but shows the deep relationship between generations and provides an analysis of how each generation has impacted the next. - author, poet, Mitsuye Yamada

Korean Americans. They spoke very movingly about their quest for careers and relationships.

Betty Kano, well known artist talked about her thirty years of activism, from the campus to civil rights, to the peace movement to picketing for freedom for South Africa and against American policy towards Cuba. This vibrant, working artist tied in her creative activities with her politics and noted the unique cultural background of Asian women. She felt that we could learn a good deal from the experiences and the work of Afro American women.

In 1989 Betty and Flo Wong founded the Asian American Women Artists Association to improve the visibility of Asian American women in professional arts gatherings and institutions.

The other speakers Sharon LumHo and Indigo Som gave excellent talks on the problems of Asian American women artists as they tried to move into the mainstream art world. Peggy Saika formerly with the Asian Law Caucús is now Executive Director of the Asian Pacific Environmental Network. This agency focuses on the Asian American perspective to environmental policies and decision making. They were organized in 1993 and are concerned about pollution, safe working conditions and community environmental problems.

for the actual costs of processing the above forms.

The bill prohibits a person form filing a new Declaration of Domestic Partnership until at least six months after the date that a Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership has been filed with the Secretary of State (unless the previous domestic partnersh ended as the result of the death of one of the partners).

The bill requires health facilities to allow a patient's domestic partners, the children of the patient's domestic partner, and the domestic partner of a patient, the children of the patient's domestic partner, and the domestic partner of the patient's parent or child to visit with the patient.

The bill adds references to domestic partners to Probate Code with provisions regarding Conservatorship and Statutory Wills (e.g., Probate Code sections providing who shall receive notice of proceedings; who may qualify as, or nominate, a conservator; whose living expenses may be paid from the estate of a conservatee: and who may be named as a beneficiary in a statutory will.)

This bill is double-joined with AB 3686 Included among the many groups supporting the bill are senior citizen, labor, religious, women's, health, government, cities and county, gay and lesbiasn, business, media and other groups. Arguments in Support: According to the author's office, by allowing domestic partners to visit each other in the hospital. and make decisions for each other when incapacitated, this bill will give all families the right to care for each other in times of crises and need. By encouraging mutual responsibility between unmarried partners, the bill will promote strong, lasting relationships.

The California Medical Association (CMA) supports those provisions of the bill that establish rights for, non-marital partners in the conservatorship process and permit hospital visitation. CMA states that "Recognizing the changing nature of interpersonal relationships, many hospitals have already changed their visitation policies and no longer restrict visitors to 'immediate family only.' It is the position of CMA that all health care facilities should remove such restrictions. There is no acceptable justification that exists for refusing á sick or dying individual the emotional comfort of visits from a non-spousal states that while the Council is committed * to the sanctity of marriage and the biblically-rooted values of monogamy, fidelity, life-long commitment and mutuality implicit in tionship, "There are a variety of relationships in contemporary society which exhibit these biblically rooted values. For persons in those relationships, partner or companion."

The California

Council of Churches

marriage in the legal sense is not a viable option because of choice or circumstances

Two senior citizens. for example, who are in a committed relationship often choose not to get married for financial reasons (because of a loss in social security income

'Same-sex counles who are, in the best sense of the work 'married' legally cannot obtain a marriage license.

"We believe that all persons who are in committed relationships should receive the state's support for basic acts of caregiving: hospital visitation rights, conservatorship, and the sharing of property. AB 2810 offers these protections and as such, enhances the ability of two persons to care for one another The California Commission on Aging states that, "This bill will have a positive impact on the lives of many senior citizens in California who find themselves in a position of having to live together without entering into a formal legal arrangement."

Arguments in Oppostion: The Traditional Values Coalition argues that this bill lays the foundation for the overturn of the marriage codes in all 50 states. The coalition argues that this bill changes the "public policy" of California from monogamous, hetersexual marriage between one man and one women to a recognition and governmental legitimacy of same-sex relationships and transitional relationshins !

The Committe on Moral Concerns believes the recognition of domestic partnerships devalues true family commitment and "lends an air of legitimacy to homosexuality

Concerned Women for America opposes this bill because it. opposes homosexual 'marriages" under any circumstances

MOVEMENT (Continued from A44)

Peggy felt that on a personal level. Sansei women faced problems of child care and of balancing family and career demands. In working with Asian Americans she finds some of the women feel that Japanese Americans tend to occupy more of the decision making positions. She is aware of cultural values she received growing up in a Japanese American family and is sorting out positive aspects she wishes to pass on to her children.

One of the best known Sansei women in the political field is Sandy Mori, who helped to organize ... Kimochi Kai in 1971 and has been on the Board for many years. She was the first Asian American woman to be appointed to a Board position, and served as President of the Women's Commission. She is currently the Executive Secretary for the San Francisco Health Commission. She felt that the major problem facing Japanese American women 'was that of changing roles," She pointed out that the white perspective in women's movements was different from the Japanese American or Asian American's who were "much more into family and intergenerational roles.

Current chair of the S.F. Status on Women Commission is Caryl Ito. A former-social worker, she is in business in sales and marketing of toys. She serves as vice-president of ICCC (Japanese Cultural and Community Center) in S.F. She felt that Sansei/Yonsei women are "seeking Dec 1994 equality and empowerment."

My daughter Patti who is now in Texas looked at the polarization which is occuring in our country. She pointed to the passage of Proposition 187 in California scapegoating immigrants for problems people-face. She talked about "Japan bashing": She was recently at Decatur, Illinois, where there are three strikes taking place which affects over 10% of the workers. against Caterpillar, Bridgestone, and Paper Works. She found signs "Dec. 7, 1941-Japs Bomb Pearl Harbor. 1994—Japs Bomb Workers. (Bridgestone Tires is a Japanese company). They were surprised when she joined them on the picket line and commented that racism was not the way to win their strike. The other companies were British and American owned. She felt the workers were responsive to her concerns and that "people do change in the context of their struggles.

It was very difficult for Jean Ishibashi to bring a suit against the very respected American Friends Service Committee on charges of sexual harassment and unfair termination. Her case is now on appeal. Besides teaching classes at U.C Berkeley and studying for her Ph.D. Jean is active in the Afro-Asian Roundtable in S.F. Nihonmachi. She helped to organize this group to promote dialogue between people and to work together on common problems. She feels that she went through an inner struggle to understand and transcend cultural expectations of women's roles. She felt that Nikkei women need to reach out and work with other minorities.

And there are so many other active Sansei and Yonsei women and groups. People like Jenny Hotta with her program on Asian Americans on KPFA; Eisa Hirai of U.C. Berkeley on her oral histories: Ros Tonai at the NJAHS working to preserve the history of Japanese Americans: Julia Estrella and the Pacific Asian Center with its emphasis on small groups to examine and free people from internalized racism and sexism, and Mayumi Oda with her Women's Call for a Plutonium Free Future. They spoke on the importance of developing solidarity with other minorities and to take positions on national and international issues.

There is an exciting program planned for 1995 in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Two very capable women, Jenny Morozumi and Geri Handa of Friends of Hibakusha, are co-chairing an ambitious set of activities including an Art and History exhibit at the Presidio under the sponsorship of the NIAHS. forums, children's art, dramatic presentations, movies under NAATA, a PEACE curriculum for schools, a video on the Atomic Bomb Survivors, a PEACE wall, etc. They are coordinating activities not only of Japanese American groups in the Bay Area, but also stimulating libraries, schools, colleges, and other organizations to sponsor programs.

And on Nov. 15th Lattended a preparatory conference for the UN Fourth World Conference on Women to be held in Beijing from Aug. 30 - Sept. 9, 1995. It was pouring rain, but hundreds of women gathered in Oakland. I attended sessions for Women of women gathered in Oakland. I attended sessions for Women of Color. We were unofficial/delegates, but we had a chance to add on to the proposed statement to be presented by the official delegates (appointed by our government). What a surprise to hear such sharp and incisive comments about the

What a surprise to hear such sharp and incisive comments about the lack of specifics in the official documents (which will be amended). A lot of emotion also, as women wondered how our country could claim leadership in democratic rights after the immigrant bashing of our last elections. Other women wept as they recounted stories of their children kidnaped by their husbands and taken to foreign countries.

I asked that environmental concerns, which will be the focus of the Beijing conterence include stopping the testing and production of nuclear weapons, and examining the dangers posed by nuclear plants and wastes. There were many Afro American and Latino women speaking out. There were only a handful of Asian American women. But some of us have met and are going to Beijing. Perhaps an Asian American women's delegation.

As Janice Mirikitani wrote so dramatically

"WATCH OUT: The women are moving; the women are marching, we are changing, we are choosing, we are leading, we are moving."

Kathy Inoshita always there to help

Kathy Inoshita was born in Los Angeles, California in 1940. She moved to Bumble Bee, Ariz., with her parents and siblings during the World War Il Evacuation. During the war, her family moved again; this time to the Phoenix and Glendale areas.

As a member of the Arizona Chapter, she is perhaps its best example of one who devotes her life to community service.

She has been married 32 years to Minoru Inoshita and has a daughter Sandra. Except for a few years spent in Oklahoma and New Hampshire, her involvement in the local community has spanned almost forty years.

She has been a longtime member of the Arizona Buddhist Temple and the JACL. As a young adult, she was active in the Sr. YBA, the co-founder of

She has served as secretary and treasurer on the chapter Board of Directors, and at one time wrote and published the chapter newsletter. For the last twelve years, she has served on the chapter scholarship committee. Kathy has handled notification to all of the Arizona high schools of the chapter's Sara Hutchings Clardy scholarship awards She also handles all of the applications for the National IACL scholarship and the Anytown student applications. Kathy rounds up a crew and works herself in folding, labeling and sorting of the monthly chapter newsletter. Round-Up. All of this means extra hours by a willing and dedicated lady, Mrs. Kathy Inoshita.

ROOTS

Southeast Texas my uncle, Willie Tanamachi, was born - on March 1, 1921, in Beaumont, Texas. He was the first native born Texan in our family. Our family has been here for five generations now as one of my nieces, Lorie Wavrusa, prepares to have her third child this month. We are all-proud Texans and we are proud of our rich heritage. During World War II, four of my uncles. Willie, Saburo, Goro, and Walter, served in the U.S. Army. My father, who was taking the role of the head of family, stayed home to run the family farm and help take care of his elderly parents and five young er sisters, Rena, Yuriko, Masako. Mariko, and Hiroko.

Saburo and Goro were members of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, which helped in the effort to rescue fellow Texans, the Lost Battlion of 36th "Texas" Infantry Division. Saburo made the ultimate sacrifice in the rugged Vosges Mountains during the rescue effort and was one of the first two Japanese Americans to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery. His best friend, George Joe Sakato of Denver, Colorado, returned to Europe this year for the 50th anniversary of the rescue. While there, he returned to the exact site where my uncle was killed in action. Joe laid a bouquet of flowers there in memory of my uncle. Viewing the pictures of the 50th anniversary that Joe and his wife Bess shared with me brought tears of joy and pride.

This August my sisters, Diana Parr and Debbie Galvan, and I accompanied my mother, Kikuko Nakao Tanamachi, and her sister, Ikuko Nakao Kitayama, to view the Terminal Island Exhibit at the Japanese American National Museum in Little Tokyo. Terminal Island was pre-war home to my mother and family. My mother and aunt met many of their childhood friends and reminisced about the varied paths their lives had taken since leaving Terminal Island, at the outset of the war. These friends had much to share as they had been one of the first groups to be evacuated to the Santa Anita Assembly Center, then to the relocation camp in Rohwer, Arkansas. My mother's family included my grandmother, Chika Nakao, Uncles Taira and Sadao, and my mother and aunt. Taira joined the U.S. Army and served with the occupation forces in Japan. Sadao died in camp

After the war ended, my grandmother and my aunt came to live with us in Texas. My grandmother Nakao had graduated from the Wakayama Teacher's College and had taught in Japan for 10 years before immigrating to the United States with my grandfather. She was the person who taught me how to speak Japanese and inspired me to become a teacher. I am proud to have followed in her footsteps and I thoroughly enjoy the teaching profession. Working with young children is very rewarding and challenging. Children, of course, are the basis of our future and it is a privilege to be able to have an active part in the shaping of their lives.

I teach a gifted and talented third grade class at an elementary school in the Beaumont Independent School District. One of the missions of our district is "to teach our children to respect all cultures." As a member of our campus Multicultural Committee, I take this mission to heart. While teaching my students to take pride in their heritage and to stand up for their rights, I was moved to try to change the names of Jap Road and Jap Lane, two streets here in Southeast Texas. I don't believe that the future generations of Texans should have to come upon road signs bearing this offensive word, nor have to see advertisements on billboards or in newspapers or magazines, nor have to hear commercial advertisements over the airwaves or on television, as we presently have to, in which this term "lap" is used. What kind of message does that give our

The message at Christmas time is that all men are created equal and we are "to do unto others as we would have them do unto us". The fragrance of pines reminds me of this true meaning of the holiday season.

National Board oks cost-cutting plan to answer huge deficit

5 staff positions at headquarters to be consolidated into 3; PC loses 1 1/2 positions, to publish twice monthly

In a greeting, heart-rending 15hour board meeting on Saturday, Dec. 3, 1994, the National Board accepted the National JACL Budget Analysis Committee Report and adopted almost all of its major provisions and recommendations.

Faced with a projected 1995 budget deficit of some $280,000, if no budget reduction measures are taken, the board approved the following cost-cutting measures:

The board did not elect to utilize furloughs, across-the-board salary cuts and similar measures, because it was felt these steps would not have addressed the underlying long-term budget problems that had been building for the past few years.

the past few years.
Why did the board take these drastic steps? The year 1993 ended vith a budget deficit of expanses over income of $75,000 and this safelilled with a projected 1994 deficit of $187,000 (which might be more today.) The reserve fund that stood at $397,932 at the end of 1992 will be depleted except for monies earmarked for the renoution of the headquarters building to meet building codes. Roughly $270,000 was used from this fund to cover deficits in 1993 and 1994. These cost over-runs occurred despite a total revenue increase from Legacy Fund distributions to National JACL from 1991 through 1994 of $347,613. $50,629 in 1991, $782,030 in 1992, $107,781 in 1993, and a projected

$111,000 in 1994

With membership revenues fairly "flat" over the last five years and a burgeoning projected 1995 deficit of $280,000 and no reserves, JACL is now in an extremely precarious financial position Today, 96% of the membership

Today, 96% of the membership revenues are taken up by personnel and rehated costs, up 22% from 1990. These costs take up some 60% of total revenue. Much of the remaining 40% is made up of fixed costs such as insurance, building maintenance, utilities and contract services that cannot be cut and still others such as postage and printing and copying costs will increase ($5,000). It does not require a mathematical wizard to figure out where the major cuts had to be made.

When the National Council in August refused to grant a dues increase, the message to those of us on the National Board was clear. Live within your means. We must do that.

Finally, with staff and revenue reductions, the membership must recognize that there will be less service and fewer programs. Every effort will be made to balance the budget but our members cannot expect more with less, in terms of staff and program monies. The cost of operations steadily increases from inflation alone and obviously we cannot continue to provide the same services and programs under these conditions. We all know that our own monies buy less today than five years ago. It is no different with organizational operations.

The board decisions of Dec. 3 and were only the first steps and it is only prudent and responsible that we get our 'financial house' in order first before we ask for membership and corporate support. Stop gap measures at this point will not get the job done. As we stated previously, the credibility and viability of JACL as a take and until we address our budget and deficit wees promptly and adequately in the long term, we do not deserve support from either sector.

JACL objects to ban on ethnic caucuses

The Japanese American Citizens League (JACL), Organization of Chinese Americans (OCA) and the Asian Pacific American Labor Alliance/AFI-CIO (APALA) recently denounced the decision by the Republican Conference of the U.S. House of Representatives to ban caucuses such as the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, the Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus, the Congressional Black Caucus and the Congressional Hispanic Caucus in the upcoming session of Congress.

The Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus was organized in May of 1994 and had planned to hire a staff dedicated to analyzing Asian Pacific American legislative issues this year. The Republican move blocks their ability to set up an office to coordinate efforts and focus on these issues. Karen Narasaki, then-

JACL Washington representative, said, "The elimination of these important caucuses will not save Cengress money since Caucus members have to fund raucus staff out of their existing budgets. It is a cynical move to blunt the ability of members of Congress to represent the interests of minority communities."

We believe that the Republican attack on the caucuses is part of a larger plan to marginalize women and people of color," said Matthew Finucane, director, APALA. "As with immigrant-bashing, it is a stratety that will harm the GOP in the long run, even if they receive some shortterm political gin."

Daphne Kwok, executive director, OCA, said, The Republican action has signaled to those constituent groups who have had caucuses eliminated that their participation and voice in Congress is unwanted, This is outrageous when the U.S. desupposedly running under democratic principles.

PC goes twice monthly

Pacific Citizen will officially publish twice monthly. Issues will be published the first and third weeks of each month.

our state of Colorado there is a large and active chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), an activist national organization dedicated to defending civil rights. In that sense, it is not unlike JACL, although ACLU's members are a cross-section of Americans. Because they share many common concerns, ACLU and JACL have worked closely together on various occasions.

Some of the positions ACLU takes are not popular. For example, ACLU has defended the right of people to burn the American can flag in public as an expre test. At issue in this case is freedom-of speech. ACLU takes the position that the right to protest should be unrestricted even though it may take a form offensive to many. Not a few members have had problems with that argument.

On another occasion ACLU, while expressing abhorrence of fascism, defended the right of a neo-Nazi organization to parade through a predominantly Jewish American community

More recently, ACLU/condemned in strong terms the killing of two pro-choice activists by an anti-abortion activist. But when the suspect was tried, found guilty and sentenced to execution, ACLU proested again because it opposes capital pun-

Ai-no-ko: (Ai yai yai)

ing "half, part, portion, mixed blood, person of mixed blood." Thus "hapa haole" refers to

REFERRING TO "AI-NO-KO," a couple of readers suggested that the term had a derogatory twist to it. I never regarded it to be a demeaning term; bear in mind that without checking to see how the terms was written in nihongo, I just (lazily) surmised that perhaps it consisted of a (love) no (by/of) ko (child) or simply "love with such a romantic translation on my part, it could hardly be demeaning. Well, as mentioned previously, "ai-no-ko" is comprised of kahji characters of and meaning: au (suitable, fit) and ko (child). One reader wrote that children of mixed blood did not like the term ai-no-ko, presumably because of negative connotations in Japan's society. In Japan conformity is one of the keys of getting along, whether it be speech, manners, attire, ethnic base. Thus, if a person is part-Japanese and partsomething else, under the conformity concept, there is a fracture, a straying so to speak, in and from preserving the status

A FEW YEARS ago, I came across the term "ho-jin" in the Yomiuri Shimbun. Although from the context in which the term appeared, it was obvious that the reference appeared, it was obvious that the reterence was to "infon-jin's," I sensed that ho_jin carried with its facet of—for lack of a better explanation—what I could call "ethnic nationalism." Thus, for example, Kenkyusha's "New Japanese-English Dictionary," 4th ed., page 472, sets forth—in Annan—"bur-n-ji-ruc' (Brazil) "no hojin' (Japanese nationalism Reval') by never seen a similar label. als in Brazil). I've never seen a similar label for Americans of Japanese ancestry. But, then, I don't subscribe to or read a Japanes newspaper. I hardly get through our metro politan area daily news. If I were to try to pointan area daily news. If I were to try to read a Japanese-publication, I'd have to be at it for weeks. And that's for one issue of the newspaper. And then if I ever finished. I will have forgotten what the first part

One of the awards is named for Larry Tajiri, the brilliant wartime editor of Pa-cific Citizen and JACL stalwart, who died

This award was presented at a banquet a few weeks ago to Gene Amole, a newspaper columnist, in recognition of his vigorous advocacy of the causes so dear to Tajiri. Several other civil rights advocates, including Daniel Schorr, the veteran TV reporter and radio commentator, were cited at the same time.

Tajiri from a platform far broader than anything the Nikkei community can pro-

BUT GETTING BACK to ai-no-ko. One reader introduced me to the term "kon-ketsu." And, of course, I pulled out the jiten. Literally, the term consists of two kanji's majiru (mix) and chi (blood), defined as "mixed blood (breed); racîal mixture; half-caste, half-breed." Although it may be that ai-no-ko's in Japan prefer kon-ketsu over ai-no-ko, I think it better to diplomatically check the impact of that (new) phrase Until then I'd counsel sticking with "ai-noko," risky as it may be ko, risky as it may be.

Anyway, our grandchildren are all "aino-ko's," and at least in this (unbiased) grandparent's eyes, they're great. I don't know what the chemistry is, but I have yet to see an ai-no-ko who was not attractive.

After leaving the bench, Marutani resumed practicing law in Philadelphia. He writes regularly for the Pacific Citizen.

Chicago holds anniversary

"Reflections of the Past... A Vision for the Future," an address by one of the highest ranking Asian American women in state government, and a nostalgic progr music and dancing highlighte 50th anniversary inaugural din-ner of the Chicago Chapter, JACL, Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Omni Orringson Hotel, Evanston. Karen Suzuki-Okabe, executive director, Department of Human Resource Management of the state of Utah, is the featured speaker, with entertainment by Patrick Holland and singer Paul Motondo

A native Chicagoan, Suzuki Okabe noted that her youthful in volvement in JACL provided valu-able experience for her career in public service and in dealing with issues of discrimination. As a cabi-net appointee of Utah Gov. Michael Leavitt, Suzuki-Okabe is respon-sible for 18,000 state employees and a payroll of $2.2 billion. She is director, Anti-Discrimination/La bor Divisions, Industrial Commis-sion of Utah; an instructor in graduate studies in public management at Brigham Young Uni-versity, and is adjunct assistant professor of political science at the University of Utah. She stated, "The JACL has been the cornerstone of advocacy for the Japanese American community. Through the years, the Chicago Chapter has been fortunate in its ability to attract strong leadership and to have a membership willing to provide support for a program of strong legislative ini-tiatives." Founded in 1929, the JACL is the oldest ard largest Asian American civil rights orga-nization in the United States, with over 25,000 members in 114 chap-ters throughout the country.

ride, ACLU also was honoring the memory of a Nisei who was one of the heroes of the Nikkei and JACL struggle for civil rights. It should have been an occasion for us to celebrate. Yet my wife and I saw only two Asian American faces among those in attendance and they did not belong to JACLers.

Does that answer the question bout how far JACL and the Nikkei have drifted from the issues and associations that once unified, energized and motivated the organization?
I'm afraid it does

In this time of Holiday Cheer

e appeal for your help in Our Search for All the Names of World War II Japanese American military personnel that served in the Pacific and European Theaters of Operation between December 7, 1941, and September 2, 1945. This includes all services and both genders.

Contact the 400th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation to have their names included on the Japanese American World War II Veterans Monument.

The 100th/442nd/MIS World War II Memorial Foundation wishes to extend its best Holiday Cheer and to thank all the donors for their continued support.

On October 5, 1994, the city council of the City of Los Angeles passed a resolution: "that a monument as a memorial to the participation of Japanese American soldiers in World War II shall be provided adequate space at the City's First Street North property in the vicinity of the Japanese American National Museum (JANM) and Museum of Contemporary Arts (MOCA)."

The City of Los Angeles, in their support of the Japanese American Community in developing the Little Tokyo district, gave this land to our Foundation following their deferment to develop the 7.9 acre site.

The Foundation Board of Directors has accepted this offer and is firmly resolved to build the monument.

We continue to appeal for your help in our search for all the names of Japanese American World War II military personnel that served in the European and Pacific Theaters of Operation between the date of Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 2, 1945.

Send contribution to:

A54—Pacific Citizen Holiday Issue, December, 1994

A time for giving.

In lieu of sending of Holiday Season cards, these JACL members and Pacific Citizen readers are participating in the Holiday Issue Project by sending their greetings to friends in JACL through this special section. The amount of the cost involved in the mailing out of cards is contributed to this JACL/PC project which then turns over this amount as a contribution (less $20 for a Unit-Space on this page) to the IACL Abe & Esther Hagiwara Student Aid Fund or some other JACL/PC fund to be designated by the contributor... If you wish to join them here next year, let us know. We'll remind you by the first of November. -Pacific Citizen

HOST OF THE 1996 JACL NATIONAL CONVENTION

Mt. Olympus sends its final Presidential Classroom recipient to Washington, D.C.

SALT LAKE CITY-Both of his older brothers were Eagle Scouts. There was pressure for Steve Tokita to earn his Eagle and he did-barely making it before the deadline of his 18th birthday. Both of his older brothers were Presidential Classroom recipients, sponsored by the Mt. Olympus Chapter, JACL. Rob Tokita was an attendee in 1981, and Todd in 1990 Even his sisterin-law, Tami Mitsunaga Tokita (now married te Rob), attended in 1985.

Since Steve is the "caboose" of his family, it was somewhat fitting that he received the last PCYA (Presidential Classroom for Young Americans) award given by the Mt. Olympus Chapter, which has been presenting this award to its outstanding seniors or juniors on the basis of ment, extracurricular activities, letters of recommendation and an essay.

Steve was a senior class president of the largest June, 1994, graduating class in the state of Utah.

In the 20-year period starting in 1974, Mt. Olympus has sent one and occasionally two students to the PCYA in Washington, D.C. It was the biggest single item in the chapter budget, and so it was decided in 1993 to terminate participation in the program and expand other programs such as scholarships.

Steve Tokita entered the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah, on Oct. 26, to begin a two-month intensive program of study to prepare him for a 22month mission to Japan for the Mormon Church.

Recounting the experience that I would highly recommend to anyone who has the opportunity. From the moment I tepped off the irplane at Washington National Airport, my adventure in Washington, D.C. had begun .

By STEVEN TOKITA

We had dinner with members of our caucus and instantly we all became good friends. I had about 30 people in my immediate group, originating from places such as Puerto Rico to ssia, and from all over the United States. (Some 340 high school juniors and seniors from 40 states, Canada, El Salvador, Japan, Turkey, Russia, Ukraine, the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico at tended the event.)

The days were packed with tours of many of the famous sights including the Jefferson, Lincoln and the Vietnam War memorials. We also foured the Supreme Court, Holocaust Museum, Library of Congress, Capitol Building, House and Senate chambers. We saw the wreath-laying ceremonyet Arlington Nationa Cemetery — that was particularly moving. We had 12 seminars with some very prominent and powerful figures in Washington. To name a few, we heard from Secretary Hazel O'Leary, U.S. Secretary of Energy; Austin Kiplinger of the Kiplinger of National Security Agency and chief of the National Security Agency and chief of the National Security Agency and chief of the Central Security Service.

Central Security Service.

Every evening we would have a crossfire with other people to debate current events. It was very interesting to see opposing points of view from people who live in different environments. One big issue was gun control, and I learned of the reality for people Who literally live in fear for their lives every time they step out of their homes. We also debated the role of Congress and about environmental issues.

... I enjoyed every moment I was there and my understanding and appreciation of our governmental system grew tremendously as I learned first-hand how it works . . . I thank the chapter for sending me

San Mateo Runs Workshop for Teachers

By Greg Marutani

On October 26th, Mary lo Kubota, along with Lisa Suyemoto and Karen Arimoto-Peterson, led the Teacher Workshop sponsored by the San Mateo Chapter for teachers in the San Mateo-Foster City School District

Committed to the IACL education program, the Chapter presented a free copy of the JACL Curriculum Guide to each of the teachers attending the workshop. Additional handouts were prepared by the workshop leaders. They included excernts from other sources, lesson plans, and an additional resource list consisting of material from the local district resource library. The handouts were all three-hole punched so the participants could slip them into the appropriate sections of the Curriculum Guide binder and were duplicated on colored paper for easy reference

One of the most valuable supplements was the one Teaching the Japanese Amerian Experience and the Internment which listed ways that teaching the Japanese American experience and internment could be introduced at each grade level as described in the "History-Social Science Framework for California Public Schools." The supplement also included the Houghton Mifflin Social Studies series and pointed out the areas which could also be used to introduce the Japanese American experience.

Excerpts from the videotapés "A Personal Matter', "A Family Gathering", and "Days of Waiting" were shown as well as the locally produced videotape "Salt and Chrysanthemum", which is the first of a trilogy about the Japanese Americans in San Mateo County. The first segment focuses on the Issei pioneers as laborers in the salt flats of San Francisco Bay and as flower growers in the

San Diego Chapter

An evening of Otsuki-mi

By SUSAN LEONARD

On September 18, San Diego's JACL celebrated a full moon with koto music and haiku poetry. For some, it was bringing back childhood memories of this famous bedtime tale of seeing a rabbit in a full moon pounding mochi (signs of a good harvest) and for others it was an introduction. At the tropical Bali Hai restaurant in Shelter Island, along with warm weather and a radiant full moon. Otsuki-mi was celebrated with an energetic and curious audience. Guests were informed to expect a delicious dinner, live performances of eloquent koto music and various selections of haiku poetry to be read. But that was not all. We left room for a surprise. What could an Otsuki-mi evening be without possibly seeing a rabbit?

To begin the festivities, koto sensei Mrs. Emiko Tayama and her student Yuki Easter delighted the crowd with a traditional koto performance. Followed by haiku poetry read by Haruo Tayama, Mitsuo

Tomita, Linda Donlon, Susan Leonard, Dave Nuffer, Margaret Iwanaga Penrose, Kathryn Nakamura and Leland Saito. The haiku poems were those of comedy, love, and history. One brave person chose to write an original poem, inspiring many people to put their pen to paper and create their own haiku to read in the future.

Donations from Karen Tani and Grossmont Bank provided gifts for a raffle. To everyone's surprise, MC Robert Ito was not the one to pull the tickets for the prizes. Out from the shadows of the moon, came a rabbit! With the help of Robert's two sons, little Bobby guided big brother Derek around as the Otsukimi rabbit that everyone tries to catch a glimpse of in the full moon. With Derek's furry paw to pick the winners, we raffled a sake & bowl set and a savings bond

Serving vanilla, green tea and strawberry ice cream mochi for dessert brought an end to a fun-filled evening. Already talk has begun to plan where next year's

Otsukimi Evening will be held. Keep your ears open for the time and place for the nextone. Now that you know what took place and what you may have missed, don't miss your chance next year to join us in this celebration of the full moon. For all the support and great ideas many thanks goes to: Susie Reynolds at the Washu Gallery for the Otsuki-mi logo. Kotaro Nakamura for the Kanji design and Tom Yasuda for the T-shirt production.

San Diego Chapter

n evening of Otsuki-mi

By SUSAN LEONARD

On September 18, San Diego's JACL celebrated a full moon with koto music and haiku poetry. For some, it was bringing back childhood memories of this famous bedtime tale of seeing a rabbit in a full moon pounding mochi (signs of a good harvest) and for others it was an introduction. At the tropical Bali Hai restaurant in Shelter Island, along with warm weather and a radiant full moon, Otsuki-mi was celebrated with an energetic and curious audience. Guests were informed to expect a delicious dinner, live performances of eloquent koto music and various selections of haiku poetry to be read. But that was not all. We left room for a surprise. What could an Otsuki-mi evening be without possibly seeing a rabbit?

To begin the festivities, koto sensei Mrs. Emiko Tayama and her student Yuki Easter delighted the crowd with a traditional koto performance. Followed by haiku poetry read by Haruo Tayama, Mitsuo

Tomita, Linda Donlon Susan Leonard, Dave Nuffer, Margaret Iwanaga Penrose, Kathryn Nakamura and Leland Saito. The haiku poems were those of comedy, love, and history. One brave person chose to write an original poem, inspiring many people to put their pen to paper and create their own haiku to read in the future.

Donations from Karen Tani and Grossmont Bank provided gifts for a raffle. To everyone's surprise, MC Robert Ito was not the one to pull the tickets for the prizes. Out from the shadows of the moon, came a rabbit! With the help of Robert's two sons, little Bobby guided big brother Derek around as the Otsukimi rabbit that everyone tries to catch a glimpse of in the full moon. With Derek's furry paw to pick the winners, we raffled a sake & bowl set and a savings bond.

Serving vanilla, green tea and strawberry ice cream mochi for dessert.brought an end to a fun-filled evening. Already talk has begun to plan where next year's Otsukimi Evening will be held. Keep your ears open for the time and place for the next one. Now that you know what took place and what you may have missed, don't miss your chance next year to join us in this celebration of the full moon. For all the support and great ideas many thanks goes to: Susie Reynolds at the Washu Gallery for the Otsuki-mi logo, Kotaro Nakamura for the Kanji design and Tom Yasuda for the T-shirt production.

Without Any Accent

by Perry Tsuchihashi

"So what kind of operation is it?" I

Mom matter-of-factly replied, "They're going to cut open his stomach to look at the growth."

"So Dad has cancer? "We don't know, that's what they're going to check.

never thought too much about my career. I didn't have one. My parents worried about this and often asked, "What do you want to do with your life?" And I would answer, "I don't know." Mom would reply, "I don't know." Everything is "I don't know." But I didn't; twenty-seven years old and I still didn't. I envied people who knew what they wanted to do. Even it what they wanted meant a life of struggle, at least they knew. I always felt that if I knew my career, every thing else would fall into place behind it and follow. I was grateful I didn't blindly fall into one of those professional careers just for the money. I kept reading articles about lawyers who ended up quitting their firms because it wasn't what they thought it was going to be, about accountants and engineers who were scrounging for jobs in a recession. So I never worried much about it. But I always assumed Mom and Dad would be around.

I was definitely raised more by my mother. She was born in America Dad was born in Japan. Mom spoke fluent English, Dad spoke fragmented, accented, half-Japanese/ half-English. So Mom would scold, lecture and discipline. Dad would agreed, reiterate and back her up. I never considered Dad distant or uncaring. I knew he would always be there for me. He always supported me by telling me, anything I want to do is OK. I grew up thinking that's what a father was, quiet, providing and giving open support.

And now I started wondering what it would be like without him, without that unconscious in-the-back-ofmy-head knowledge that Dad would be there. I thought of how Mom and Dad reacted to the death of their parents. I remember at age ten, Mom waking me up, sobbing, saying "Peter, Gi-chan passed away." Dad was on a business trip so she drove us to Gardena in silence, tears still streaming down her face. Ba-chan died last year, after years in the rest home, it was different. It was time. Mom almost seemed relieved in a way. When each of Dad's parent's died, he was in Japan and I heard about it from a phone call. I never saw his reaction. A couple of years ago I asked Mom if Dad was affected by the death of his parents. Morn said he was by his mother, but not his father because he didn't get along with him.

I thought of coming home to visit and not seeing Dad in his recliner reading the paper or watching TV. took out photo albums and looked at pictures of Dad-the edges of his mouth barely rising, looking not stern but content, perhaps trying to look dignified. There was that one picture of me and Dad. I was maybe a year old and Dad was holding me in front of him, my arms raised out. I was beaming while Dad had an almost outrageous smile of teeth, as if saying, this is my son, look how happy I am.

I went to the mirror to look at my face. So many times growing up, I looksed at my face, thinking, that's not me, not who I picture when I imagine myself in my dreams. I didn't have a clear picture of who I did see, but I knew it wasn't the face in the mirror. I eventually accepted my face years ago, but I never really studied it and analyzed how much of it was my father. I looked in the mirror now and realized I naturally looked a little sullen, not really stern but content, perhaps trying to look dignified, and I saw my Dad in me.

When I was younger, Dad loved fishing. He went often, if not with others, then alone. As a child I never understood why anyone would want to be alone on a boat. He had often asked me if I wanted to take it up, but I never felt any interest. The last time I had gone fishing with him was 15 years ago, when I was twelve. I remember waking up at three in the morning and driving to Big Bear Lake and Dad and his friend, then bugging them most of the day about when we were going home. So I felt slightly uncomfortable when Mom asked me, "Why don't you go fishing with Daddy?" ... I don't know Mom, I never really liked fishing . . ."

Mom paused, still looking down at the food she was preparing. "Daddy would like it, I think.

I was surprised at that comment. I was expecting her scolding tone and something along the lines of "Peter, you know this might be the last time you can do this with Daddy and you're going to end up regretting it.

I wondered how much it would mean to Dad. If I asked him, he would tell me, only if I really wanted to, it doesn't matter to him. Did it really matter to him? I thought of other fathers and sons who went to sport games together, shared hobbies, followed into the family business. I shared in none of these things. Would I regret not doing this one day? The cliched phrase "never really knew my father" came into my head. I decided I would go fishing with Dad and talk to him about his father; maybe learn more about his childhood, his dreams and

I always wished Dad was as fluent in English as Mom, without the awkward grammar, the heavy accent and the half-Japonese/half-English phrasing. There were moments in the past when I found myself talking to Dad using his way of speaking because I thought he would understand me better. There were a few occasions when I was annoyed and resentful. I felt some of this as I sat on the couch next to Dad's chair.

"Dad? You wanna go fishing?" Sitting in his recliner, without looking up from the newspaper, he said, "O'-Kay. If yu want.

"Yeah." "O-kay...Nex' Sa-ta-day?" "Okay."

Friday night, Dad took the black cylinders containing his fishing rods out of the garage, stood in the driveway and whipped the rods back and forth/filinging an invisible line out into the middle of the street. He opened containers, digging into the dark, moist soil to check that there were enough worms inside. I helped him pack the rods and the tackle box into the trunk.

"Too-mo-ro...aaa thu-ree o' klok o-rai?" "Okay."

At three, as we backed out of the garage, my eyes felt almost painful, and the effort to keep them open made them tingle. A warm haze burned around them. The radio was on the news station as we rode on the empty highway. I wanted to talk on the way over but didn't feel comfortable, and as I pondered what to do I fell asleep.

"Oi, Pee-ta, tsuita yo!"

We had arrived and Dad had parked the car. The sky was still black as we unloaded the car and trudged to the boat rentals. As we stepped into the boat, the smell of dirty wet fish and gasoline came to me and took me back 15 years. Dad pulled on the cord to start the motor and the sound roared through the silence, breaking my quiet, nervous feeling of procrastination.

We reached the other end of the lake and Dad tossed out the anchor. I watched and hooked my worm as he did. As he showed me how to cast the line, he tilted the rod back, said "Ko-nis" and his line flew out. I cast my line in the same direction. "Ohh, guuud." he said and as we settled back and sat there, I still felt uncomfortable. Do I just start talking? I suddenly realized I never really HAD to talk to Dad before. There was always someone or something to begin, distract and end conversations. So I sat there, and after ten minutes or so, I felt relieved enough to stay silent.

After about an hour we had no bites. I was thinking about the possibility of Dad dying. 1 thought. about the empty chair. I thought -about Dad's English and suddenly realized that, even though it sometimes irritated me, I would miss it. And with that I asked him,

"Dad?"

"E-yeees?"

"Mom said you didn't like Gi-chan much.

There was a short pause. "Nooo." "Really?"

"1-ee don't like him."

"How come?"

"Ooo, he was not nice to your Bachan.

Lsat there, finding it all hard to believe. I assumed he had a relationship with his parents like I did. Lielt like saying, well, I like you, but didn't. I just looked out at the water, then back at him.

"Is that why you came to America?"

"Nooo, that's not onu-ry reason.

"You wanted your own busi-

"E-veees, that too,"

"Is that what you always wanted to do."

"E-yees."

And the conversation ended there and we sat still and silent again. Somehow, I felt he had answered everything. Maybe I was just fooling myself as an excuse.

An hour later, the sun began to come up and my eyes were feeling a little tired. Looking straight ahead. Dad asked, "Pee-ta wa nani ni naru no ka-na?" I had heard the same question in the same manner so many times before, "I wonder what Peter will become?"

"I don't know yet."

"Hayaku kimetara ii no ni naa. . .

I had given the same response and he gave the same reply. "It would be nice if I would hurry up and decide." And, like always, I said, "I know..." No matter how many times we went through this, his question did make me think. And I had no more an answer than I had for the past ten years or so. I didn't know. Nothing stood out for me, nothing I was even slightly sure about. "Nani ni naru no ka-na?" I heard that phrase over and over in my head. I repeated the literal translation to myself, "I wonder what I would become." It occurred to me that even though Dad was referring to a career, in a literal sense, it meant, what would I become as a person? I wondered if my Dad thought the same thing. Did he wonder what kind of person I would be? Like Mom? Like him? I looked over at him as he stared ahead. Was he proud of the kind of person I already was? I felt a tug at my hands.

"Ooo, Pee-ta!"

I began to reel in the line as the fish broke the lake's surface a few times. My Dad was telling me in Japanese to reel in, reel in, and 'grabbed the net as the fish came close to the boat.

"Ooo, kore wa ii sakana da." he said as he pulled up the fish. I remember him saying the same thing 15 years ago, "Oh, this is a great fish." He looked at me and smiled as the flapping fish wet him, and I smiled back

The rest of the day we caught more fish and sat there in silence. I felt that I didn't need to talk to him anymore. I wasn't going to find out everything about him in one day and I didn't need to. Maybe other fathers told their sons everything about them and the sons felt closer to them because of it, and that was, father to them. But Dad was a father to me in my own way. In the same way I saw my father in my face, I

Ocean Colony! The most prestigious community on the Coastside is a 278 acre planned unit development, nestled in and around the famous Half Moon Bay Golf Links. An 18 hole championship golf course rated #1 in the top 5 golf courses in the Bay Area. The Colony Club complex with its indoor AAU size pool, health club with a myriad of activities, plus 6 adjoining tennis courts, provides year-round recreation for every member of the family. Ocean Colony offers an array of quality, new and resale homes, townhouses and condominiums, including trim Cape Cods, stately manor houses & rambling ranches - all located within minutes of virtually any point in the San Francisco Bay Area. Most are either on, or enjoy views of the golf course and it's only a short walk to the beach. Ocean Colony is swept by ocean breezes throughout the year and is protected by a 24 hour manned security gate. Prices range from $207,000 to $1,000,000.

So the secret is out - learn the rest - call or write for our full color brochure and information packet.

Greater L.A. Singles

he Greater Los Angeles Singles (GLAS) is a unique and active chapter of the JACL whose aim is to address the issues and concerns of single individuals.

GLAS participates in a number of community service activities throughout the year, but we are especially proud of our association with Koreisha Chushoku Kai and our establishment of the Hana Uno Sheperd Memorial Scholarship.

Please share in our enthusiasm for two causes that the Greater Los Angeles Singles Chapter of the IACL views as two of our "Best Bets."

KOREISHA CHUSHOKU KAI

The Greater Los Angeles Singles chapter has been a loyal friend and supporter of Koreisha Chushoku Kai since 1987. Our association with Koreisha Chushoku Kai began seven years ago when then GLAS President Meriko Mori suggested that we "pass the hat" at our annual Christmas Dinner-Dance to collect donations for a "nutrition program for the elderly" in lieu of the usual giftexchange. The "hat" has proudly become a tradition for GLAS each Christmas, and because of the warmth and generosity shown to Koreisha Chushoku Kai each year. the Greater Los Angeles Singles Chapter of the JACL was a special honoree at the annual Anniversary Benefit Banquet hosted by Koreisha Chushoku Kai last year.

HANA UNO SHEPERD MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

The Hana Uno Sheperd Memorial Scholarship was named in honor of the late Hana Uno Sheperd, who was a charter member of GLAS, and along with her brother Edison Uno a pioneer of Redress for Japanese

Each year the Greater Los Angeles Singles chapter is pleased to present the Hana Uno Sheperd Memorial Scholarship to a deserving high school senior from either Los Angeles County or Orange County. The scholarship is uniquely different from all others in that GLAS chooses to recognize students specifically from single-parent families.

Among the the recipients of the Hana Uno Sheperd Memorial Scholarship:

PHYLLIS NAGATSUKA - 1994 Scholarship Recipient. 1994 graduate of Venice High School. She is currently a major in International Relations at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

MUTSUBU INAYAMA - 1992 Scholarship Recipient. He is currently attending UC Berkeley as a chemical engineering major.

RANDY HAYASHI - 1991 Scholarship Recipient.

CHAD SAKAMOTO - 1990 Scholarship Recipient.

Wishing you Peace, Joy and Happiness this Holiday Season and throughout the New Year

(Continued from B10) suddenly felt my father in myself. Even though I was raised mostly by my mother, I was quiet. Even though I spoke fituent English, I was tentative and inarticulate a lot of the time. I tended to just agree with people. The one way I am different is, unlike him— I liked my father. Maybo Dad was as "The anesthesia's still making him foggy." Mom explained.

"Are you OK, Dad?" I asked and he nodded again. I looked at Mom. "I guess I should let him sleep, huh?" "Yeah, I guess so. Sorry you came all this way just to watch him go to sleep." She paused and looked at him." But I'm sure he's happy you came." "Yeah." I went up close to him and without thinking I said, "I love you, Dad." His eyes opened a bit and his lips parted underneath the mask and even though no sounds were audible, I heard his response, without any accent. I love you too.

COMMUNITY Contra Costa Chapter

It's all for the kids

By DON DELCOLLO

The Contra Costa Chapter, JACL, has a can't-miss activity called Kid's Day.

Every year for the last four years, (in 1995 we will produce Kid's Day

V), we have offered arts, crafts, odori, taiko, dojo kid's performances, mochi-making, calligraphy, sumi-e brush painting, hachimaki, origami, onigiri making, kendo demonstrations, Kimekomi dolls, etc. In short, it's an immersion for a day in Japanese traditional culture, a cultural heritage practiced by several generations of Japanese Americans and offered to the next generation of Japanese of Japanese Americans in keeping with the

the cultural heritage Kid's Day IV, held

Kid's Day IV, held May 7, 1994, was again a huge success. The chapter entertained 90 kids in attendance (complete with their parents). Each youngster was allowed to participate in hands-on projects and demonstrations offered that day.

Sadako Delcollo and Mary Okamura set up an extensive display of Kimekomi dolls. Kimekomi ningyo dolls ("nin" means human. gyo" means form) has its origins in the mid-Edo period at the Kamo Shrine in Kyoto. A priest named Tadashige Takahashi began carving dolls from leftover wood and dressing them in scraps of cloth. Today's Kimekomi dolls are dressed in silk and brocade and represent all manner of figures especially ones that represent traditional characters in the arts, theatre, mythol-

and values of Japanese

JACL mission- "... to promote and preserve

ogy, legends. heroic and everyday figures: all are immortalized in these dolls.

The Michiya

Hanayagi Dance Group performed traditional dances, the kind of dances performed at weddings. They are beautifully choreographed classical dance numbers. These dances were well performed and were well received, especially by the children. The young students who performed for this wellknown Oakland dance group were among those who performed in the annual San Francisco Cherry Blossom festival parade in April.

Esther Takeuchi, Joan Matsuoka and Julie Kanazawa taught origami, both beginning and advanced. Origami paper from Japan was used to fold lapan was used to fold cranes (even the flapping style), paper boxes, frogs, inflatable paper balloons, animals, and flowers etc. All the kids taught each other and their parents who learned

origami as well. Ron Shiromoto helped the kide-to make Daruma face designs- while blindfolded. The relationship of the design to the wish and eyes and its eventual fulfillment were explained also.

Dennis Makishima demonstrated the art of bonsai tree trimming. Makishima is an expert in this ancient art. He has dedicated many years of his life to the study of bonsai with years of his life to the study of bonsai with the master bonsai teachers of Japan, and is a recognized American expert. Makishima invited several kids up

San Jose gears for '96 convention

Plans are rapidly shaping up for the next IACL National Convention to be held in San Jose, Calif., Aug. 6-11, 1996. The event will be coordinated by Tom Shigemasa, convention chair: cochairs Leon Kimura (booster events). Curt Matsushima (administration), and Wayne Tanda (convention events).

The Convention Committee intends to provide a variety of programming, including an Old-Timer's Whing-Ding, chaired by George Hinoki, fun activities for youth groups, and interesting workshops and tours for those attending as boosters.

San Jose and surrounding areas have much to offer for those who may wish to combine convention attendance with a family vacation. Several sporting events are planned for the athletically inclined, including golf, bowling, tennis, and volleyball.

The host San Jose Chapter welcomes the assistance of other JACL chapters in planning this biennial event. Assistance will be needed to insure a successful, smoothly run convention, Several IACL chapters have already offered their assistance, including Berkeley, Fremont, Gilroy, Sequoia and West Valley.

KIDS

to trim and shape trees which they were then allowed to take home. One of Makishima's own creations was raffled off for a lucky winner to take home. Yoshiro Tokiwa taught calligraphy along with Akiko Mizuno (from Shimada). The Japanese characters were applied to pasteboard and made into fans by the kids under the supervision of Carmen De La Cruz, Jim Oshima (Contra Costa JACL president) and Natsuko Irei. Every kid took home a special fan which he or she had made.

Mary Okamura and Naomi Sato taught the kids to decorate manju which the kids could take home at the end of the day. Many of the •younger kids said eating the manju was the highlight of the day.

Bob Fukishima, along with Don Delcollo. printed linoleum block prints on "T" shirts with special hand carved images of mon designs which Bob had carved demonstrating yet another classic art form with roots in ancient Japan. Every kid took home a shirt.

These are but a sampling of last year's Kid's Day offerings. These activities serve the very spirit and letter of the JACL's mission since 1929: cultural heritage and artistic traditions handed on to our kids.

Kid's Day V is just now in the beginning planning stages and any offers of help (especially if you have a skill to teach or demonstrate) would be much appreciated.

Best of Gwen Muranaka. 1994

aving been absent from the pages of the PC for quite a while, it is a real pleasure to be invited to write from the perspective of six months as a United States Marshal. When asked how it is, I quickly recall several phone calls from friends, who were awed at the prospect of my acting like Tommy Lee Jones in the "Fugitive." Also some who called me "Wyatt" were really exercising their imagination. In a more serious vein, more than a few have commented upon the irony of my journey as an inmate from the wartime U.S. concentration camp at Tule Lake, through the stewardship of the California prison system, to wearing the badge of the U.S.Marshal, whose jurisdiction happens to take in Tule Lake.

Considering the high profile place of police in a society so fearful of crime today, as well as one still not free of racism, an Asian American in a visible law enforcement position is perhaps a good thing too.

I, like many of our friends , knew little about the Marshal's Service, which has a rich history going back to the days of George Washington, when U.S. Marshals were the first federal law men. Since then, legendary outlaws like Billy the Kid, have been hunted down and killed by U.S. marshals, like Pat Garrett

The low key Marshal's Service actually plays a much greater role in fighting crime today than most know. A good example is the participation of five of our deputy marshals in a strike force of local, state, and federal officers which recently targeted violent criminals in the Sacramento area over a period of two months and arrested over 60. Such networking of police agencies has proven very effective in many jurisdictions.

The priority job of the Marshal's Service is protection of the federal judges and courts. The witness protection program, so often portrayed on TV and films, is the responsibility of the Marshal's Service. The transportation of federal prisoners between prisons. from prisons and jails to courts, is another large job. In fact, I was really surprised to find that the Service operates two 747s, which fly prisoners around the country on a full time basis.

Jerry Enomoto on the job as

U.S. Marshal

Former JACL national president reflects on his first year

The management and care of assets seized from criminals by federal law enforcement officers is another important task, one that generates over a billion dollars in assets to the government on an annual basis. The U.S. marshal, which is a presidential appointment, of whom there are 97 in the United States, is nominated by a U.S. Senator (in my case, Senator Barbara Boxer) to the President, who submits the nominee to the Senate, which then must confirm the appointment. It is a long process which took all of nine months.

There is a current move to depoliticize the marshal's position by making it subject to the merit system. Not withstanding the fact that I am a political appointee, the proposed change would be a positive and logical one. The marshal's job is an administrative one. Here the Eastern District of California covers 34 inland counties extending from Bakersfield to the Oregon border. The day - day management of the district is the job of the Chief Deputy Marshal, a veteran of the Service, and a professional law enforcement officer. Although I am no stranger to law enforcement, I am fortunate to find myself in charge of a district with a reputation for efficiency, and a Chief who I trust and am compatible with.

I also have made it a point to get some first hand knowledge of the Marshal's Service by accompanying the deputy marshals on various assignments, something that gives me more knowledge, and makes the job much more stimulating for me

A different experience occurred recently when I participated in a 'Nevada Days" parade in Carson City, as part of a U.S.Marshal's Posse, an organization sponsored by the Marshal's Service in several states. The Posses have been a big hit at various events, and are a positive PR asset to the Marshal's Service

Recently, the Marshal's Service announed the first examination in some time for Deputy U.S. Marshals, with the Director emphasizing a targeted recruitment drive for minorities and women, with diversification of the Service as a major goal. Utilizing community based organizations and minority peace officer organizations, in addition to the usual recruitment sources, we hope to increase the number of minorities and women taking the

Finally, as 1994 ends, Dorothy and I continue to count our blessings that we are able to be active and productive at this time in our lives. In that spirit, we wish all of our JACL friends a healthy and prosperous future.

The Tale of

BY ALLAN BEEKMAN

Gonji (Genji Monogatari), written a thousand years ago, by the woman known as Murasaki Shikibu, is the world's first novel. It appears undisputed that it is the world's first great novel, and even tends to be conceded that it is the supreme masterpiece of classical Japanese prose narrative, perhaps even of the whole of Japanese literature, including that of the modern period.

Yet it concerns a society and culture so different from the modern, appreciation of it demands patience and imagination from the reader.

It was written in Japanese at a time when most official works in Japan were being written in Chinese. The Japanese in which it was written, moreover, is that of the court at Heian, the region now known as Kyoto. The language differs so much from that of the common people, and so much from modern Japanese, that the Japanese of today need to have it rendered in translation with an explanation of how the Heian culture differs from their own.

The culture of the Heian court had evolved during a long period of peace. Those at court had become preoccupied with artistic pursuits and adjudged a person by his good looks, his taste in clothing and his sensitivity to the inherent pathos of things, especially in the traditional arts.

The preoccupation with good looks may seem the more remarkable when it becomes apparent that the courtiers seemed to spend most of their waking hours in darkness. Their lives centered around their social activities, which tended to be conducted at night and to cease just before dawn.

Upper-class women were sheltered from public view by screens and curtains as well as by ladies-inwaiting and attendants. If would be upon these cloistered upper-class women that the ardor of the oversexed Genji would concentrate, any distraction to women of lesser rank seemingly to be too casual to merit mention by the authoress.

Genji and the other males are so easily moved to tears they seem feminine to a modern reader. This femininity is indicated in another way.

On one occasion when, at the age of 17, Genji goes to spend the night at the home of the governor of Kii, There his attention is drawn to "a particularly attractive lad of perhaps twelve or thirteeh."

Genji is attracted to the lad's sister. He creeps to her bedside and forcibly seduces her.

He takes into his service the lad, her brother, who had caught his eye. He attempts another mating, using the brother as go-between. This attempt brings a firm rejection from the lady.

Genji consoles himself with the brother. "The boy is delighted, such are Genji's youthful charms. Genji, for his part, or so one is informed, "found the boy more attractive than his chilly sister."

But pederasty appears to have been so casual a matter to the Heian society that it seems to merit no more than this brief mention. So far as it deals with Genji, the rest of the novel concerns his pursuit of upperclass women.

In the society of Genji, the Fujiwara family had married its daughters to royalty and ruled in place of the emperors. In the period depicted, the Fujiwara family was at the zenith of its power.

Murasaki Shikibu was a Fujiwara. Her true given name is unknown. "Except for consorts and princesses of the blood, the names of well-born ladies are not listed in the genealogies." Shikibu, Board of Rites, is an

from page 825) office held by both her father and an elder brother. This circumstance may be the cause of the surname ascribed to her. The given name, Murasaki. (purple), may derive from the name of a heroine of the novel or from the circumstance that the first two syllables, Fuji, of the author's true family name can be read to mean wisteria, which may be purple. -

Her father Fujiwara Tametoki, a scholar of Chinese, became governor of Echizen on the Sea of Japan, almost due north of the capital, in 996. She probably went with him, returning to the capital shortly before her marriage in 998 or 999 to Fujiwara Nobutaka, a distant kinsman. Her only child, a daughter, was born in 999, Murasaki was widowed in 1001

She went to court in the service of the youthful Empress

Akiko, most likely four or five years later.

Murasaki may have begun Genji in the early years of her widowhood. Though written Chinese was the exclusive province of males; women might write in Japanese, for which a phonetic. system riow existed.

Since to the Heian society of the time literature was considered important, her authorship may have been the reason for her being summoned to court. From her scrupulous observation of the life there she would introduce many anecdotes and characters into her novel.

Males had privileges besides the exclusive use of Chinese. They held the important posts. In the novel, instead of by given name, they tend to be identified by the posts they hold.

The society is polygamous. Nevertheless women exercise considerable influence. A polygamous male might be as lovelorn as a male in a monogamous society. At the beginning of the story, the emperor himself is engaged in a distracting passion. He insists on having his beloved always beside him. On nights when there is music or other entertainment he requires that she be present. Sometimes the two sleep late. Even after arising he insists on her continued attendance.

Genji is the son of this favorite of the emperor. From her he derives an evident Oedipus complex. She lacks strong family backing and suffers from the insults of jealous competitors While her son is still a child she becomes ill. Beginning in the first chapter, The Pau-Iownia Court. when the emperor must part from his dying beloved, the mother of Genji, there are nearly 800 poems woven into the tale, in the 31 syllable tanka or waka form

The emperor says to her, "We vowed that we would go together down the road we all must go. You must not leave me behind." She replies poeti-

"I leave you to go the road we all must

cally

The road I would choose, if only I could, is the other."

She scarcely survives the day. The emperor is desolated.

In his desolation he learns of another, Fujitsubo, who resembles his beloved He persuades Fuiitsubo to come to court. Her resemblance to the mother of Genji is astonishing. When Genji is six, his grandmother, into whose care he has been given, dies. He goes to live at court.

At seven he performs the ceremonial reading of the Chinese classics. Never before had there been such a fine performance. He is so handsome and gifted he is known as Genji, which means "the shining one."

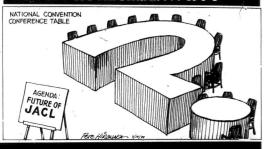

Since Genji now never leaves his father's side, it is difficult for this new lady, Fujitsubo, the recipient of so many visits, to hide herself from him. The emperor encourages the association.

"Do not be unfriendly," says the emperor to Fujitsubo, "Sometimes it almost seems to me too that you are his mother... Your eyes, your expression: you are really so uncommonly like her that you could pass for his mother

The resemblance evokes the Oedipus complex of Genji. But in the meantime, at 12.

he is married to the Princess Aoi, daughter of the Minister of the Left, the highest ranking officer. The bride is also the daughter of the Princess Omiya, sister of the emperor. So it appears Genji has married a first cousin.

Older than Genji, Aoi is somewhat ill at ease with such a young hus-band. As for Genji, though his bride is beautiful, he is unsure they are meant for each other. He spends little time at her mansion.

In contrast to the conviction ofmost of the others in the novel that he is the quintessance of all that should be admired, the coolness of Aoi to her husband is remarkable. It. increases as it contributes to his seeking appreciation elsewhere.

On a visit to Aoi, he remarks, "How pleasant if this year you could manage to be a little friendlier.

The suggestion fails to persuade her. From her point of view he seems bent on infuriating her with his amours. She bears him a son but dies soon thereafter.

With better reason than the mothers bearing a resemblance, this son of Aoi will bear a resemblance to the son of Fujitsubo. The reason can be found in the Oedipal compulsion of Genji, which meanwhile has become directed toward a child

He discovers the child, Murasaki, in the fifth chapter,

Lavender, when having fallen ill he seeks help from a holy man living in the northern hills. While convalescing there, he wanders to a nearby house where he catches a glimpse of a beautiful girl of about 10, who reminds him of Fujitsubo whom he craves but has yet to sexually possess. After his first glimpse of the child, "He was beginning to make plans: the child must stand in the place of the one whom she so resembled."

The bishop from this villa, a former governor, invites Genji to visit, during which the child, Murasaki, is revealed to be the niece of Fujitsubo. Genji asks permission to adopt Murasaki, but the proposal is rejected.

Even after returning to the capital he continues his overtures for the adoption of Murasaki, but his oedipal tendency is also turned toward Fujitsubo who, having become ill, had returned to her family. He now contrives a meeting with her. Every novel has faults. A major fault of this novel is that this meeting with Fujitsubo, that will result in her pregnancy and the birth of a son, is disposed of with a single paragraph.

The night passes too quickly for

"So few and scattered the nights. so few the dreams.

Would that the dream tonight might take me with it.

He was in tears, and she did, after all have to feel sorry for him.

"Were I to disappear in the last of See GENIII/page 831

Would yet my name live on in infamy."

The woman who had arranged the meeting gathered his clothes and brought them out to him.

Fujitsubo returns to court. The emperor keeps her always at his side. There would be no further dalliance with Genji. Taking precedence over the mother of the heir apparent, she becomes empress. The son she bears Genji, which the emperor believes to be his own, is designated to succeed the present heir apparent as em-In time she becomes

Genji, now 18, finds as much solace as possible with Murasaki whom he has succeeded in adopting. 'He is constantly with her, tutoring her in the polite accomplishments and especially in calligraphy." She seems prettier, cleverer, more amiable each time he sees her. "He congratulates" himself that his hopes of shaping her into his ideal might not prove entirely unrealistic."

When she is about 15, he decides she is no longer too young for sexual consummation. Previously he had made amorous overtures she had seemed unable to understand. Sexual possession of her makes his love the greater, but she is surprised and shocked. "What a fool she had been, to repose her whole confidence in so gross and unscrupulous reconciled to the change in the nature of their relationship. Genji's son by Fujitsubo becomes

Two-thirds of the way through the novel, Genji dies at 52. The novel continues with Kaoru, thought by the world to be Genji's son but really the son of another, by a Genji consort, daughter of an emperor. Genji has been cuckolded by the son of his best friend. Kaoru comes to the center stage with one Prince Niou, son of the emperor regnant.

The novel covers 75 years from the birth of Genji to the events of the last chapter.

The first English translation, by Baron Suematsu, published at the turn of the century, covers less than half of the work

There have been articles and books in English that give an insight into the novel. One that has been particularly helpful to me is The Tale of Genji: A Reader's Guide, by William J. Puette, Charles E. Tuttle Company.

In his A Reader's

Guide, William J. Puette says of the Suematsu translation that it "has historical value but little else." Puette speaks with respect of the translation of Arthur Waley, which appeared in 1933 and compares it with that of Edward G. Seidensticker

This evaluation is based primarily on the Seidensticker translation, which appeared in 1976 at a time when Seidensticker was

Professor of Japanese at Columbia University and already a noted translator. Among his translations have been a number of works by Tanizaki Junichiro and Kawabata Yasunari, He won the American National Book Award for Translation in 1970. For his part in introducing Japanese novels abroad, the Japanese Government recently awarded him the Order of the Rising Sun.

The Everyman's

Library Edition of Seidensticker translation of The Tale of Genji, published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. in 1992, numbers 1184 pages.

This article is based on the Everyman version.

Of course there have been movies about Genii, One, in color, by Tetsuji Takechi, that particularly impressed me I saw was in August 1967.

Some thoughts from Japan

By TED SHIGENO Japan Chapter, JACL

apan may not continue to be an economic superpower. Asia is changing. Because of the lingering trade problems some people are saying that the United States should bypass Japan and concentrate on developing trade and investments in other Asian countries. Why hassle with the Japan's stubborn closed market when there are bigger markets and investment opportunities elsewhere in Asia. Food for thought. The Murayama government, to many people, is a coalition of conflicting parties. Actually it isn't as strange as it appears. Hosokawa government came into being through a coalition of Liberal Democratic Party renegades and the opposition parties that included the Democratic Socialist Party. The sole reason for these parties to get together was to defeat the Liberal Democratic Party. The Young Liberal Democratic Party renegades could not expect to take over the Party when the old fogies were still around. This was the chance to throw out the old leaders and take over, but that could not be done within the Party. Although the second largest Democratic Socialist Party were sworn enemies, it was necessary to get their support if they were to take power. And so they cooperated together to down the Liberal Democratic Party and succeeded. The Hosokawa government was born.

Ozawa was the kingpin of this movement but once he succeeded in defeating his old Party. He felt that the differences between his political philosophy and that of the Democratic Socialists were so far apart that the the Democratic Socialist Party must be excluded as early as possible from the coalition. When the Hata government was formed Ozawa excluded the Democratic Socialist Party. Ozawa represented the hawks. Hata government lied always been considered an interim govern- ment. Ozawa-Hata camp felt that Hata could safely resign to form a new CabiDet without the support of the Socialist group. Now that the Liberal Democratic Party bad lost and was out of power, the assumption wAs that there are many in the Liberal Democratic Party that would be willing to join with Ozawa-Hata group to get back in the government. They courted hawkish LDP members like Watanabe to support the new Cabinet. When Watanabe, whom the Ozawa-Hata group had counted on to bring in enough LDP members to their camp, failed to deliver, the Ozawa-Hata group was in trouble.

In desperation they enticed Kaifu to vie for the Prime Minister's post, but lost. The Democratic Socialist Party and Takemura's Sakigake party, with no love for Hosokawa. decided io get together with the Liberal Democratic Party led by dovish Kono to fight the Ozawa-Hata group, Actually the political philosophy of the Liberal Democratic Party under Kono was more compatible to the Democratic Socialist/ Sekigake Parties than the Ozawa-Hata group. By offering the Prime Minister post to the Socialists the Liberal Democratic Party was able to win back the government. Although the current government has a Socialist Prime Minister, the Liberal Democratic'Party is the biggest party in the coalition and has the biggest say. The Democratic Socialist Party had to compromise their longstanding policies to make the Coalition workable. Such compromise with hawkish Ozawa would be unthinkable.

There will be many problems ahead, but it seems the Murayama government is not going to fall that

Ruth Hashimoto receives international volunteer award

The President's Award is designed to bring special recognition to the outstanding Sister Cities volunteer, nationally or internationally, whose efforts have enhanced the Sister Cities worldwide mission of peace.

Ruth Hashimoto was presented Sister Cities International's first President's Award at the annual conference in Louisville for her demonstrated commitment to Sister Cities' mission of peace and cooperation

Hashimoto's story is certainly one of triumph and kindness.

HASHIMOTO

She arrived in Albuquerque, New Mexico in February 1951 in the middle of a blizzard with three daughters. She suffered the indignity of internment during World War II, which made her more determined to work for peace. A great part of her volunteer energies have been directed to Sister Cities International and its program of peace and understanding. SCI has benefited tremendously and offers a better program because of her participation and commitment

The name Ruth means a joy, and a smile. She is a mother. grandmother and great grandmother. She is known for her humor and kindness.

She is a recipient of numerous awards and recognitions, including the YMCA's Women on the Move Award, the Human Rights Award and the Fifth Order of the Precious Crown from the Japanese Emperor. She also was inducted into the New Mexico Women's Hall of Fame.

Those involved in the sister cities thank Hashimoto for her unequivocal generosity and dedication to Sister

Nikkei honored with memorial highways

Last August, little more than a year after, concerned Nikkei testified before a California Assembly Committee about a then-proposed Pearl Harbor Survivors Memorial Highway, the California legislature passed Assembly Concurrent Resolution Number 62 (ACR-62) designating three stretches of California highways as memorial freeways to the contributions of Nisei veterans during World War

Introduced in July, 1993 by Assembly Members Tom Umberg (D-Santa Ana) and Dean Andal (R-Stock ton) with principal coauthors Assembly Members Jim Costa (D-Fresno) and Nao Takasugi (R-Oxnard), ACR-62 was passed by the state Senate and Assembly in August of 1994, and signed into law by Gov. Pete Wilson on Sept. 2, 1994.

Three Nisei fighting units will be honored at three different passage ways:

In Northern California, State Highway 99, between the cities of Salida and Manteca, will recognize the 442nd Regiment Combat Team.

● In Central California, State Highway 99, between the cities of Fresno and Madera, will recognize the 100th Infantry Battal-

 In Southern California, State highway Route 23, from Highway 101 to Highway 118, will recognize the Military Intelligence Service.

In addition, each of the memorial highway signs will have "A unit of the '100/442/MIS' triad" at the bottom to unify the three loca-

Ironically, this tribute began when the California state senator Don Rogers picked up a proposal from the Pearl Harbor-Survivors Association to name a portion of State highway 99, between Fresno and Tulare, as the Pearl Harbor Memorial Highway.

Elisa Kamimoto, then-Central California Regional Director, first voiced concern about such a bill to Senator Rogers through a letter. Later, on June 28, 1993, a Japanese American delegation including Kamimoto, Dr. Frank Nishio of the Sierra Nisei VFW Post and Fresnö JACL, and Mary Tsukamoto from Florin IACL, traveled to Sacramento educate the Committee on the potential negative reaction such a memorial might cause, specifically that the mention of Pearl Harbor evokes anti-Japanese sentiment which reflects unfairly on Americans of Japanese descent and can provoke acts of anti-Asian violence. As Kamimoto testified, "We cannot ignore that Pearl Harbor continues to provoke an anti-Asian sentiment in many Americans... it is essential that we pay tribute in a way that does not inflame emotions or place undue emotional burden on a group of innocent people.

Dr. Nishio, a veteran of both World War II and Korea, spoke not to belittle the survivors of Pearl Harbor but to point out the sacrifices bers of the armed forces in the Pacific War, such as the Japanese American units like the 442nd Regimental Combat Team.

After their testimony, several Assembly members expressed sympathy with Assemblyman Andal proposing to name the highway in honor of the 442nd RCT. Today, Dr. Nishio says that he initially rejected such a proposal, that he told Andal "I didn't come for recognition, I came to save a life."

Although the pro-. posed Pearl Harbor Memorial Highway was finally passed. several Assembly members approached the group after their testimony to see what recognition could be made for the Nisei who gave so much to their country.

From this grass-roots effort, ACR-62 became a reality. As Nishio wrote to the Assemblymen who authored the bill, "The sum exposure of the three strips is quite impressive and appropriate to compliment our Nisei vets past endeavors and to enhance our stance against hate groups.

Fach California

region will raise money to pay for the memorial highway signs, estimated at $3500 for each location. In Central California for example, proceeds from raffle tickets were being sold for the Kanojo Holiday Fashion Show in Fresno. December 10 and I 1 jointly sponsored by the Fresno JACL chapter and the JACL Central California District Council, will go to the purchase of the memorial markers.

CCDC holds workshops, discussions, installation

CCDC Regional Director

A whirlwind of JACL events filled the weekend of November 19-20 for those in the Central California district, beginning on Saturday aftemoon.

Regional Director Patricia Tsai hosted the first-ever regional office open house with JACL resources, including the latest video piece from national featuring the commissioning of Captain Bruce Yamashita, on display. National President Denny Yasuhara was also on hand to discuss JACL and the concerns of_ Central California. Several members came by and took advantage of this special opportunity.

Also on Saturday afternoon, CCDC educators hosted an Education Workshop at the Centre Plaza Holiday Inn introducing the JACL curriculum and resource guide to local social studies instructors. The workshop committee included Fresno's Debbie Ikeda, Izzy Taniguchi and Franklin Ng. Grace Kimoto from Livingston-Merced chapter and Greg Marutani from San Francisco also helped with this workshop that brought together a dozen social studies instructors and sold curriculum guides at a reduced price, subsidized by Fresno JACL

Saturday night saw the 45th annual banquet and installation of officers with the theme, "Focusing on Tomorrow," in Fresno's Centre Plaza Holiday Inn. Judge Tony Ishii served as the master of ceremonies, keeping the program brief and on track. Presentation of Colors was performed by Frank Isogawa and Tom Teramoto of the Sierra Nisei VFW Post #8499 with Hiro Isogawa commanding and leading the group in the Pledge of Allegiance. Following the color guard, Reverend Keizo director; Randy Senzaki, JACL national director and Travis Nishi, incoming governor. Discussions or key issues as well as speakers were featured.

Norimoto from the Fresno Buddhist Temple gave the banquet's invoca-

After dinner, Assemblymember Cruz Bustamante from district 31 gave welcoming remarks. Then, District Governor Larry Ishimoto followed with the district awards beginning with the honoring of all the 1994 chapter presidents with past president pins. Next, Sadano Sadie" Abe arid Carolyn Ikemiya both from Reedley chapter were honored with JACL silver pins, given to award ten years of service at the chapter level.

Clovis's Mae Takahashi was recognized with a sapphire pin, acknowledging ten years of service to the chapter plus five years at the district or national level. Currently chair of the national ad-hoc budget review committee, Mae spoke briefly of her work in JACL, acknowledging National President Denny Yasuhara's past encouragement and support.

Next, National Director Randy Senzaki offered a few words of his own and then installed the 1995-96 district and chapter officers.

National President Denny Yasuhara delivered a relevant and well-received address discussing the leadership, budget and future of JACL. He discussed the need to focus on the needs of the organization, to accommodate the transition in leadership and the changes in policy that may occur because of it and reminded the members of the need to live within their means While acknowledging the challenges that lie ahead in the near future, he reminded the audience of spirit of JACL and the service done on behalf of those who support him.

In other banquet news, Janet Tamura from Fresno won the grand

Moon Festival gives lessons in cultural diversity

The objective of Asian Moon Festival is to educate the community at large about the diverse Asian communities that exist within it and to educate the Asian communities about each other. The 1994 Asian Moon Festival was a very positive first stage in accomplishing that goal and we look forward to next year.

With the weatherman calling for rain from early in the week. Milwaukee's first multi-Asian festival, the Asian Moon Festival. took place at the AONO, Sumi.....

Summerfest grounds on Friday and Saturday, September 23rd and 24th. Fortunately, the rains would not come until later Saturday evening. The festival was a success. Over 33 000 attendees responded enthusiastically to their first opportunity to experience diverse Asian food and culture in this outdoor setting. Chinese, Filipino, Hmong, Indian, Japanese, Korean, Laotian, Vietnamese, and other cultures were present to educate and entertain those attending.

The nonprofit organizing group of the festival, the Wisconsin Organization for Asian Americans-Milwaukee which represents nine ethnic community groups would like to thank the many memhers and friends of IACL who helped make this inaugural event a success. Your efforts were greatly appreciated. We couldn't have succeeded without you!! I would especially like to recognize April Goral, who chaired the grounds decoration committee (she WAS the commit-

FICTION

A Sanset writer and farmer of peaches and grapes in the Central California district of Del Rey. David Masumoto captures the voices of history and generations as they echo through a Jamese American farm community. Masumoto's first story appearing in a P.C. Holiday Issue was the 1986 James Clavell National Japanese American Literary Award. Since publication of Country Voices, much has changed in this read hanlet south of Fession The Tokyo Club building has been demolished, the bricks worth more than the old, vacant structure. The Japanese Hall was sold, passing on to a new owner and a new generation for

The handful of remaining Japanese American farmers still gamble, but the game has shifted to the fields and wagering on market prices against a formidable, omnipresent opponent — Nature.

Masumoto is completing a book for HarperSan Francisco entitled; "Epitaph for a Peach," which will be available in ^ June, 1995.

Gambling, Bootlegging and the Fire

By David Mas Masumoto

An excerpt from Country Voices hiko, bakape, chiha. In these games and others the Issei-gambled with their wages from hours of work and days of toil in the fields. Why? Possibly for the same reasons folks gamble today, hoping to win, daring to dream, breaking the monotony of a life of poverty or a destiny of impotence.

Mr. T. Morita, a Nisei: "Oh, the Issei gambled lots, and lost lots a money even the married ones with family. It was tragic but what the hell, you work so hard, so hard and only wanted a chance to win the big time."

Mr. N. Hiramoto, a Nisei: "Them days, a lot of Issei were good gamblers, like to gamble. They go pick grapes out there and begin playing hana [Japanese card game] at their breaks. They were bachelors and had no initiative. These Issei were real drinkers too, boy! tell you. Then they go get into fights and boy they really fought, yelling at each other in Japanese.

"The second and third generations calm, don't fight but the Issei... why they fight? No other recreation, that's why, only work, come to the Hall once and a while, talk and gamble... that's about all. Those Issei were adventurous. The Issei Itell you, couldn't read but knew their cards."

Mr. R. Matsubara, a Kibei: "The Chinese dominated the gambling scene, already established with their gambling houses, they opened their doors to "the /see".

"Japanese don't own gambling places, they start later. Why Chinese first? They smart people I guess. Games? Mostly Japanese hanafude [card games] and the Chinese gambling... saaa... all kinds of games, card game and bakape, shiko... The Chinese experts at those games, some even speak Nihongo [Japanese]."

Mr. G. Sato, a Nisei: "Chinese had those opium dens and shiko and all that stuff. You could go in there and I can still remember how it smelled in there, that sweet smell going in there. Later on I found out, 'oh yea, that's opium."

"Chinese were smart, house always won. My father's friend gambled his whole ranch away. Ithat's why his wife left him and he's all by himself. His whole place... high stakes but he like it. Why the gamble? Nothing else to do. Not many other Japanese around, so Chinese knew just where to get the money. Ohhhh, they were smart."

Mr. H. Kato, a Kibei from Los Angeles was a migrant worker in his youth. He easily recalled the memories of gambling, not just any gambling house but the Chinese house.

"Chinese ran those houses in every small town. The first night you go in with your money and you'll win 20 dollars. Then the next night you might again win 20 dollars. But then the last night you go in and lose it all, everything they take from you.

"They had all kinds of games, shiko, bakape, chiha.

"Shiko was a game that began with a pile of beans or small objects to count, and a pot or a container, and a stick. The object was to guess how many beans would remain in the last pile, one to four beans possible.

"The dealer would take a handful of beans, plunk them in the center of the table and cover them with the pot. Bets were rhade and the counting began. The dealer would take four beans away from the pile in a small, handful or push them with a stick. Then he'd take another four and then another four. You won by the number of beans left, one to four. But the dealer was quick and his hands blurred, lots of cheating like taking five beans in one set near the end so that the count made fewer winning bets, the house pocketing the rest.

"Two other games were like American keno, numbers or points were taken out of a larger pool and you won by the winning numbers you had chosen. One was called bakape and used a Chinese poem with characters instead of keno numbers. There were about 60 characters in this poem and after a certain amount were crossed out, the one with the most matching ones won."

"Another game was chiha, but instead of numbers or characters, they used a chart with the human body... and with pressure points like an acupuncture chart. When these points were crossed out, just like in keno, you won with the most matching points you had chosen.

"There were other games...I don't remember them too well, one was like giant dominoes and others were the games like Japanese hana. Of course now, don't get me wrong, I didn't gamble much but just heard about all of this...

About half way between the Hall and Bert Mori's grocery store stood a stately two story brick building. I remember walking by the structure, the ground level store fronts long ago boarded up with plywood and Mexican graffiti spray can painted in distinct lettering of Del Rey

Chicanos

Upstairs a few windows were open and the rooms appeared occupied, a dingy, yellow curtain blew outwards in a spring breeze, dancing in the air and waving to me, beckoning like a siren. Lively Mexican music flooded out of the comer window and I could have sworn I heard the soft, low laugh of a woman, the haunting, erotic one adolescent boys overhear and it stays with them for days.

Years later at a New Year's community pot luck dinner, I discovered the history of that brick building. An old Kibei man told me that it used to be the Tokyo Club, the centerpiece of J- town in Del Rey, the local mecca for gambling and prostitution along with some stores and restau rants that served the community, sort of like an Issei cultural center of those days.

I tried to imagine the soft giggle of a lapanese prostitute coming out of those upstairs windows or escaping through an ajar door on the ground level, and the lively jeers, laughter

Community service

Seattle, it's a dedicated group

By RAYMOND ISHI! President, Seattle Chapter

In October, the American Jewish Committee honored Dennis Okamoto for his years of community service. In his remarks, the keynote speaker, Wallace Loh, the Dean of the University of Washington Law School, commented that community service is something that needs to be learned and developed. Loh said that people don't inherit the willingness to serve their community but it is something that is taught to them by their family, friends, and coworkers. Community service has been a strength in the Asian Pacific American community and it is important that this legacy not be lost.

It was from my parents that I learned how community service can be time consuming, frustrating, lots of hard work but ultimately very satisfying and rewarding. I remember my parents always being involved in some form of community activity. My father has a long list of organizations, commissions, and agencies that he has helped over the years. JACL, Nisei Veterans Committee, First Hill Lions Club, the Washington State Governor's Commission on Disabilities and Employment, International District Economic Association, Denise Louie Early Childhood Education Center. and Chinese Information Service Center are but a few of the community organizations that my father has worked with over the years. As a small business owner he has provided countless hours of pro-bono work for individuals and social service agencies needing tax and financial help. And with all this, my father still had time to coach baseball, softball and soccer teams.

While my mother has been on her share of boards and committees, (the University of Washington Alumnae Board and the American Cancer Society to name two), it is her quiet work behind the scenes that has taught me the most. My mother is always helping with the various community bazaars, dinners and fundraisers. She was the one volunteering in the classrooms, talking with other parents with children in special education, and hosting board meetings at our house. As with most Nisei women, she rarely complains, is always supportive, and never receives just recognition for her work. While my father has left an imposing legacy of volunteerism to live up to, it is my mother's quiet commitment and humility that I find the most challenging to emulate.

Judging from the activity in the APA community, it is obvious that Seattle has been blessed with many committed community activists and supporters, I am constantly amazed at the generosity and philanthropy of the Seattle APA community. Nikkei Concerns, International District Health Clinic, Asian Counseling and Referral Service, Employment Opportunity Center, Refugee Planning Committee, Khmer Association of King County, Center for Career Alternatives and Denise Louie Farly Childhood Education Center are but a few of the social service agencies providing culturally appropriate services to the APA community. Numerous volunteers support the Cherry Blossom Festival, Northwest Asian American Theatre and Wing Luke Asian Museum that teach and showcase the rich APA culture and history. These organizations continue to flourish because a new generation of volunteers, just as committed as those who started the organizations, donate their time and resources to these important activities

Seattle has been fortunate that several APA community leaders have been willing to move their community work into the broader arena of public office. Starting with

1 5 5 5 9 Wing Luke who was elected to the Seattle City Council in the 1960's. many committed APA's have successfully run for public office here in the Puget Sound area. Most recently, Kip Tokuda, former president of the Seattle Chapter, was elected to the Washington State Legislature. Over the years, these officials pushed the system to address APA issues and concerns, influenced public policy, advocated for services to the community, and maybe most importantly, served as mentors and role models for our youth. Operating in highly visible roles, they have been willing to accept the criticisms, complaints and glare of public, scrutiny so our community will have powerful voices on our school boards and in city, county and state government. By successfully working in the public arena, APA officials have broken the stereotypes and have shown that APAs can be leaders in any setting.

While we all don't need to run for public office to positively impact our community, it is important that we do get involved. As Mother Teresa said in her Nobel Peace Prize acceptance speech, "It is not how much we do, but how much love we put in the action that we do.'

PEACE ON EART

We are lucky to have so many people around us to teach us about community service. Our families teach us the spirit of community service is not about personal gain, but is about taking responsibility for our communities and for each other. From our friends we learn that community service is not about providing charity to the poor but working for justice for all people. From our co-workers we learn that community service is about sharing, sharing our time, our wealth, our knowledge and our good fortune.

and yells of Issei farm workers gambling away a week's wages. I could almost smell the hot steam of udon [noodles] cooking in the corner restaurant or the pleasant welcome "irashai" as I stepped into the corner store for some candy or treat. This was the life of Del Rev's I-town.

Later that evening at the pot luck dinner, a Nisei woman told me she used to spend a lot of time upstairs in the Tokyo Club. My eyes widened in shock, her children were my best friends from Sunday words. Then another woman, a doctor, told me the same. And they both exchanged stories of the dancing and music and their sensei [teacher] from San Francisco.

"Sensei?" I gulped. "Yes, sensei," they repeated and asked each other if they remembered any of the dances. "Oh no," they both agreed, "we were too young."
"Young?" I asked.

Young dancers. That's what they were. Upstairs for a few weeks a year, a dance instructor from San Francisco came and

School days and I - - brought some Japanese : refused to believe her culture to this rural outpost called Del Rey. A group of young country girls would go upstairs and take a few lessons in a large room on one side of the building, the same side that some of the Tokyo Club and other store owners-lived with their families. The "ladies quarters" were on the other side of the building, far enough away that a question of morality was never after three or four years, things going bad."

Eventually I learned the building got sold and along with the rest of the the Japanese boom town of Del Rev. businesses folded. Yet for a while, the Tokyo

Mr. G. Sato, a Nisei: "My parents ran a boarding house and bootleggin' operation. They made sake... many a time I went to sleep with a gallon jug in my baby crib.

Oh everyone knew what was going on, more of a matter of who got found and who didn't get found. My dad got caught plenty of times but he knew the judge. Dad was one of the fellows that was educated. He went to school here and leamed to speak fairly fluent English. He'd tell the Judge, 'OK, put me in jail but you watch out for my "So family." the Judge says, 'OK ... then you just go home and stay out of trouble.

"And my Dad would go home and get the sake working again. Practically all the Japanese had their own

THE FIRE

There comes a time when it seems all the forces of history come together and explode, forever altering the course of development of a community. No one remembers the exact date or year, sometime in the mid 1920's. They just call it "the fire" that swept through Del Rey's Jtown, destroying half of the businesses and boarding houses and marking a turning point in history for this community. It had to be spectacular as a city block was consumed in a glorious blaze, an inferno that engulfed people's dreams and left only chaired remains the next moming.

Mr. N. Hiramoto, a Nisei: 'The whole block was burnt, the year was nineteen twenty uh three kana? Sort of around there. It started around midnight, eleven o'clock. The railroad track engineer, he saw that fire coming up, he blew the whistle and woke up everybody. It was around April or May kana? Nobody died but all wiped

Mr. R. Matsubara, a Kibei: "Yea, about 1927 maybe? That day a windy day you know, fire at nighttime. Everybody sleeping, some men usually play cards too late, so fire had to be late, maybe early morning, everybody sleeping.

"Where started? You know all town have boardwalk, you know like sidewalk, All wood... like front of boarding house. Maybe there kana? There fire started, in front of boarding house. Some one set fire, against the building I guess. Some hakujin [Caucasian]... that's what we figure, but nobody saw it. You know, there were other little fires before this big one, year or two before. First fires started but firemen put water and stop it.

"Some problem, hakujin and Japanese didn't get along too well. No fights but Japanese were lot of people but they don't go to hakujin stores. Lot of Japanese bachelors knew lapanese but they can't speak English you know. Business all here in Japan town. Those days Japanese town boom town you know and hakujin town just dead. Yea, not much businessyou know.

Mr. G. Sato, a Nisei: "My folk's boarding house went completely, they lost everything. We were on vacation when it happened, down in L.A. We came back and there was nothing left... the only thing left was dad had a great big safe. That's all I remember, I was 9 vears old. My folks didn't say anything. Nothing, just one of those things. Typical Japanese... nothing you can do about it." Half of I-town was destroyed, most of the boarding houses gone: With no places to live, these laborers left Del Rey, some went to other towns, others left to find shelter on the farms where they worked. With the loss of some businesses to draw customers, the rest of J-town gradually declined and closed its doors. The height of business development had been reached, the fire a turning point forever.

There always seems to be an etemal opportunist that stands out amid disaster, something that appears to be good that emerges out of the bad, a simple, innocent action following a calamity. Mr. G. Fujita, a Nisei, explained how the great fire provided him and lofs of other kids with a new adventure and opportunity: "That fire must have been in spring, there wasn't no rain. When we went there it was still smoldering. Not a cloud, a bright day.

"Del Rey was a gambling joint, the whole place had underground trenches all the way through. If they had a raid on this gambling house, they'd move to another house through these tunnels. You could never catch them, those Chinese

"I knew about these tunnels because right after the fire we were in there trying to scrape up the pennies and nickels and dimes. We were picking them up. We went there every day to look for money; burnt money too, all in there. We found quite a bit.

They didn't bury those tunnels for a long time, they had it open. My kids even remember it when we'd pass

Pass on the legacy of JACL this Christmas

Legacy of Generations. Kodomo no tame ni. For the sake of our children

In the past several months, I have heard these terms used countless times to describe JACL - or more appropriately - the future of JACL.

Yet, as one of the younger members of the organization, I find myself wondering whether we are truly committed to that goal. Sure, we talk about the so-called passing of the torch, but when I look at the membership numbers I see that's all it is. Talk.

Based on membership totals through September, 36 chapters had no youth of student members. Most had only a handful. The numbers are staggering. It's no wonder our membership is decreasing when most members are over the age of

The burden of passing on the torch does not simply fall on the young people of the National Youth/ Student Council which is working hard this biennium to create more programs for younger members.

It falls on each and every JACLer to pass on both the legacy of the JACL and the history of our culture. Have you told your children and grandchildren stories about the internment? Have you told them about the discrimination you felt when trying to rebuild your life after the war? Or the victory you won when redress passed?

Are your children members of the JACL? Are your grandchildren members

Before we say "kodomo no tame ni," let's make sure we mean it. This holiday season, passing on the legacy of JACL can be as easy as stuffing a gift JACL membership into the Christmas stocking.

Being a member of JACL is more than being part of a civil rights organization. It's being part of something that has shaped our identity, our voice. It's a forum for leadership development and scholarship opportunities. It's a place to meet new people.

In the next few months, the National Youth/Student Council will be working to develop further incentives to get involved. A mentor program will help hook up students with working professionals who can provide career tips and possible job of internship opportunities.

A National Youth/Student Conference next year will provide educational sessions on topics important to young people. Chapters and districts committed to starting solid youth programs will organize sports tournaments and social activities

At the NCWNP-CCDC-PSW Tridistrict conference, we hope to distribute a guide to chapters suggesting youth/student activities and how to build a program. But we can't do it without tho help of JACLers who are willing to pass on the Legacy of Generations

Talk is cheap. So is a youth/ student membership.

But the rewards can be priceless.

ifty years ago the small farming community of Seabrook in southern New Jersey began making a enique kind of American history. But it was this year that residents past and present of Seabrook and surroundings made sure in grand style their history would not be forgotten.

The weekend of October 9 and 10 saw the Seahrook 50th Year Celebration and the opening of the Seabrook Educational and Cultural Center, a small museum within the township municipal building that now primarily commemorates the experience of the 2,500 Japanese Americans who came to Seabrook from 1944 to 1946. They came upon their release from the World War 11 internment camps to work for Seabrook Farms, then the world's largest frozen foods operation, and they came for a fresh start in American life.

The museum dedication that Saturday, called the People's Inaugural, brought more than 650 people to the auditorium of the nearby middle school. Among the speakers were lack Seabrook, president/CEO of now-defunct Seabrook Farms during its peak years in the 1950s, and Michi Weglyn, author of the internment i camp history. "Years of Infamy."

camp history, "Years of Infamy."
A banquet Sunday night at a country club brought together 540 celebrants from 27 states. And from Osaka, Japan, came the Reverend Shingetsu Akahoshi. The former priest of the Seabrook Buddhist Temple was a speaker that night, as were New Jersey Secretary of Agriculture Arthur Brown and Seabrooker-made-good Seiki Murono, now a vice president of Chase Manhattan Bank out of San Francisco.

Both events had to be moved from their original locations due to a much greater than expected demand. And both larger venues were filled to capacity with those honoring Seabrook and their remarkable memories.

Elizabeth Garrison, of Bridgeton, New Jersey, worked at the war relocation center in Topaz, Utah, in the waning years of World War II, making sure people had jobs and housing lined up when they left. She befriended a woman who was a block mayor at the camp, and since 1945, when she left, Garrison has been corresponding with Masako Sano, majden name Mitsui.

A schoolteacher back in New Jersey, Garrison interviewed a young woman named Darlene Mitsui in 1954 for a babysitting job. She knew from Masako Mitsui, who was in California, that Masako had a brother in the area named James. "All she had was his name on a piece of paper, " recalled Darlene, whose married name is Mukoda. And when she went to paper and she said, "Is he any relation to you? "He's my dad."

"In fact," said Garrison, 4'm here tonight as his guest. I'm very honored to be his guest."

Misono Miller, also of Bridgeton, the nearest small city to Seabrook, said of the festivities: "I was surprised at how many people I remembered and what we remembered from our childhood."

Miller is president of the Seabrook chapter of the JACL, which has cosponsored the museum project. Formed in 1946, the Seabrook JACL chapter now has about 150 members. Miller is quick to remind that the two prime movers who made the museum a reality were SECC president and trustee Ellen Nakamura, of Elmer, New Jersey, and SECC project director John-Fuyuume, of Bridgeton.

Arid she said that if it hadn't been for the Seabrook Educational and Cultural Center, Seabrook's history may have hardly been preserved: "People haven't been aware. The museum is the first effort to make a permanent place for the history of Seabrook."

To make history, it also helps to make news. And Nakamura said that, although Seabrook has previously received major media attention, it was nothing near as intense as this year, with two new newspapers across the country, and then with dozens of media outlets, several of which were from Japan, represented at the 50th anniversary celebration.

Apart from a grant by the New Jersey Council for the Humanities, Fuyuume said little fundraising was needed for the project as artifacts and photographs were donated and services were volunteered.

For instance, the skilled services of four Seabrook alumni all now in California? Norman Furnio Ikeda, a nationally renowned museum designer, professional modelbuilder Bob Hasuike, who crafted a detailed of the Introduction and Overview, and update where needed.

A special thanks to Gary Mukai, director of SPICE at Stanford University, who provided detailed comments and suggestions which were added to the other comments provided by Joanne Iritani from the Florin Chapter, Mike Nakagawa from the Lodi Chapter, and Franklin Ng of Fresno. Contact has been made with representatives of the Japanese Latino group to draft factual and objective information and dates to be considered for inclusion in the revised version of the Curriculum Guide. This is being done as part of the JACL's support of the emergency resolution which was passed at the National Convention in Salt Lake

Because the material is unbound on threehole punched sheets we will probably print only those portions that are considered important this time around and substitute the revised sections into the Guide packets as needed. The revised pages will carry the date of the revision so the Guides can be kept current for everyone,

als who have already

especially the individu-purchased the Guide. While there is no set time line, it would be good to have the revisions completed and printed as soon as possible as more chapters appear to be promoting the Guide and others are ordering more for teacher workshops being planned in the near future.

If anyone has a comment about the Guide, please let me know as soon as possible.

Presentation planned for California Council

The California Council for the Social Studies has configmed that the JACL will have a one and half hour time slot at the state-wide convention to be held in Fresno from March 2 through 5,1995. The session will be some time on Thursday morning,

March 2 The workshop will focus, on the historical and Constitutional issues of the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II. This workshop will be directed at high school educators. The application offered at least four grade level target groups to choose from; the high school category seemed to be the most appropriate for the first-time presentation at the California Council for the Social Studies.

Thanks go to Izumi Taniguchi who contacted Mr. Marvin Awbrey, chairman of the Convention and to Shirley Mead-Mezzetta, Executive Secretary of the Council who sent me the application forms.

10'x10' model of Seabrook circa the late 1940s, linguistics professor Rei Noguchi, who wrote the text materials, and graphics designer Ken Sasaki.

Those four men met last month in Los Angeles to discuss further plans for the SECC, and at the top of their list was the hope that the many other ethnic groups who settled in Seabrook, such as the Estonians and Poles who fled the Soviets after World War II; will contribute their part of the Seabrook experience to the center, where they are now only marginally represented.

Ikeda, who now lives in Santa Barbara, Calif., explained: "The exhibit was designed to be changeable, so we're hoping that atter a couple years of preparation, the Estonians can do their story. The Japanese Americans are only part of the Seabrook story."

And he added that what nucle Seah-rook "a unique place" was that: "It was an urban community, in the way of the mix of people, in a rural setting—a multicultural community.

nity. Growing up in the community you don't realize that or appreciate that."

Miller noted that at the banquet some people also mentioned having another reunion five years from now. "I can't say whether it will be the last thing we ever do. But it was more to get together—it was more than nice."

HIGHWAY

(Any money raised over the cost of the signs will be donated to the National JACL).

To celebrate the memorial highway recognition of the Nisei units, Central California veterans are planning a commemorative banquet, scheduled for July 29, 1995 at Tornino's Banquet Hall in Fresno, California. The JACL Central California District Council is a co-sponsor of this event as well.

Anyone interested in purchasing the Fresno Kanojo raffle tickets, in attending the VFW banquet next July, or in receiving more information regarding the highway memorials can contact Patricia at the Central California Eegional Office at (209) 486-6815.
