U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno Keynotes Savonara Banquet

California Assemblyman Mike Honda greets Sayonara Banquet keynote speaker U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno.

MONTEREY, Calif.—U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno keynoted JACLs Sayonara Banquet July 1, capping off a distinguished week in which former Congressman Norman Mineta's nomination for U.S. man Mineta's nonmineuron io secretary of commerce was con-firmed, 20 Japanese American vet-erans of World War II were award-ed the Medal of Honor, and convened the Medal of Honor, and o tioneers from all over the country gathered for the close of the 36th biennium.

Reno, along with guest speakers
Mineta, Lon Hatamiya, secretary of the California Trade and Commerce Agency, and Paul Igasaki, vice chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), attended the event to share words of appreciation and wisdom.

Democracy, Reno said in her keynote address, as we have learned from those "who care so much, who fought so hard, who put their lives on the line," is a frail and fragile institution.

"We cannot forget that in the life-time of many of us," she said, "the government of the United States etched one awful scar across the face of liberty and interned more than 120,000 Japanese Americans in what has been rightly called one of the most sweeping and complete deprivation of rights in the 20th century.

"The Japanese American internment stands as a symbol that we cannot take democracy for granted, she said. We must use the creativity, the energy, the intellect for patriotism in this room to nurture and protect our democracy as nev-

"I know there are many people in younger levels of leadership, and if I can say anything to you, I hope your service in JACL inspires you to public service as much as it has inspired me."

And I see the young people here this evening who are using JACL as a forum for practicing democractic principles and learning the democratic process," said Honda, who has long championed the causes of Japanese and Asian Pacific Ameri-cans in the field of politics and public affairs.

Honda was instrumental sponsoring such legislation as AB 1915, the California Civil Liberties Public Education Fund, AJR 26 the reaffirmation that APAs not be the reathrmation that APAs not be falsely characterized, stereotyped or unfairly scrutinized in light of the Wen Ho Lee case, and AJR 27, which asked the Japanese govern-ment to issue an apology to former Korean sex slaves

Legacy Fund Distribution Staves Off Dues Increase

By MARTHA NAKAGAWA

The national JACL council's decision to adopt a moderate distribu-tion policy for the JACL Legacy Fund prevented membership dues from increasing as originally pro-posed in the 2001-2002 budget.

The national council came to its decision on the Legacy Fund distri bution policy following more than two hours of debate and examining three separate proposals.

It opted to adopt an amended version of a national board distribution policy as proposed by Alan Teruya from the Tri-Valley chapter, seconded by Alan Nishi of the seconded by Alan Nishi of the French Camp chapter. The nation-al council passed the motion with 75 yeses, 28 nos, and one split vote. The decision freed up roughly $180,000 to go towards JACLs op-erating budget under an income distribution formula adopted by a astribution formula adopted by a prior national council.

At issue was how to distribute roughly $5 million in capital gains from the Legacy Fund.

The Legacy Fund is roughly valued at $8 million. Of that $8 million, about $5 million is restricted because it is the total historic amount collected from donors. The remaining $3 million is the net appreciation of the fund, consisting ostly of capital gains.

Most recently, the national board retained the services of the law firm of Silk, Adler & Colvin, which found that the $3 million in capital gains is in fact considered "income" under California State law and California State law should be distributed because fund soliticitation materials had stated that earnings would be used to support JACL activities. The national council was thus

National Council Adds Aging Issues to Program for Action

By MARTHA NAKAGAWA

National JACL's Program tion (PFA) 2000-2002, which guides the organization until the next bi-ennium convention, sailed through the national council with little debate during their Saturday, July 1,

The national council accepted the current PFA committee's recom-mendation to create a standing PFA committee, and added a handful of priority issues under Section IV of JACL's goal to recognize the IV of JACL's goal to recognize the changing dynamics within the Japanese American community.

The motion to accept the PFA as rewritten was made by John Yamada from the Eden Township chap seconded by David Masuo fro the Alaska chapter. The motion car-ried, with all chapters voting in fa-vor of the motion except for three that voted against it and one split

Yamada was among those who advocated that JACL make the topic of aging a top priority under Sec-tion IV. "There's nothing in the PFA for older JACL members," said Ya-

He presented an amenda

which would "mandate that committees be formed in each district dedicated to the issues of aging, and that this mandate be carried out at e chapter level."

A brief discussion was held to clarify the rational for these amend-ments. The author of A6, Tsujimura ments. The author of A6, Tsujimura said since legal counsel is appointed by the president and subject to approval by the board, legal counsel should be reinoved by the same process. Currently, legal counsel can be removed by the president. The change will not affect the P.C. editorial chair, and no fiscal impact is expected. The motion to adopt was made by Ward, seconded by Lillian Kimura, EDC district governor. It passed with 99 yeaes, 4 nos and two split votes.

A lengthy de-bate ensued as to the relevancy of the proposed amendment. Itami spoke against the proposed amend-ment because he felt it was confus-ing and discouraged candidates from running from the floor. But Hugh Burleson, president of the from running from the floor. But Hugh Burleson, president of the Lake Washington chapter, spoke in flavor, saying it would allow dele-gates to have the same type of in-formation by the end of the first convention business day from floor nominated candidates as provided by the regular candidates. In re-sponse, Lillian Kimura, chair of the Nominations Committee, said there are already provisions to hardle Nominations Committee, said there are already provisions to handle floor-nominated candidates. The motion to adopt was made by David Masuo from the Alaska chapter, seconded by Sakamoto. The motion failed to pass.

A8: An amendment to the Bylaws Article I, Section 6 called for adding a new subsection G to allow the national board to recognize national supporting members "in any way that it determines to be appropriate, taking into account the nature of recognition to be provided and the cost to provide such recognition." Taujimura said the change is meant to honor the general JACL supporters such as the 1000 Club members. Sharon Ishii Jordan from the Omaha chapter opposed the proposed on grounds that a fiscal impact was not taken into account. Argument was also made that it should be the national board which alout the national board which should be given this authority. Ward moved to adopt, Masuo seconded. The motion failed for lack of garnering two-thirds of the votes (56 yeses, 31 nos, six splits).

A9: An amendment to the Bylawa, Article XIV, Section 1 would affect the current operations of the JACL. It proposed an appropriations increase from the current $5,000 or more to become "one percent of the total annual approved budget or more" to be the amount of unsubmitted expenditures, which will require a three-fourths approved of the chapters that voted at the national council session. Any unsubmitted expenditures under that amount can be used at the discretion of the national office.

that two percent was a significant amount in light of the fact that JACL's current approved annual budget was $2.5 million.

Sami Nakazono from the Arkansas chapter spoke out against the amendment, saying that most JACL programs don't even have a budget as big as $25,000 (one percent of $2.5 million) and feared that these expenditures may take funds away from other programs that had been approved by the national council. But Itami, who supported the amendment, said there are times when the national JACL needs the financial flexibility to move quickly. He gave the example that during his service as a national board member, they were faced with an immediate of the same of ber, they were faced with an imme-diate need to hire a lawyer to save the organization.

The motion to adopt was made by Hayashi, outgoing national sec-retary/treasurer, seconded by Ita-mi. The motion was first ruled to have passed following a card count, but a second roll call vote was held after Ward challenged the first rul-ing. The motion passed with 89 yeses, 12 nos and two split votes.

The Last Hurrah

UCH PUBLICITY of late has arisen over the question of whether the question of whether the so-called "Japanese American Creed" authored in 1940 by Mike M. Masaoka should be part of the inscriptions on the Nikkei memorial now under construction in our nation's capital. Those opposed to the creed and/or Mike's name appearing on the memorial wall con-tend that: (a) the thrust of the creed is obsequious and (b) that Mike allegedly collaborated with government authorities in the 1942 uprooting and confinement of Japanese Americans and their resident Issei parents. Not having any firsthand knowledge regarding the charge of "collaboration" (whatever that means), several months ago I got a copy of the 46-page so-called "Lim Report" ("Research Report Prepared for Presidential Select Committee on JACL Resolution #7" submitted in 1990 by Deborah R. Lim). nese Americans and their res-then intern in the office of a U.S. senator or member of the House. Also, I should concede that at Mike's behest I participated in a program in Arlington Cemetery where I (proudly) read the creed. Perhaps sharing some vignettes vis-a-vis Mike may help to provide some perspective.

WHILE SERVING on the na-tional JACL board, I had many occasions to interact with Mike Our discussions were on a candid basis. For example, I once shared with Mike and Masao W. Satow (JACL's longtime workhorse as JACL naionguine worknose as JACL na-tional director) my observation that whenever we Nikkei have a dinner, we engage in the ceremony of pledging allegiance to the flag. There's nothing wrong with that, in fact, it's commendable. But I noted the practice was observed only the practice was observed only when some non-member, such as the mayar and a few other politi-cos, were present. If it's only we Nikkei sitting down to eat, we don't bother with the pledge ceremony (unless, of course, it's a veterans get-together). We don't need to re assure ourselves of our loyalty and commitment to this, our country. To salute the flag to assure out-siders of our loyalty was demean-

There was another facet of JACL practice that dealt with selection of the "Nisei of the Biennium." it dawned on me that the judges were, again, outsiders. Moreover, it was noted that all such outsiders were invariably white. I could not recall any minority being invited to pass judgment upon us.

Which brings us back to the

IN THE COURSE of this epiphany, my focus dwelled upon the creed: a well-articulated, sensitively draffed, moving piece of writing which undoubtedly reflected the plight and aspirations of the Nikkei – at that point in our history. In the place of the word 'Japan-ese,' I substituted another racial group — say 'Irish' — and read the creed again. The starkness of the thrust came in bold relief. While the creed eloquently reflected the Niseis plight in the period pre- and post-1940, it was not the mantra post-1940, it was not the mantre for the future of Nikkei Americans During one of my discussions with Mike, I sought to convey this senti-ment to him. For me it was one of the most difficult discourses I ever engaged in with him. I never engaged in with him. I never brought the subject up again; our relationship continued so that one of his last acts was inviting me to step into the presidency of the legal entity established to erect a JA memorial in Washington, D.C.

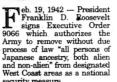

As he put it: "Our last Hurrah." In the next column, I hope to discuss Mike's expression of what he conceived to be the message of the memorial. B toasted those who risked their lives. Family members spoke with modesty about their brothers, fathers and grandfathers, about their humility and devotion to duty, and about how they had said very little about their war experiences because of the pain of remembering. Except for seven surviving veterans, most of the 22 medals were posthumous awards. And yet, Anita Korenaga, sister of Shinyei Nakamine, said, "I have felt their presence all throughout these cere-cionies." Added Glen Hajiro, nephew of Barney F. Hajiro, "I am humbled and in awe of what they went through."

The only Filipino American veteran who was awarded the Medal of Honor was Rudy Davila, 84, of Vista, Calif. Although he was unable to attend the community reception, he asked his son Roland to speak on his behalf. The younger Davila spoke of his father's humility and his regret that his wife wasn't there to receive the award with him. She passed away last year. ## Letters to the Editor

Veteran Angry Over Resister Resolution

By passing the Japanese American Resisters of Con-science resolution, JACL has insulted the veterans. The resolution states that these men answered "yes, yes" to both questions number 27 and 28. Question 27 clearly asks "would you be willing to serve in the armed forces of the United States." Having said yes, they later refused to serve, making them "draft

For taking this stand many were imprisoned by the federal government. They were later granted a full pardon by Presi-dent Truman. Wasn't that an dent Truman. Wasn't that an apology? They received redress money and a letter of apology from President Reagan. Wasn't that an apology? Constitutional rights were denied to all of us at that time. So why is JACL being made to apologize over events in which JACL had no control?

JACL used the record of the veterans to see the passage of the 1988 Civil Liberties Act. The veterans don't care about recogni-We are more concerned that JACL seems to be ignoring the fact that over 850 young boys were killed serving this nation at the same time the resisters were staging their protests. The last sleep the soldiers had was in a sleep the soldiers had was in a cold, muddy foxhole and their last meal was most likely a tasteless "K" ration. The resisters slept on a bed, protected from the elements and given a warm meal. At least we veterans will never forget our fallen comrades, even if JACL does. —

If as proposed for the 2002 convention there is a public ceremony to recognize the resisters, don't count on my attendance or support from the veterans. I have en a staunch supporter of JACL since my return from serv-ing this country, and have served in many capacities from the chapter level up. I have pins and plaques to prove it. However, I am ashamed to wear any of the pins that I once wore proudly and the plaques may end up in the

Resister Resolution Needed More Debate

The resisters' issue was one of the most controversial issues confronting JACL members in a long time. It seemed to me such an emotionally charged issue should have been handled with greater care by explaining to the participants that the specifics for the request and explanation of issues were fundamentally different from the issues previously debated in the media.

The discussion was so highly charged that there was a long line

charged that there was a long line of speakers, both standing and sitting, waiting to express their views when the chairperson, without any explanation, called for the vote and a decision on the controversy. It is customary that 'resolutions be read before the voters are asked to vote on the issue. And I believe, many in the audience were not aware of the changes and qualifications incorporated in the new articles stated in the information sheet.

The chairperson also did not mention the permissible option for an extension of the discussion time even though speakers were lined up waiting to speak

What is important to me and many others is that the resisters selected their choice of action and the others selected theirs. Some se the others selected theirs. It would be wise for the JACLers, who didn't live through the difficult pre-World War II years, to reevaluate their inflation of a non-issue.

Reader Pleased With Passage of Resolution

I am glad that the resolution on the "Resisters of Conscience" adopted, however painful it is for those who opposed its adoption. It is a fitting closure to a distressful vent in our Japanese American know that it is easy for me to say but it is time now to reach out to one another to reconcile and come together. With time and mutual understanding, the wound hopefully will heal and once again the JA community can together move forward in the years ahead.

Lastly, let us always remember, the basic causes of all of our pain were, as stated in the Report of the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians": racism, wartime hysteria and failure of political leadership. We must together continue to work to guard against those caus-es which can flare up again at any

A Thank-You From a Resister

The healing process within the Japanese American community took a giant step forward when the JACL passed the re-sister resolution at their Monterey conference.

Paul Tsuneishi is to be commended for his initiative and mended for his lindare and multi-year effort to bring closure to the resister question. To JACL and to Paul, I say, "Thank you, thank you very much." May JACL in its enviable position of being the sole organiza-tion within the JA community having the political capability and national network of chapters go forth and bring harmony and justice to our community and our nation.

To all members of JACL, Godspeed and best wishes.

Re: Barbie Dolls

The article, "We haven't Come a Long Way, Baby!" by Kristine Minami, hit an emotional cord with me. I am almost 16 years and I outgrew my Barbie doll days long ago. Still, I find rem-nants of bitterness from my childhood

I am Hapa. I find it particularly sad that when I was young I denied my Asian heritage and wished I could be the quintessential blond hair and blue eyed person that Barbie represents. As a teenager, I realized that I had been shutting out a very significant part of my life.

The article echoed all of my inner hostility that I was not able to accept in childhood. It makes me wonder about the state of our society. The images supplied to us are undoubtedly having a detrimental impact on the emotional stability and self-esteem of

On behalf of my family and friends, I took action in writing to the Mattel Corporation. No child should have to feel inadequacy because of a company's lack of racial sensitivity. If the Asian "Community has not expressed "Community has not expressed interest in a doll that reflects their ethnicity" then I am doing so new with the hope that my children and future generations can have images to identify with. Maybe one day a mixed ethnicity Barbie could be put into produc-tion."

On a related note, I read every sue of the Pacific Citizen. I find the varied viewpoints informa-tive and intriguing. I often relate to what is written and I am very proud of my culture. I find writers like Minami to be very inspirational role models. THANK
