Community Honors Alberta Lee

By CAROLINE AOYAGI

For more than nine months, as story after story appeared about jailed nuclear scientist Dr. Wen Ho Lee, it was his daughter Alherta who faced the cameras, answered the tough media tions and humanized her father's tory for the world to see.
At the age of 26, Alberta

the one who answered the call to fight the injustices faced by her father and for this, the Asian Pacific American community is proud of her.

On Sept. 28 the community had a chance to thank Alberta as she was honored with an image award at the Organization of Chinese Americans - Greater Los Angeles chapter's ninth annual Image Awards banquet at the Wilshire Grand Hotel. Lee rethe inspiration award while the community achieve-ment award was given to author Helen Zia and United Parcel Service (UPS) received the corporate achievement award:

"What I've done for my father, I really feel that any daughter would have done for their father," said Alberta. And, she emphasized, "what happened to me, could really have happened to any of you."

Forced into the spotlight as family spokesperson since her fa-ther's arrest in December 1999, Alberta has emerged as an outspoken community advocate in the fight against racial profiling.

"Racism should end. Racial profiling should end," said the UCLA graduate who currently lives in San Francisco. "We should come together as a com-munity and have a stronger

During her father's incarceration, Alberta and her family were restricted to weekly, hour-long visits. Not only were the conversations monitored by the FBI, she and her family were prohibit ed from speaking Chinese.

Disgusted with the injustice faced by her father, she turned to her community for support. She organized a National Day of Protest, garnering the support of a number of organizations, and spoke at rallies across the coun-

Holden rode with purpose, pumping her pedals hard along the course. She wore a deter-mined look each time she came around the start-finish area, curled over her handlebars and going hard. "Every race Mari did this year was focused to this time trial. said Sean Petty, director of the American team. "She went all out and that's what she had to do. In the time trial, the strongest riders were rewarded."

It was the second cycling medal for the United States, com-ing after Marty Nothstein's gold natch sprint.

AAs Say TV Ad Depicts Racial Stereotypes

By TRACY UBA

Rich Abajian, general manager of a car dealership in Las Vegas, says he did not intend to offend anyone of Asian descent.

Yet despite his intentions, a TV ad for Findlay Toyota in Hender-son's Valley Auto Mall continues to draw criticism from local Asian Americans, who say it perpetuates a racial stereotype.

It was in no way intended to stereotype Asian Americans," said Abajian. "We are a multicultural organization, we have every type of nationality from black to Chinese to Vietnamese to Middle Eastern and we value our em-

We're not trying to be role models, we're trying to sell cars," he added. "It's to try to entertain people. I've learned to laugh at myself and not take myself too seriously.

Mel Ozeki, publisher and editor of Ohana, a Las Vegas-based Hawaii travel and leisure magacame across the ad while watching the Olympics on the NBC affiliate station, KVBC Channel 3, and reported it to the Las Vegas JACL chapter.

"The first time it came on," Ozeki said, "I was kind of dumbfounded. The second time, my wife said, 'Hey, that's almost racist.' And I said, 'You're right."

Ozeki described the character as having a stereotyped accent and moving his mouth slower than the dialogue, as if to make fun of Asian films poorly dubbed into English.

It was a very disparaging, demeaning ad. For me, as well as others, it was the last few sec-onds of the ad when the Caucasian had an Asian person in a headlock," he said.

According to Abajian, the ad depicts a crime-fighting duo. depicts a crime-inguing duo, John Barr, who stars in all of Findlays ads, and Bitty Barr, played by a 5-year-old, con-fronting Evil High Price, an Asian villain and martial arts expert who is beaten up by the good guys by the end of the spot. The song "Kung Fu Fighting," changed to "High Price Fighting,"

It was intended to spoof the Jackie Chan, Bruce Lee, James Bond and Austin Powers movies, said Abajian.
The characters were played by several of the dealership's own employees. The Caucasian "hero" was played by sales manager John Barr, while the Asian "villain" was played by Tom Phan, another sales manager who is Vietnamese American. Thomas Wong, one of Findlay's sales con-sultants, supplied the voice of the villain.

"We did it to bring customers in. I don't see any problem with the ad when I did it. Some people look at it in a different way," said Phan, responding to the criticism from the AA community. "We're all Asian Americans, but some people take it in the wrong way.
"To those who were offended,

Civil Rights Groups, Including JACL, Want Independent, Bipartisan Probe of Lee Case

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.—Civil rights groups are calling for an independent, bipartisan investigation into government handling of the Wen Ho Lee case and whether the scientist was a tar-get of racial profiling.

Victor Hwang, managing attor-ney for the San Francisco-based Asian Law Caucus, said the groups are not satisfied with congressional inquiries so far. Hwang and representatives of two other groups wrote to Presi-dent Clinton last week asking for a more thorough and less politi-

We believe that a thorough we believe that a thorough public accounting of this incident is absolutely necessary," said the Sept. 25 letter signed by Hwang, Laura Kingsley Hong, president of the National Asian Pacific American Bar Association (NA-PABA), and Ted Wang, policy di-rector of Chinese for Affirmative Action (CAA).

Our concerns center around the impact this case has had on public trust and national security interests — specifically, the adverse effects it has had on our nation's research machine through the attrition of talented Asian Pacific Americans working in our labs who may feel unjustly scru-tinized because of their ethnic identities," they said.

Hwang said Sept. 29 that the congressional inquiries have been intent on "finger-pointing" and "nit-picking."

The congressional oversight panels should demand materials previously sought by the Lee de-fense that would show how the government singled out Lee for prosecution when others were not prosecuted, Hwang said. The defense dropped its petition for those materials as part of Lee's plea bargain.

We've talked to staff of both Republican and Democratic legislators on these committees. They should be asking for these documents," he said.

Some documents indicating racial profiling were released during pretrial motions. Those include statements by current and former government officials that profiling existed in the Lee after a guilty plea to one of 59 national security counts. Hwang said he believes more than ever that Lee was a victim of selective prosecution: Lee admitted down-loading restricted nuclear data to computer tape.

"I think the plea agreement is what in many ways convinced me that there was racial profil-ing," Hwang said, adding he be-

Gov. Davis Signs Bill to Outlaw Racial Profiling in California

California Gov. Gray Davis recently signed legislation (SB 1102) authored by Sen. Kevin Murray, DLos Angeles, that outlaws racial profiling in California.

Tascial profiling is abhorrent," said Davis, who last year ordered the only law enforcement agency under his authority, the California Highway Patrol, to keep records on the ethnicity of traffic stops, for three years. "This law outlaws racial profiling in California. In addition, it will ensure that every peace officer in California will receive training to predude the prac-peace officer in California will re-ceive training to preclude the prac-tice of racial profiling."

Noting that the legislation main-tains the voluntary nature of data collection, Davis said, "I believe that local mayors, supervisors and law enforcement officials, not the state, are the best positioned to de-cide whether or not to collect data.

state, are the best positioned to de-cide whether or not to collect data on racial profiling. And I strongly urge them to do so."

According to Davis, 60 percent of the state's law enforcement juris-dictions already collect racial pro-filing data. In addition, the City of Los Amples will seen justs the Los Angeles will soon join the ranks of law enforcement agencies collecting data on racial profiling. The new legislation directs the legislative analyst to conduct a study of the effectiveness of data collection by local jurisdictions underway in San Diego, San Jose and by the California Highway Patrol. Police training also will be studied. Recommendations of these studies will go to the legislature for review by July 1, 2002.

by July 1, 2002.

The bill also calls for the establishment of a five-member committee to advise the state on developing training that examines and prevents the practices and protocols of racial profiling by police officers. The committee, which includes three representatives appointed by Davis and one each by the assembly speaker and the senate committee on rules, will include representatives from community. representatives from ton-based advocacy groups, an them, the ACLU, NAACP

While there is no funding in the bill, the governor agreed to commit $7 million in next year's budget to $7 million in next year's budget to partially reimburse data collection costs incurred by cities and coun-ties not now gathering data on racial profiling.

These grants are in addition to $5 million included in this year's state budget to facilitate data col-lection by local law enforcement ju-risdictions.

2000 JACL SCHOLARSH

Dear JACL members

The 2000 National Scholarship Awards Program has come to a close. This year, we received nu-merous qualified applications and the decisions were difficult. Once again, the recipients are exceptional students and community members with promising futures. Please take a moment to look over the short biographies and note that this is only a small and note that this is only a small part of the outstanding work each winner has accomplished. Also, I would like to acknowledge every applicant because each stu-dent contributes to local schools and communities in invaluable ways.

I would like to thank the chapters for their hard work in disseminating information to local high schools and chapter members. The role that chapters play to get information out into the community is vital for the scholarship program to continue to thrive and grow.

Each year, the national JACL attempts to expand the number of scholarships available to stu-dents. This year, it is my privilege to announce two new scholar-ships that have been added to the National Scholarships and National wards Program.

The Railroad & Mine Workers Memorial Scholarship was estab-lished by the families of Japanese American railroad and mine workers to pay tribute to the lives of Issei and Nisei pioneers. This scholarship memorializes the story of these workers, who were fired from their jobs after the out-break of World War II, and their children's successful fight for recognition and justice decades later. This scholarship was created through the donations and dedication of over 30 individuals dedication of over 30 individuals and families.

Fumi Shimada, whose father worked for the Southern Pacific Railroad in Sparks, Nev., states, 'I think my father and all of the fired Issei and Nisei railroad and mine workers would be very proud to know that their govern-ment firing based on racial hysteria will make a difference in the medical profession 58-plus years later." This year's winner, Justin Endo, will attend medical school this fall. The JACL would like to thank the railroad and mine thank the railroad and mine worker families for highlighting an important piece of JA history. The Kenji Kajiwara Memorial Scholarship was established as a perpetual trust by Chibako Kajiwara in memory of her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Kajiwara deeply believed in the value and necessity of higher education to discover, encourage and develop the inher-ent potential of our youth. Through this scholarship, the Ka-jiwara family vision of higher education for youth will effect sever-al students' lives. This year's win-ner, David Eldred, will attend school in Japan this fall.

Thank you to the individuals and families who make this scholarship program possible. Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

As you have probably heard, the appointment of Ota and the other trustees to the OHA board came trustees to the OHA board came about through a chain of events that started with the lawsuit filed by a Big Island haole named Freddie Rice. The suit claimed that allowing only those who were of Hawaiian descent to vote in OHA descious accesses the contraction of the contraction iowing only those who were of Hawaiian descent to vote in OHA elections was unconstitutional, and demanded that he, as a native of Hawaii though of European descent, should be allowed to vote in OHA elections as well. The case ended up in the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled in favor of the plaintiff earlier this year. The riots of OHA go back to annexation, when 1.8 million acres of land that had once belonged to the Hawaiian monarchy or the government of the Kingdom of Hawaii, were ceded to the United States. At statehood in 1959, the U.S. transferred approximately 1.2 million acres to the new state of Hawaii for five trust purposes, including the betterment of conditions of Native Hawaiians. In 1978, the people of Hawaii ratified a constitutional amendment establishing OHA to effectuate that purpose of the ceded larks trust. The state legislature then designated 20 percent of the revenues from the trust to OHA for its programs. OHA uses that revenue to fund a wide range of programs benefiting native Hawaiians benefiting native Hawaiians.

As a result of the Rice decision, ne sitting OHA board had technically been elected improperly, since only those of Hawaiian descent had been allowed to elect them. All nine trustees then resigned office, and Gov. Ben Cayetano took it upon himself to appoint replacement trustees to serve out the last two trustees to serve out the last two months of the current term, before a new board is elected in November. He appointed three of the nine resigned trustees back to the board, while the other six were replaced. One of his replacement appointments was Ota, a Mauj businessman and 442nd veteran who is not of Hawsiian ancestry.

man and 442nd veteran who is not of Hawaiian ancestry.

As a Japanese American, I find the appointment of Ota troubling. This has nothing to do with Otas personal characteristics or qualifications. (Though his statement that he was "Hawaiian at heart" upon he was 'Hawaiian at heart' upon appointnent struck me as unwise and insensitive.) On one level, I find it troubling that any person not of Hawaiian descent be allowed to serve on this board, especially if he or she has not been elected.

I am also troubled that it would

I am also troubled that it would be a JA placed in the awkward po-sition of being the first non-Hawai-ian board member. It sets up Ota and the JA community as a whole as a scapegoat and target for those opposed to OHA elections being opposed to OHA elections being opened up to all residents of Hawaii. It could drive a wedge between the Hawaiian and JA communities: It also puts JAs in an awkward position if we oppose the change in composition of the OHA board, given Ota's ethnicity. We've seen this sort of thing before. In the 1960s, a JA was named possident of San Francisco State College when ethnic minority stu-dents went on strike in support of ethnic studies. JAs as part of the Nisei Farmers League (NFL) were put at the forefront in mainstream attacks on farm worker labor orga-nization in the 1970s, a practice which I'm told still continues. It's not hard to think of other exam-ples. In each case, JAs may derive some small benefit in their middleman minority role, but end up tak-ing a lot of heat, while a wedge is driven between us and other ethnic minority groups.

Ota's appointment — which is after all for just two months — also takes attention away from what could be a much more significant could be a much more significant long term development triggered by the Rice decision: the so-called Akaka bill, whose fate will probably be decided by the time you read this. The bill, which would grant federal recognition to Hawaiians as a native people and would also-presumably restore the control of OHA and other organizations to Hawaiian hands, has been approved by the House as of this writing, and is being considered by the Senate. The JACL adopted a resolution at our last convention suplution at our last convention sup-porting the general provisions of the bill, and JACL has been active in supporting the bill.

As JAs, I think it would be shortsighted to laud Ota's appointment sighted to laud Ota's appointment as a sign of progress given the larger picture. The middleman role is a precarious one. Our long term interests would be much better served in supporting the movement for Hawaiian self-determination, as opposed to short term political gain.

f we were to make an asse ment of where we are on our Lcivil rights agenda four months after convention this months after convention time past July, I think most JACL members would feel positive and optimistic, recognizing that there has definitely been forward momentum on our priority issues.

I know I feel that way. We have seen favorable developments on several of our resolutions — the legislation for federal recognition Native Hawaiians' political status is seeing action and posi-tive reactions on the Hill; Bill Lann Lee has been formally named and sworn in as the assis tant attorney general for civil rights; stronger hate crimes legislation has been endorsed with a favorable vote in both the Senate and the House; the Hon. Norman Y. Mineta has added another first to his resume as the secretary of commerce; and Dr. Wen Ho Lee has been released

That's pretty good progress for n reality, there is no such thing as a good hate crime. After all, how could an event that brings elings of fear, alien and embarrassment be good?

Hate crimes stem from ignorance, a lack of knowledge. I now know that I too bear ignorance

I'm not saying that JACL's work on our resolutions is complete (it's not), nor am I saying that JACI, can take the credit for what has happened (we can't). I'm saying regardless of our indi-vidual or collective roles in what has happened since July, APA ishas happened since July, ArA issues are getting addressed, and that's an encouraging trend.

However, we do have some unfinished business.

Amid the scramble to push for stronger hate crimes legislation and political status for Native Hawaiians, etc., it would be easy to relegate older legislative prior ities to the backs of our brains, but we cannot let this happen. So here's a reminder: the White House budget request to preserve the internment camps is still on the table.

This initiative received $4.3 million in funding from the House — thanks to Jerry Lewis and Jim Kolbe. On the Senate took part in the Diversity March which was supported by, among others, the mayor and city council, local law enforcement, local media and Ferndale High School sturequest, and there is no reason why — especially on the Senate side — the funding amounts can't be pushed up. There's no reason why this request shouldn't re-ceive the full $4.8 million.

We need to remind our mem-bers and senators that we have not forgotten about the intern-ment camps, and neither should they. Please contact your senators they. Please contact your senators and representatives ASAP to urge them to support the full $4.8 mil-lion budget request to preserve the internment camps. This initiative is not just about our history as Americans; it's also about our future. ■

This story bears a familiar start for many of us, but much to my delight, had an unfamiliar ending. Ferndale, Wash. is a small, rural town composed of 8,000 people.

With such a small population of people of color, Ferndale might have permitted such an incident to repeat itself by labeling it an ab-normality that does not pertain to the majority of its citizens.

the majority of its citizens.

However, Ferndale did quite the contrary. Taking a strong stance against the hate crime, the Ferndale City Council unanimously passed a proclamation declaring the city a "hate-free zone" in the council meeting immediately following the incident. Stating that the city would not tolerate discrimination of any kind, against anyone, a powerful message was sent.

Citizens of the community quickly followed by initiating and participating in events to deter any future incidents. A community any future incidents, A community fund was started to apprehend the person who had posted a racist note in the locker of the Ferndale High School student. Upon first hearing about this incident, I focused solely on the hateful act, rather than on the compassionate, loving behavior that was used to fight the ignorance. I underestimated what people could do, especially in a loca tion with a significantly smaller amount of people of color. However, I have learned. I strongly urge you to learn from Ferndale too. We must use Ferndale as an example of how to com-bat hate and how to educate. We must acknowledge that any community can fight hate, regardless of its composition.

Furthermore, we must realize that we can take an offensive stance to deter hate crimes, instead of always being on the defense crimes. fense, simply reacting to incidents this," continued Zia, "it is seeing Alberta set such a strong example as well as waking up the rest of us." Ismael Ileto, brother of slain postal worker Joseph Ileto, and an activist against hate crimes, presented Alberta with her inspiration award. Ileto thanked Alberta for taking on the role of family spokesperson and having the courage to humanize her father's

"You're an inspiration to us," he said. "We (the Ileto family) know how much courage it takes to speak out for justice."

Colleen Seto, president of the OCA-GLA chapter, called the recent release of Wen Ho Lee a victory for APAs but warned that the fight against racism and racial profiling

"We've been here for over a hun-dred years. But because of our outwardly appearance we're still seen foreigners and are easily target ," she said. ed.

Seto encouraged community members to write letters to President Clinton asking for a full inves-tigation into the handling of Lees case and a presidential pardon for the scientist. In addition, OCA will now have an internship in honor of Dr Wen Ho Lee

Dr. Wen Ho Lee.
Although thankful for the award, Alberta described the honor as "bittersweet." Now she just wants to take time out for herself, 'to discover who Alberta Lee is again and that she's not just Wen Ho Lee's daughter."
Alberta is now planning a back-

Alberta is now planning a back-packing trip through Europe and reported that her father is doing well. He recently caught a 17-inch rainbow trout on one of his fishing trips and has managed to plant two beds of his garden again.

Although the Lee family still has

Although the Lee family still has to wait for the congressional hearings to be over and Lee himself will be interviewed once again, they are hopeful that the end is near.

"I'm so thankful for all the support we've gotten and all the help we've gotten," said Alberta. "It's been tremendous."
