PRIME MINISTER SHINZO ABE MAKES HISTORIC U.S. VISIT
May is Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month. The roots of this national observance were cultivated through the efforts of Rep. Frank Horton and such Japanese American icons as Rep. Norman Mineta, Sen. Daniel Inouye and Sen. Spark Matsunaga. The month of May was chosen in recognition of the fact that it was the first month that Japanese immigrants began to come across the United States in 1843.

Communities across the nation are celebrating Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month with festivities, food, art, music, performances, dialogues and much more. Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month is all about our shared collective heritage and the customs and connections that define our multicultural identity, whether Japanese, Chinese, Hawaiian, Samoan, Korean, Taiwanese, Filipino or any of the other amazing cultures along the APA spectrum.

The Pacific Citizen is ahuge part of our Japanese and Japanese American heritage. Since 1929, the P.C. has informed, inspired and advocated for our Issei, Nisei and Sansei ancestors. The P.C. staff demonstrates with every issue of this publication their heartfelt commitment to producing a quality product that continues the traditions of journalistic excellence and service to the Japanese-American community. The P.C. has forged ahead against all odds to emerge better and stronger than ever. With a new and improved online portal to extend its reach beyond the printed page, the P.C. is well-positioned to reach the next level of excellence.

Have you seen the commercial for one of those online genealogy subscription websites where customers excitedly share how they clicked on a family member’s name and discovered a new “leaf” in their family tree? I love their sense of wonder and excitement discovering a parent’s name included on a census record or a grandparent’s name listed on a ship’s manifest. The P.C. is our family tree. Every issue is like one of those leaves, leading to discovery of history remembered and new history in the process of being written.

Take this opportunity during Asian-Pacific American Heritage Month to support the P.C.’s Spring Campaign. Contribute to the campaign in the name of a family member past, present and especially future. By sharing the P.C. with others in your family tree through a gift contribution and subscription, you are extending the story of the wider Japanese-American community for generations to come.

Sincerely,

Robert Barton

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Mike Masaoka Remembered

Dear Editor,

Mike Masaoka will be honored at the Suyoan Banquet during the 2015 JACL Convention in Las Vegas. He would have been 108 years old this year. He passed away in 1991, but his efforts — to show Japanese American loyalty during World War II, to create the 442nd Regimental Combat Team and to enable Issei to become American citizens — continue to benefit all of us.

The tribute to Mike Masaoka will be an opportunity for newer JACL members to learn what he and other JACL leaders accomplished so that JACL can make the claim that “JACL is the oldest and largest Asian American civil rights organization in the United States.” JACL would not have survived during World War II without the dedicated work of Masaoka and other pioneer JACL leaders. Their efforts fought overt prejudice and enabled Japanese Americans to regain their place in America and to look up their Japanese heritage with pride.

Mike Masaoka and my father, Tei Yamada, are my role models. By their example, they taught me the importance of giving back to the community. Mike encouraged my interest in JACL when I moved to the Washington, D.C., area.

He remained my mentor, motivator and inspirational leader as I became involved in activities to preserve the legacy created by Japanese Americans during World War II.

Mike was a professional career and work in the community. As an avid sports fan, he bought the Lodi Crushers, the one important lesson he taught me is “to think outside the box” in both my professional career and work in the community. As an avid sports fan, he bought the Lodi Crushers, becoming the first Japanese American to own a professional baseball team. With his ownership of a Class A California League baseball team and his participation in civic organizations, he showed his generosity in support of the community.

Come to Las Vegas and join JACL in honoring Mike Masaoka and his accomplishments.

Sincerely,

Gerald Yamada
Vienna, Va.

Your donations will help build and preserve a cohesive library of the Pacific Citizen to educate future generations.

A MOTHER’S TAKE

SERENDIPITY

By Marsha Aizumi

Often the most beautiful gifts we receive happen by chance. I believe these gifts happen because we are giving with no expectation of return — we are sharing our hearts unselfishly. Serendipity is defined as “the occurrence and development of events by chance in a happy or beneficial way.” Here is a wonderful example.

At the beginning of May, five of us representing PFLAG San Gabriel Valley Asian Pacific Islanders (API) traveled to the UC Santa Barbara campus for a Queer People of Color conference. We were there to do a panel workshop called “Family: An Asian American Pacific Islander LGBTQ Perspective,” which looked into the challenges and ways our families have navigated this journey of coming out.

It has been difficult for all of us, and some of us are still faced with challenges. As the first and only API chapter within PFLAG, a national organization that supports parents, family, and friends of LGBTQ (lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer) individuals, we try to be a visible face and voice for the API Community.

One of our panelists, the aunt of a transgender nephew, had never spoken in front of an audience like this before. Alex was visibly nervous. In fact, she forced her daughter to come with her on the four-hour roundtrip drive, so she would not be alone.

When Alex walked into the area where the conference was taking place, she saw about 300 chairs set up for the lunch keynote program. She immediately reacted and said, “I hope that isn’t where we are speaking, because if it is, I can’t do it!” I assured her that we would be in a smaller room, so she didn’t have to worry.

After lunch, we walked into our assigned classroom. It had about 40 chairs set up, and I could see Alex was less nervous by the number of chairs, but more nervous by the workshop time drawing near. API young people began to flow in. Three Vietnamese mothers of LGBTQ individuals from Vietnamese Rainbow of Orange County (VROC) also joined us. In the end, we probably had about 35 people.

The workshop began by each of us sharing our story: our families, our challenges and our positive experiences. When Alex began, her voice was quivering. Her anxiety was palpable, and so as the moderator, I interjected that this was the first time Alex was doing something like this and she needed our support.

The audience began to clap for her, appreciating the courage, the authenticity and the generosity of this aunt. Ironically, she had come to support her nephew and these LGBTQ young people, but in this moment, they were supporting her.

CHAPTER SPOTLIGHT: San Benito County

Highlighting the 80th anniversary of the founding of the JACL Chapter

By David Unruhe

The year 2015 marks the 80th anniversary of the founding of the San Benito County Chapter of JACL. The chapter is centered in the Old California Mission town named after St. John the Baptist, better known as San Juan Bautista. San Benito is one of the smallest counties in California, both in terms of size and population, and it is easily overshadowed by adjacent Monterey and Santa Clara Counties. There are only two cities in the county, San Juan Bautista and Hollister, the county seat. It is primarily a farming county.

The history of Japanese Americans in San Benito County is a familiar one. The Issei began arriving in the county in the early part of the 20th century as agricultural workers. Eventually, they married and began families, and then bought farms in the name of their Nisei children.

The peak years for the San Benito Japanese American community were from about 1920-41, when farm ownership was at its highest and there was a Nisei baby boom. In the middle of this time, in the depths of the Great Depression, a need for a community center was recognized. Land on the edge of San Juan Bautista was bought, and the Japanese American Community Hall was built for about $26,000. Such an undertaking could have only been accomplished by the skill and labor of the Issei, as most Nisei were not old enough to assist with the project.

The hall opened in 1935, the same year that some of the older Nisei founded the JACL chapter. For the next six years, the hall served as a JACL office and meeting place. San Juan Howakai/Watsonville Buddhist Church, San Benito Gakuen, in addition to various other uses, including a theater for samurai movies. Estimates vary as to the size of the community at any given time, but at its peak, Japanese Americans represented about 20 percent of the total population of the county, with the number closer to 30 percent in the school system.

And then it was all over. Just when it seemed that the country was climbing out of the Great Depression, Japan attacked Pearl Harbor in 1941, and then all of the Issei and Nisei looked like the enemy. Although the Japanese Americans in San Benito County didn’t experience the extreme hatred and overt racism as those in other parts of the state, the hostility was there just the same. By late spring 1942, “all persons of Japanese ancestry” had been forcibly removed from their homes and farms, first to “assembly centers” and later to incarceration centers. The San Benito JACL Chapter continued to function while at Poston, Ariz.

When the war was over, the chapter hosted the May meeting of the NCWNP. San Benito County didn’t experience the extreme hatred and overt racism as those in other parts of the state, the hostility was there just the same. By late spring 1942, “all persons of Japanese ancestry” had been forcibly removed from their homes and farms, first to “assembly centers” and later to incarceration centers. The San Benito JACL Chapter continued to function while at Poston, Ariz.

Former L.A. County Undersheriff Paul Tanaka Indicted for Obstruction

LOS ANGELES — Paul Tanaka, 56, the former Los Angeles County undersheriff and current mayor of Gardena, Calif., surrendered to authorities May 14 after being indicted by a federal grand jury for allegedly obstructing an FBI investigation into corruption and brutality in the L.A. County jails.

The indictment reads a string of orders that Tanaka and former LASD Capt. Tom Carey, who was also indicted, gave during summer 2011 to sheriff’s deputies working to conceal from FBI agents the location of an inmate the FBI was using as an informant.

As undersheriff, Tanaka was the second-highest-ranking official in the department. He was unsuccessfully run for sheriff in 2014 and was forced out of the department in 2013 by Baca over criticism regarding the abuse scandal. He was re-elected to four-year terms as mayor of Gardena in 2009 and 2013. He is expected to take a leave of absence.

Tanaka and Carey face charges of conspiracy and obstruction of justice. If convicted, the charges could send both men to federal prison for years. Tanaka entered a not-guilty plea in court May 14.

Mitsuye Endo Recommended for the Presidential Medal of Freedom

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Brian Schatz of Hawaii sent a letter to President Barack Obama on May 11 urging him to award the Presidential Medal of Freedom to Mitsuye Endo.

After being forcibly uprooted from her Sacramento home and incarcerated during World War II, Endo challenged her detention in a court case that was eventually heard by the U.S. Supreme Court. Despite a government offer to leave camp as long as she did not return to the West Coast, Endo voluntarily chose to remain incarcerated so that her case would continue through the court system. On Dec. 17, 1944, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously in her favor, finding that the U.S. government could not detain concededly loyal citizens without charges. The ruling made an immediate impact and allowed Japanese Americans to leave the camps and begin returning to their West Coast homes only two weeks later on Jan. 2, 1945.

JACL passed a resolution in support of Endo’s nomination at the 2014 National Convention.

First Annual Asian Heritage Jazz Festival Set for June

Versatile pop/soul/contemporary jazz saxophonist Michael Paulo (pictured) is bringing the first annual Asian Heritage Jazz Festival, presented by Apaulo Music Prods., on June 20 to the Japanese American Cultural and Community Center in Los Angeles.

“With my lifelong passion for jazz, I want to host an event unlike any other that focuses on the Asian culture embracing an American art form, jazz,” said Paulo, who has also produced the Temecula Wine and Music Festival for the past 10 years. “As America is a melting pot of cultures, it is important in the assimilation of those cultures to embrace things that are uniquely American. It is through this that we can become a part of the mainstream culture. Also, in most instances, Asian Americans aren’t readily associated with jazz. The festival aims to change that perception by fostering as many of the best Asian jazz performers here that we can assemble. We will have the biggest lineup of Asian jazz artists ever in the U.S.”

Featured artists include Ming Free man (keyboards), David Inamine (bass), Danny Jung (saxophone), Jeff Kashiuwa (saxophone), June Kuramoto (vocals), Rene Paulo (piano), Benny Rietveld (bass), Fred Schreuders (guitar), Kemeya Seward (vocalist) and Pauline Wilson (vocalist).

In addition, the festival will provide a platform to promote and nurture young artists who deserve wider recognition but have been unable to break into the mainstream world.

“We can also generate opportunities for young up-and-coming talent to gain exposure, play and be inspired by the veteran performers who have had international success. This is what makes us different than the many other jazz festival events in Southern California. I am committed to its success and very excited to launch this event,” said Paulo.

The festival will be held at the JACCC’s outdoor main stage.

‘WOMEN OF THE YEAR’ HONORED

Five outstanding community leaders are recognized by the Downtown JACL and the Japanese Women’s Society of Southern California

By George Toshi Johnston

The audience response part of Rev. Karen Fay Ramos-Young’s invocation went: “We gather to celebrate life.” But with a few changes, it could have been, “We gather to celebrate the 2015 Women of the Year” — and it would have worked just fine.

The May 3 luncheon, held at the Quiet Cannon in Montebello, Calif., and produced by the Downtown Los Angeles Chapter of JACL and the Japanese Women’s Society of Southern California, recognized five women and their individual accumulated years of efforts, leadership and service within Southern California’s Japanese American community. This year marked the award’s 22nd anniversary.

As Downtown L.A. Chapter President George Kita announced the event’s honorees — Kimiko Goya (Okinawa Association of American), Yoshi Hirata (Keiro Retirement Home, Japanese Community Pioneer Center), Martha Nishinaka (Centenary United Methodist Church), Pearl Omiya (East San Gabriel Valley Japanese Community Center) and Nancy Takayama (San Fernando Valley JACL, San Fernando Valley Japanese Community Center) — their parts in the audience of more than 350 broke out in raucous cheers and applause that almost rivaled the 3.8 magnitude earthquake that shook the area a few hours earlier that morning.

Regarding the day’s honorees, Kay Inose, president of the 111-year-old Japanese Women’s Society of Southern California, said, “I want to thank them for their selfless dedication and service to our Japanese American community.”

Introducing the Ginowan, Okinawa Prefecture-born Goya was her daughter, Diane Koishi. Goya worked as a Japanese school teacher for 25 years before retiring in 2011. She has volunteered in the community in many capacities, among them president of the Okinawa Association of America, in addition to overseeing the collection of material and monetary donations for victims of the 2011 tsunami disaster in Japan.

Yoshiko Yamaguchi, speaking in Japanese, introduced the next award winner, the Yokokawa, Kanagawa Prefecture-born Hirata. Hirata retired from JFC Los Angeles in 2000 after working for the company for 17 years. She also has volunteered at Keiro Retirement Home and is currently a member of the board, treasurer and office worker for the Japanese Community Pioneer Center.

The next awardee, Quito, Ecuador, native Martha Nishinaka, was introduced by her niece, 2014 Nisei Week Queen Tori Nishikawa. For more than 10 years, Nishinaka has served as president of the Women at Centenary United Methodist Church in Los Angeles, in addition to working as an office manager and director of operations for Paget Sheeter, M.D. At Centenary she plays a key role in leading the service and fellowship group’s fundraising activities and efforts to improve the lives of all those in the community.

West Covina, Calif.-born Omiya was introduced before receiving her award by Glenn Nakatani, president of the East San Gabriel Valley Japanese Community Center, where she oversees its operations, finances, programs and services. Under her guidance, she provides leadership to more than 25 different programs and classes that are offered at the center, in addition to overseeing a dozen annual events that serve the community. Prior to joining the ESGVJCC, she taught English in Japan through the JET Programme.

Nancy Takayama, the afternoon’s final awardee, was introduced by fellow San Fernando JACLer Jean-Paul “JP” deCruzman. Takayama has served as president of the San Fernando Valley JACL as well as a board member of the JACL Pacific Southwest District before working full time for PSWD JACL in 2012. She also is a member of the Little Tokyo Business Assn. and is involved in the Little Tokyo Community Council. Her passion for cultivating awareness of Japanese American history through preservation advocacy efforts is a driving force behind her volunteer efforts.

In addition to the award — an individualized plaque with a built-in clock — each honoree also received communications from the California State Assembly, Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti and the Los Angeles County Supervisors.

The benediction was performed by Rev. Mark M. Nakagawa of Centenary United Methodist Church.

Serving on the luncheon committee were Kay Inose, Toshie Kawaguchi, George Kita, Atsuko Lee, Machiko Matsuura, Rodney Nakada, Nancy Nix, Tomoko Sakurai, Kitty Sankey, Patricia Sookipt, Amy Tambor, Yoshiko Yamaguchi and Kyoko Yoshinaga.

FULL SPEED AHEAD

Buoyed by corporate sponsorships and successful fundraising efforts, the financial outlook for this year’s JACL National Convention looks bright.

By P.C. Staff

The JACL National Board convened Feb. 7 in San Francisco at its national headquarters for its final meeting before heading into this year’s annual convention in Las Vegas next.

Thanks in part to successful sponsorships and fundraising efforts to date, the upcoming National Convention, set for July 13-15 at the Monte Carlo Hotel, has already earned enough revenue to sustain itself.

"It's looking really good," said Toshiko Haraguchi, JACL fund development manager of the chapter aid and convention partners secured thus far. "I'm getting updated numbers as more are trickling in, and I'm expecting the ads to continue to come through."

Major sponsors include AARP, Comcast, NEC Universal, JAI Health Insurance Services, Southwest Airlines and State Farm.

The National Board also discussed the events surrounding last month's conflict over the sale of the largest collection of Japanese American incarceration camp art at Fago Arts and Auction Center in New Jersey and collection seller John Ryan pulled the sale after mounting pressure and protest from the Japanese American community Curator and folk artist collector Allen Hendershott-Eaton began accumulating the 450 pieces of art during his tour of the incarceration camps during World War II as part of an exhibit he had hoped to display in conjunction with his book, "Beauty Behind Barbed Wire: The Arts of the Japanese in Our War Relocation Camps."

"What we should do now as a board is find a way to better set our movements like these," urged Tisha Abe, ex officio member. Abe was instrumental during the protest and was featured in several news outlets, including a New York Times announcement about the Fago Auction's halt of the sale.

At the time of the protests, the JACL National Board, communicating through email exchanges and phone conferences, was unable to respond to the large outcry as fast as members had wanted.

"I'm so sorry," executive director Friscia Ouchida said. "I was unable to do so during the protests."

"Historical preservation is part of our mission," Ouchida shared with the board. "What I saw was that we tried to take action on a very specific thing, and I was never allowed to intervene. Currently, the executive director does not have the authority to move forward on behalf of the JACL without unanimous agreement from the National Board."

"Being absent was a statement," Ouchida said. "We need some kind of resolution that would act under the Program of Action."

JACL also did not respond to the Heart Mountain Wyoming Foundation civil action complaint against Fago Arts. The complaint was released publicly but was never officially filed.

A JACL committee is expected to form in order to draft a resolution that would allow the executive director the power to intervene on behalf of the board. Details of the resolution's specifics are expected to be released before the National Convention, where it will be put to the National Council for approval.

"The events surrounding the auction exposed some of the processes that we need to address and change," JACL National President David Lee said. "We didn't do as well as we could have. But we could have done better. As a board, we can institutionalize better steps in preparing for future matters like this."

Special acknowledgment was given to the NCWNF Regional Director Patty Wall and Abe for their work and dedication in handling the ingathering of media inquiries and community action concerning the auction.

Ouchida's report also included a push to remove California's AB 246 legislation, which will amend the existing hate crime law for peace officers.

Other efforts from the national office include the Schatz Resolution concerning the National Museum of American People and native Hawaiian colonials. The "Find Your Park" campaign, changes in the travel reimbursement policy for staff and officials and a resolution for new account signatures.
Prime Minister Shinzo Abe visits the U.S.

JACL members are invited by the White House to be a part of the historic weeklong visit.

By JACL National Staff

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and his wife, Akie, arrived in Washington, D.C., on April 28 for their historic visit to the United States. Dozens of JACL members were invited by the White House to attend the official State Arrival Ceremony for the prime minister on the South Lawn of the presidential residence. Chip Larson, JACL vp of planning and development, traveled with his wife, Seto, from Portland, Ore., to join the well-wishers.

"My wife, Seto, and I were honored to be part of this historic ceremony," said Larson. "Both President Obama and Prime Minister Abe eloquently highlighted in their speeches the lasting and essential bonds that Japan and the United States enjoy, and it's heartwarming to learn that JACL has had an important role in promoting and maintaining many important elements of that bond."

At the ceremony, President Barack Obama remarked that the prime minister's visit was a celebration of "the best of friendship that binds our peoples," and he referred to "growing up in Hawaii ... home to so many proud Japanese Americans." JACL Executive Director Priscilla Ouchida, and her daughter, Elissa Ouchida, attended the official State Dinner held on April 28 in the East Room of the White House.

Two hundred guests, including former JACL National Director Floyd Mura, Hawaii Gov. David Ige, U.S. Ambassador to Japan Caroline Kennedy and U.S. Sen. Mazie Hirono, enjoyed the meal prepared by White House chefs and guest chef Masaharu Morimoto. Invites were the first to use the newly delivered White House china dinnerware featuring a Kusama-inspired design by First Lady Michelle Obama. The elegant dinner was highlighted with ceiling-hugging floral arrangements of cherry blossom branches, prairie and carnivorous and a simple pair of cherry blossom-decorated charcuterie at each place setting. Stars from "Jenny Boys," which received an award for best foreign film in Japan, performed for the evening's guests.

Ouchida remarked, "The visit was as much about the friendship between Japan and Japanese Americans as about the close ties that exist between the U.S. and Japan. At every level, there was an effort to ensure Japanese American participation."

Sen. Hirono of Hawaii provided members of JACL with highly coveted tickets to Abe's address to a joint session of the United States Congress, the first by a leader from Japan. JACL Legal Counsel Brandon Mita, Washington, D.C., Chapter President John Tohe, former National President Floyd Shimomura, David I Image Fellow Craig Shimizu, Jamie Fadden and GeorgetteFundamenter-Martinez were among those who witnessed the speech.

Abe delivered his speech in English, and he acknowledged the late Sen. Daniel Inouye, who he said "symbolized the honor and achievements of Japanese Americans." Sprinkled with humor and stories, Abe also spoke of deep remorse over World War II, stating, "Our actions brought suffering to the peoples in Asian countries. We must not start from that." The prime minister also cited previous statements with a pledge to "uphold the views expressed by the previous prime ministers in this regard." He offered, "My dear friends, on behalf of Japan and the Japanese people, I offer with profound regret my solemn condolences to the souls of all American people that were killed during World War II.""Shinzo Abe...

"I was an honor to attend the dinner held in honor of His Excellency, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and Mrs. Abe. The event was exhilarating. Prime Minister Abe is charismatic and has a great sense of humor. It was such an honor to meet Prime Minister Abe at the dinner. I was able to thank him for his leadership and commitment to U.S.-Japan relations and for taking time to meet with the community."

"To know that Prime Minister Abe spoke of change to "empower women so they can get more actively engaged in all walks of life" was especially meaningful," Sawamura continued. "Japan aims to increase the proportion of women in management positions to 30 percent by 2020. As a member of the Japan-sponsored 2007 Japanese American Leadership Delegation, I am excited that both the U.S. and Japan will continue to strengthen and actively promote policies to create more inclusive environments, including efforts to increase student research and legislation exchanges." Prime Minister Abe called the U.S.-Japan alliance "an alliance of hope." I am hopeful that our communities will continue to join together toward an alliance of hope."

HIBAKUSHASHA VISIT PHILADELPHIA

Noriko Sakashita, Kazuhiro Yoshimura and Shigemitsu Tanaka have devoted their lives to telling their personal A-bomb stories in order to educate the public about the dangers of nuclear weapons.

By Hiroshi Nishikawa and Toshi Abe

Three hibakusha (victims of the atomic bombings on Hiroshima and Nagasaki) stopped in Philadelphia on April 29 to share their personal World War II experiences and then continued on their way to New York to be present at the opening of the United Nations Non-Proliferation Treaty Review.

The three hibakusha, Noriko Sakashita from Hiroshima, Japan, and Kazuhiro Yoshimura and Shigemitsu Tanaka from Nagasaki, Japan, each spoke to a hushed audience at a packed meeting room at the University of Pennsylvania’s Houston Hall. There the trio told their personal stories to some 100 people, including students as well as many members of the general public. Sakashita, Tanaka and Yoshimura have devoted their lives to telling their personal A-bomb stories in the belief that it is the most effective way to educate the public about the dangers of nuclear weapons.

Prof. Frank Chance provided two-way translations throughout the program. Sakashita was with her mother at the time of the 1945 atomic blast. She remembers walking with her mother as they attempted to return home and the many people they had to pass who were crying for help. Her mother spent the rest of her life feeling great guilt for being unable to help the many injured who were beyond help.

Yoshimura remembered the terrible suffering of the victims and recalled seeing how flesh melted from the victims as a result of the heat emanating from blast.

Thousands of hibakusha died directly from the effects of the radiation, which also resulted in cancer, infertility and birth defects among survivors. The black rain that fell soon after the blast was such that people who survived wished they had died immediately.

All three speakers spoke of being stigmatized and castigated by society. Sakashita also thought that her fiancé would reject her when he found out she was a hibakusha.

Tanaka shared artifacts with the audience, including a sample of ceramic roof tile that showed bubbles on the side exposed to the extreme heat generated by the A-bomb blast.

He also shared graphic photographs of his city before and after the blast. Dennis Morikawa, the Embassy of Japan’s Honorary Consult General in Philadelphia, delivered the event’s opening remarks and gave his thanks to the audience. Rob Buscher, a board member of the JACL Philadelphia Chapter, introduced the panel and also gave his own personal testimony.

Buscher’s great-grandparents immigrated to the United States in the 1920s from Hiroshima, and many of his family’s relatives perished on Aug. 6, when the first atomic bomb dropped on that city. For Buscher, the word “gaman,” which refers to “enduring the unbearable with patience and dignity,” applies to the hibakusha, whose strength and resilience inspired many of them to devote their lives to spreading a message of peace throughout the world.

The many organizations and individuals who were able to contribute to this event included Buscher, Frank and Linda Chance, William Gardner, the Harmony for Peace Foundation, Philadelphia Chapter of the JACL, Japan America Society of Greater Philadelphia, Farzah Khan, Nihon Hidakiko, Christian Morsink, Hiro and Sumie Nishikawa, Madame Saito, Tomoko Torii, Andy and Pat Toy, Kyoko Toyama, Dennis Morikawa (left), Embassy of Japan’s acting Consul General in Philadelphia, and Rob Buscher, Philadelphia Chapter JACL board member.

Our workshop was well-received, and there were many tears throughout our presentation. Some in attendance said it was an emotional workshop just seeing parents who were supportive of their LGBTQ children and hearing about some of the feelings their moms or dads had to overcome.

Oftentimes, LGBTQ children do not understand the depth of fear, sadness and shame that parents have to confront in order to move into an unconditional loving and accepting space. Recognizing these barriers often brings more compassion and understanding into the hearts of the LGBTQ children. I always tell the LGBTQ kids that parents need to be encouraging by our children... for it is often our children that help us through this journey with their love.

The next day, I received a thank-you email from Alex. In it, she said, "The event made me realize lots of things that I wasn’t aware of. It’s scary that I thought it was supporting my nephew by speaking in public, but I ended up getting more support than I realized I needed. Most importantly, on our way home, my daughter opened up and said a lot of things that were on her mind. I always thought we were close and she could tell me anything, but I was wrong.

At the QPOC conference, Alex mentioned stepping into an area of fear and uncertainty with vulnerability, honesty and courage... and that gave her daughter permission to do the same. What a beautiful example of parenting at its highest level. What a beautiful gift to give to your child.
