FROM BASEBALL AND BEYOND
A new book brings to life the groundbreaking MLB baseball career of Masanori "Mashi" Murakami.

Award-Winning Author on His New Children’s Book  Page 5
LGBT Equality Rally in San Gabriel Draws Much Support  Page 8
Little Tokyo Honors Sei Fujii With Monument  Page 9
Dear Editor,

At the risk of giving undeserved attention to Donald Trump and the political spectacle created by his campaign, I feel compelled to respond to his racist and anti-immigrant rhetoric in the context of the history of scapegoating, disenfranchisement and criminalization of immigrants in the United States.

Trump’s recent comments characterizing Mexican immigrants as “criminals” and “rapists” that need to be purged from the country fit a pattern of abuse that has been used not only against Mexicans and Mexican Americans, but against many groups of immigrants in the history of our country.

Since the founding of this country, various ethnic groups have been targeted with the same attitudes of xenophobia, intolerance and fear, often with amazingly similar depictions and rhetoric. From Irish and Eastern European newcomers to the East Coast in the 19th century to Chinese, Japanese and Filipino workers in the West Coast and more recently immigrants from Mexico and Central America throughout the country, waves of anti-immigrant sentiment and discourse leading to discriminatory laws have been pervasive.

In the mid-1800s, the Irish were seen as being violent alcoholics, illiterate and threat to the white race. They were turned away from places of employment with the pronouncement that “No Irish Need Apply.”

The Chinese were also the target of intense and often violent acts of racism beginning in the 1800s. He is brandishing a smoking gun with a knife tied in the United States I point you to Ronald Takaki’s “A Different Mirror: A History of Multicultural America” and Howard Zinn’s “A People’s History of the United States.”

In times when racism rears its ugly head, let us, as individuals, organizations and community groups, stand with our neighbors and friends, students and activists who will not tolerate being depicted as “criminals.” For readers who are interested in learning more about the accurate history of immigrant communities in the United States, I point you to Ronald Takaki’s “A Different Mirror: A History of Multicultural America” and Howard Zinn’s “A People’s History of the United States.”

Sincerely,

Aimee Mizuno,
JACL Board Member,
Santa Cruz-Walsonville, Calif.

The P.C.’s mission is to “educate on the past Japanese American experience and preserve, promote and help the current and future AAPI communities.”

JACL members? Y N □ $50 □ $100 □ $150 □ $200 □ other

Name _____________________________________________________________
Address ____________________________________________________________
City ________________________________________________________________
State ______________ Zip ______________
Phone ____________________________________________________________
Email ______________________________________________________________

Mail To
Pacific Citizen
250 E. First St., Suite #301
Los Angeles, CA 90012

Your donations will help build and preserve a cohesive library of the Pacific Citizen to educate future generations.
NIKKEI VOICE

BEING JA IS A CELEBRATION OF BEING AMERICAN

By Gil Asakawa

During a recent trip to San Francisco to attend the annual conference of the Asian American Journalists Assn., I squeezed in two readings from the new revised edition of my book, “Being Japanese American.” The two events reminded me why I wrote the book in the first place and why I love speaking to JA audiences. I love being JA!

The first edition was published in 2004, but a lot has happened since then: Japanese culture is even more popular now in the U.S. than a decade ago, but so is Asian American culture in general. The Internet was around in 2004, but social media has exploded on the scene since “Being JA” vol. 1.0 came out. During those years, Asian Americans have been early adopters and leading lights on blogs, YouTube, Facebook and Twitter — we’ve embraced digital media because we’re invisible in mainstream media.

Yet, even in mainstream media, we’ve made some huge strides: Hollywood movies still suffer from “yellowface” casting of whites in Asian roles, but there are more of us in starring and co-starring roles. John Cho was even cast as the romantic lead in a short-lived ABC sitcom this year, and that show’s “Fresh Off the Boat,” the comedy that showcases an AAPI family, is filming a second season.

So, it makes sense when Stone Bridge reached out and asked me to update the book with new text, additional historical photos and interviews with more JAs, Japanese Canadians and mixed-race Japanese.

The book covers the history of Japanese immigration and, of course, the WWII concentration camp experience, but it’s also about our culture, community, food and families, as well as the future of JAs. We’re not always accepted as American and have to deal with lingering racism here, but we’re not quite Japanese either. I love the things that make us Japanese (cultural values, food, taking off shoes inside) but also the things that set us apart. Even before we open our mouths, Japanese people know right away we’re American because of our hair, our clothes and the way we make eye contact.

>> See CELEBRATION on page 12

YOUTH PERSPECTIVE

MY JACL CONVENTION EXPERIENCE WAS EYE-OPENING

By Brandon Yee

I am truly grateful to have been selected as a youth representative of the Philadelphia Chapter to attend the 2015 Las Vegas National Convention from July 13-15. The experience was both eye-opening and inspirational.

As a youth representative, I met future leaders of the JACL, the youth delegates and representatives, in various stages of development. With youth members as accomplished as Kota Mizutani in proposing and passing HR 40 to youth members just beginning to understand their role, I now realize how important gaining youth membership and strong youth involvement are for the JACL. We are the generation of the future, and we can help change the world to be a better place.

Since being introduced to the JACL at a very young age, I admired the numerous contributions of my aunts and uncles, who have all been very active members of the JACL’s New Jersey and Philadelphia chapters. As a first-time attendee of the National Convention this year, I was impressed by how many youth participated at the national level, and I know that they are well on their way to carrying on the mission and vision of this organization.

The youth mixer was great for understanding how the JACL functions from the youth level and who it was that I will be working alongside in future years. The civic engagement presentations presented very well thought-out solutions on current issues and made me realize the diversity of issues tackled by the JACL. The National Board meetings were run very productively as Panel discussions held during this year’s National Convention made Yee realize the diversity of issues tackled by the JACL.

I witnessed the best minds of the JACL — young and old — contributing their ideas.

After observing how much influence the JACL has on the nation, attending the convention made me realize that I would like to be a more active part of this powerful organization. For me, meeting the youth and spending time with them was the No. 1 reason why I became inspired to join the JACL in the first place. Every one of them was so friendly, inviting and helpful; I really felt at home there! They did a great job explaining how they got involved and what they have learned from their experience. I was surprised to find that the newest youth delegates with the ability to vote were reading up on the issues and getting their bearings within the group, just as I was. But I know that everyone must start somewhere.

Just two summers ago in 2013, I was sponsored by the Japanese government to participate in the Japanese American Invitation Program for High School Students, a nine-day trip to Japan. The trip was absolutely amazing and life-changing, and it set me on the path to pursue a major in East Asian language and culture at the University of Pittsburgh, starting next month. This new interest was also a reason why I wanted to attend the JACL Convention.

I wanted to gain a new perspective on the world, and by attending the convention, I would get to see the viewpoint of a group of dedicated Japanese Americans who address modern societal issues. I also wanted to see how I could connect studying abroad in Japan with Japanese American civil rights.

Growing up, my involvement in the JACL was mostly a cultural and social experience, such as going to the Obon festival, experiencing taiko drum performances, learning origami and eating traditional Japanese foods. I had heard a few stories about the internment camps, but what happened to my Baachan and aunts and uncles seems so distant to me. In a way, I was shielded from all the negative racial injustice my family experienced in their lives.

>> See EXPERIENCE on page 12
News Briefs/APAs in the News

Two OC Teens Tragically Killed by a Falling Tree Branch in Yosemite

Two Orange County Asian American teenagers were tragically killed on Aug. 14 in Yosemite National Park by a falling tree branch as they were sleeping in their tent while on a camping trip. Dragon Kim, 14, of Tustin, Calif., and Justin Lee, 13, of Irvine, Calif., were identified as the victims.

Kim was entering his sophomore year at Orange County School of the Arts in Santa Ana, a highly acclaimed school of the arts. Lee was entering his freshman year at Northwood High School in Irvine. The two teens were on a camping trip with their families, when the incident happened on the Upper Pines Campground.

During the early morning hours, a branch from an oak tree fell on the two teens, killing Kim and Lee instantly.

According to the National Park Service, both teens died from their injuries by the time Park Rangers arrived on the scene. This is not the first time that an incident like this has occurred. The safety of visitors is always a priority for the National Park Service.

Sara Hutter Crowned Nisei Week Queen During 75th Annual Coronation Ball

Sara Kuniko Hutter, 22, of Los Alamitos, Calif., was crowned the 75th Nisei Week queen on Aug. 15 at the Aratani Theatre in Los Angeles.

Hutter, a graduate of the University of Southern California with a major in communications, officially represented the Orange County Nikkei Coordinating Council; her platform is the National Psoriasis Foundation. She currently works part-time for StockPrints, a company that manufactures custom socks. Hutter plans to work in public affairs or the nonprofit sector.

Veronica Ota was named First Princess, and Karen Mizoguchi was named Miss Tomodachi. This year’s Nisei Week court also includes Michelle Kaciri Hanabusa, Kelsey Nakaji Kwong, Canryun Michiko Sugita, and Tamara Mieko Teragawa.

As part of her reign, Hutter participated in the annual Nisei Week parade on Aug. 16 and will represent the Nisei Week Foundation throughout the year, making appearances regionally and internationally (including Nagoya, Japan).

Japanese MLB Players Hisashi Iwakuma and Ichiro Suzuki Make History

The Seattle Mariners’ Hisashi Iwakuma was named the American League Player of the Week on Aug. 17 after he threw a no-hitter against the Baltimore Orioles on Aug. 12 in a 3-0 victory. Iwakuma’s performance was the club’s fifth no-hitter (fourth by a single pitcher). He joins other Mariners pitchers Randy Johnson, Chris Bosio and Felix Hernandez.

Iwakuma also became the second Japanese-born pitcher to throw a no-hitter, joining Hideki Nomo, who has two no-hitters (1996 with the Dodgers and 2001 with the Boston Red Sox). And Ichiro Suzuki of the Miami Marlins recorded his 4,193rd career hit on Aug. 15, surpassing Ty Cobb in career hits with a first-inning single off the St. Louis Cardinals’ John Lackey. Suzuki’s total includes his totals from professional baseball in Japan and Major League Baseball. He added his 4,193rd hit later that same game.

Ichiro now holds the second-most hits of all time, second only to Pete Rose, with 4,256 hits. Suzuki earned 1,278 hits in Japan and has since added 2,914 hits since making his MLB career debut with the Seattle Mariners in 2001.

18 Million Voter Registration Campaign Launches

A new voting project, VoterVOX, is underway to help Asian Americans be better represented in the voting polls. According to a 2012 exit poll from the American Legal Defense and Education Fund, nearly 1 in 4 Asian Americans prefer to vote with help from an interpreter or translated materials. The funding is a major obstacle for many Asian American voters, prompting 18 Million Rising to fund VoterVOX.

The project will combine both volunteer multilingual speakers with limited-English speakers to assist voters at the polls and provide information in their language. 18 Million Rising is crowdfunding VoterVOX and is hoping to raise $50,000 by Sept. 2 as the nation begins to approach election season next year.

Asian Americans at Big Companies Changing Immigration Misconceptions

Google joins the list of top tech companies that now have Asian Americans as their CEOs. Today, the tech giant is one of the 25 percent of all tech start-ups with immigrant founders, according to “America’s New Immigrant Entrepreneurs, Then and Now” study. Sundar Pichai, Google’s new CEO, is one of many Asian Americans that are heading major tech companies in the United States, breaking the bamboo ceiling.

Other tech start-ups include eBay, PayPal, Sun Microsystems, Tesla and Yahoo, to name a few. Much like his counterparts, Pichai is becoming an example of breaking misconceptions that Asian Americans can only execute but not lead due to language and cultural barriers.

While the presence of Asian Americans sitting at the top in major tech companies is promising, today the percentage of women, blacks and Hispanics is still low. Efforts to change these figures are underway as the industry recognizes that resourcing people of color and different cultural balance is key to staying competitive. Immigration reform and discussions surrounding policy change is not only a tech industry concern but also a nationwide toppetop item for the presidential election next year.

Jeff Yang, columnist for the Wall Street Journal Online, poses an important question about Pichai’s influence in his CNN Opinion piece “If you see individuals with talent, skills and ambition as your most critical asset, why wouldn’t you try to corner the market on these assets?”

JACL MIKE M. MASAOKA CONGRESSIONAL FELLOWSHIP APPLICATION DEADLINE EXTENDED

The deadline for the JACL Mike M. Masaoka Congressional Fellowship has been extended to Monday, Aug. 31. The Masaoka Fellowship is designed to develop leaders for public service, particularly at the national level, and provides fellows the unique opportunity to be placed in a Congressional office where they will gain firsthand knowledge of policy creation.

Each paid fellowship will last for a period of at least one year and is located in Washington, D.C. There are two positions still available for the 2015-16 JACL Masaoka Congressional Fellowship program.

Candidates must be U.S. citizens, JACL members and students or young professionals who have completed at least an undergraduate degree. Preference will be given to those who have demonstrated a commitment to Asian American issues, particularly those affecting the Japanese American community. Communication skills, particularly in writing, are important. Applicants must submit a completed application form and one letter of reference. Completed applications and letters of recommendation should be emailed to poa@jcl.org.

For questions, please email policy@jcl.org or call (202) 223-1240.

Spending Has Never Been So Rewarding

Using your National JACL Credit Union VISA* credit card has never been easier. Accepted everywhere, any of your needs are always accessible.

With unbeatable rates, call today to apply and find the right card for you.

For more information, please call us or visit our branch today!

801-424-5225 800-544-8828 www.jacclcu.com
THE INKER’S SHADOW SHINES A FRESH LIGHT ON A YOUNG ARTIST’S COMING OF AGE

Author-illustrator Allen Say is expected to release his newest book “The Inker’s Shadow,” a coming-of-age autobiography and biography centered around his experience with discrimination and self-discovery, on Sept. 29. Say’s previous children’s book offerings include the Robert F. Sibert Honor winner “Drawing From Memory” and the Caldecott Medal winner “The Boy of the Three-Year Nap.”

His newest effort is the only non picture book Say has ever done. “Inker’s Shadow” tells the story of the author’s formative years in Japan when he served as an apprentice to Noro Shinpei. At the time, Shinpei was a post-war master cartoonist in Japan who taught Say about art and often made him draw copies of Michelangelo’s “David” and visit Vincent Van Gogh exhibitions.

“The Inker’s Shadow” follows Say’s character to an American military academy in Southern California, where he experiences discrimination among the cadets and teachers, all the while echoing his lifelong love for art.

“For this book, I picked out some of the episodes that are still floating in my head and arranged them into a story about my first years in America,” Say wrote in his author’s note. “It’s a patchwork of memories, and memories are unreliable, so I am calling this work of fiction made of real people and places I knew.”

Say was born in Yokohama in 1937 to a Korean father raised by a British family in Shanghai and a Japanese American mother born in California. According to an article from the Oregonian, Say lived with his mother and his mother’s uncle at a home near Tabuse, Japan. Say’s parents divorced when he was 8, and he found himself living with his grandmother until he was 12. When his father remarried, Say was given the opportunity to move to the United States. Hesitant and unsure, Say made the move with assistance from his father after speaking with Shinpei about the decision. He was placed in a military academy for boys in Glendora, Calif., where orange groves blanketed the city with a population of around 5,000 and one movie house. While in the military academy, Say learned to carry on elementary conversations in English, explaining to his classmates that trains existed in Japan.

After a year in the military academy, Say left to attend Citrus Union High School in nearby Azusa, Calif., and he moved into a hotel in order to continue his education at the school.

During high school, Say worked to make $12-$15 a week to cover his rent, which was $8.50 a week. Every four to five months, his mother would send a check for $10 even when Say didn’t ask for money. It was a fortune for Say that ultimately funded his dream for art, as he often used the money to purchase more paint than food at times.

“The Inker’s Shadow” will be available at booksellers on Sept. 29 for $19.99. Visit www.scholastic.com for more information or call (800) 724-6527, ext. 4.

— Pacific Citizen Staff
During his nationwide U.S. book tour, Masanori Murakami stopped in Whittier, Calif., and Little Tokyo in Los Angeles to meet and greet his fans.

FROM BASEBALL AND BEYOND WITH MASHI MURAKAMAMI

Masanori 'Mashi' Murakami made MLB baseball history when he became the first Japanese national to play in U.S. professional baseball. He made his debut with the San Francisco Giants as a left-handed relief pitcher in 1964.

Murakami went on to become the Giants' top reliever and also one of the most beloved players on that team's roster.
The baseball legend and author Rob Fitts travel the U.S. to meet fans and speak about a new book detailing Murakami’s experience in Major League Baseball.

By Connie K. Ho, Contributor

Before Yutaka Ishii of the Texas Rangers and ichiro Suzuki of the Miami Marlins, there was Masahiro “Mashi” Murakami, who became the first Japanese national to play in Major League Baseball. His story has now been documented by New York–based author Rob Fitts in his new work “Mashi: The Unfulfilled Baseball Dream of Masahiro Murakami, the First Japanese Major Leaguer.”

For more than two weeks in June, Murakami and Fitts traveled the U.S. to meet fans and speak about the book.

Fitts, author of books such as “Wally Yonamine: The Man Who Changed Baseball,” first had the idea to write the book in 2003. He had interviewed Murakami for another story and realized that there was a larger narrative at play. He began working on the book in 2012, completing a year of research.

“When I started a project, I read everything possible about them, anything that possibly could be relevant,” Fitts said. “It gave me the background to figure out what’s important.”

Fitts also traveled to Japan, spending a week with Murakami and a translator, as well as interviewing several former San Francisco Giants players who were teammates of Murakami.

“What was surprising about Mashi’s story was when I first thought about writing this book, I thought it was going to be the story of the difficulties a 30-year-old Japanese would encounter — the stereotypes against the Japanese were really strong back then. I thought it would be a book about perseverance, overcoming hardship, but it wasn’t,” Fitts said. “Mashi’s personality is so outgoing, so easygoing — he has a good sense of humor, he embraced American culture and he had very few hardships.”

Murakami and Fitts recently embarked on a nationwide tour to promote the book and to meet fans. They visited the U.S. Correspondent with the 50th anniversary of the first Japanese baseball player in the major leagues.

To raise funds for the tour, Fitts launched a Kickstarter campaign and was able to raise more than $5,000. Some of those who participated in the fundraiser were able to receive rewards such as signed memorabilia and copies of the book and the funds helped cover the travel costs of Tokyo-based Murakami. The Kickstarter campaign description listed some of the trials and tribulations Murakami faced as a baseball player.

“In March 1964, the Nankai Hawks of Japan’s Pacific League sent three teenagers to the U.S. to train with the San Francisco Giants’ junior league team. One of them was Murakami, a 6-foot left-handed pitcher who was sent to the Fresno Giants of the Single A California League. Murakami struggled in his first professional campaign and fit in.

“Sick of a left-handed relief pitcher for the pennant race, in September, the San Francisco Giants called up Mashi to the big leagues. With an inning of relief against the New York Mets on Sept. 1, Murakami became the first Japanese to appear in a major league game. Mashi went on to become the Giants’ top left-handed reliever and one of the most popular players on the star-studded team.

Not surprisingly, the Giants offered him a contract for the 1965 season. Murakami signed, announcing that he’d be transferred to stay in San Francisco. There was just one problem — the Nankai Hawks wanted him to return to Japan.

“The dispute over Murakami’s contract would last another winter and cause Major League Baseball to suspend all ties to Japan. Finally, in May, the two teams reached an agreement. Mashi would pitch for the Giants in 1965 and then would be allowed to decide where he’d wish to finish his career. Murakami pitched well and yearned to remain in the major leagues, but cultural ties and obligations forced him to return to Japan.”

Steps on the book tour included visits to Los Angeles and Whittier, Calif. The visits included remarks by Fitts, a Q&A session with Murakami and a screening of a clip from Yutaka Ishii’s upcoming documentary “Diamond Diplomacy,” which explores the relationship between U.S. and Japan via baseball.

One of the visits took place at the Japan Foundation in Los Angeles. Murakami spoke about his first pitcher in the major leagues against the New York Mets. He described how he walked up to the pitching mound, humming the “Star-Spangled Banner” song to become more at ease in front of a crowd of 40,000. He also shared stories about teammates, including his proud moment of making a list of legendary Dodgers pitcher Sandy Koufax.

“About 80 people attended. Most of them are local fans of MLB,” said Tatsuya Kato, a program of film for arts and culture at the Japan Foundation. “I am surprised local Americans have more interest in Mashi than local Japanese.”

Joseph Price, professor of religion studies and co-director of the Institute for Baseball Studies at Whittier College, enjoyed hearing the presentation at Whittier College and learning more about Murakami’s story. The evening was the first speaker series hosted by the college’s Institute for Baseball Studies.

“I knew that we were in store for a dynamic evening,” said Price.

During the evening presentation in Whittier, Murakami fielded a question from a former umpire and described an experience at Dodger Stadium where his pitch had appeared to be a strike but had been called a ball. Murakami gestured to the umpire, asking him what was wrong with the pitch. The umpire wanted Murakami to return to the mound, but Murakami instead took the main branch, tossed it in the air and then was ejected from the game by the umpire. For Murakami, the experience was significant in that, a week later, Japanese men approached him to thank him for acting in such a way. To them, it felt like a silent protest against the ways they had been treated at the internment camps in World War II.

Speaking to the crowd of over 100, Murakami also expressed that he would have liked to have pitched more for the Giants and had a longer career in the U.S. major leagues.

Reminiscing on his trip with Murakami, Fitts noted that it was fun to spend time with his subject after completing years of research and writing for the biography.

“It was a trip of a lifetime,” he said.

During his book tours, Murakami took the time to personally sign his book and greet his fans.

Mashi Murakami (right) and author Rob Fitts signed numerous copies of the book during their nationwide tour.
SUPPORTERS OF LGBT EQUALITY RALLY AGAINST HOMOPHOBIA IN THE SAN GABRIEL VALLEY

By Marshall Wong

Ten years ago, LGBT supporters gathered in victimized process in the San Gabriel Valley — the heart of Los Angeles’ Chinese American community — against same-sex marriage and LGBT equality. It was among hundreds of Chinese people, young and old, led by religious extremists, carrying signs with hateful messages targeting the LGBT community. Even more disturbing was that these protests were virtually unchallenged, and coverage by the Chinese-language media made it appear that homophobia was a Chinese cultural norm.

Those protests in 2005 catalyzed the formation of API Equality-LA, a grassroots organization committed to advancing LGBT equality in the Asian American community. Now 10 years later, as a result of these efforts, there has been a sea change in public opinion in support of LGBT civil rights. On July 19, barely a month after the Supreme Court’s decision that legalized same-sex marriage throughout the U.S., API Equality-LA brought the conservative Chinese clergy in the San Gabriel Valley to a public meeting on July 19 to protest the Supreme Court ruling.

API Equality-LA, Asian Americans Advancing Justice-LA and other allies sprang into action and held more than 125 supporters to rally across the street from the church, leading the homophobe march.

In the face of hate and intolerance, the crowd delivered a message of hope and equality. LGBT supporters chanted: “Open hearts, open minds; this is how our community shines” throughout the organized gathering.

Speakers included Congresswoman Judy Chu, L.A. Community College Board Members Mike Eng, Mike Fong and Scott Savidge, and San Gabriel Mayor John P. West Covina Mayor Pro Tem James Tuna, and Rosemead City Council Member Polly Low.

Several ministers, including Rev. Neri Celi, Rev. Mark Nakagowa and Rev. Gay Obra also spoke of their support for the LGBT community, demonstrating that intolerance does not speak for all Christians.

In addition, representatives of Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays (PFLAG), CCA (Greater Los Angeles chapter), Asian Pacific AIDS Intervention Team and Chinese Rainbow Assn. were also in attendance. It was assumed as a demonstration of the growing breadth of support for LGBT equality in the Asian American community.

In contrast, the opposition drew fewer than 20 supporters illustrating their declining influence.

Said API Equality-LA Executive Director Ellen Ma: “Throughout history, Chinese Americans have fought back against discriminatory laws, based on racial and ethnic identity. Legalization and hate violence. Based on this legacy we should be the first to stand up against all forms of bigotry, including homophobia. Today’s outpouring of support for marriage equality and LGBT rights is a powerful symbol of the progress we’ve made. Together, we are making history.”

SECRET MANZANAR GUAYULE RUBBER PROJECT TO BE SPOTLIGHTED IN EDUCATIONAL FORUM

LOS ANGELES — The Secret Manzaran Guayule Rubber Project, a program sponsored by the Manzaran Rubber Project Committee, will be held on Aug. 31 at 1 p.m. at the Mertz Park Recreation room in Garden, Calif. Rubber was in short supply during World War II, and with the United States in need of new source of rubber, the United States Government invested $77 million to support the Emergency Rubber Project (ERP) in Salinas, Calif., where more than 1,000 scientists and technicians worked to plant and grow 32,000 acres of Guayule, a plant native to Mexico. As part of the Guayule rubber project, sponsored by a Manzaran Rubber Project, the plant had to be grown on the island of Guayule, a plant native to Mexico.

The event was organized by Dr. Glenn H. Kaye, chair of the Manzaran Rubber Project Committee, and the event will be held on Aug. 31 at 1 p.m. at the Mertz Park Recreation room in Garden, Calif. The project was supported by the Manzaran Rubber Project Committee, which has been active since 1995, when they began raising funds to support the Manzaran Rubber Project Committee.

The event is free and open to the public. The event can be found at 56 Mertz Park Dr. For more information, call (310) 656-5102 or e-mail info@manzanarcommittee.org.
LITTLE TOKYO DEDICATES SEI FUJII MEMORIAL LANTERN

The galvanized steel monument honors the life and legacy of the community newspaper publisher and civil rights activist.

A monument honoring newspaper publisher and civil rights activist Sei Fujii was dedicated in Little Tokyo on Aug. 1 at the former site of the Kaito Mainichi, to pay homage to Fujii's lifelong efforts to better further the lives of Japanese Americans.

Fujii, who immigrated to the U.S. in 1903, graduated from USC Law School in 1911, but was not able to become an attorney because he was not an American citizen. However, he worked alongside classmate J. Marion Wright, a civil rights attorney, and together they appealed and won a U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1926 to allow Japanese physicians in Los Angeles to construct one of the first Japanese hospitals in the country.

Fujii and Wright also challenged the Alien Land Act, which prevented Japanese and other “aliens” ineligible for citizenship from owning land in California. In Fujii v. California, thedao was able to appeal the challenge to the California Supreme Court. The California Alien Land Law was ruled unconstitutional in 1926.

Fujii also became publisher of the Kaito Mainichi, a daily Japanese newspaper. During his work there, he worked to inform and unite the growing immigrant community within Little Tokyo.

In 1954, Fujii finally became a U.S. citizen. He passed away from a heart attack at age 72, only 51 days after being granted citizenship.

The 8-foot-tall galvanized steel lantern, located on Second Street at the entrance to the Japanese Village Plaza, was designed by Miles Endo of Studio Endo and is an interpretation of a lantern located in Fujii’s birthplace in the city of Iwakuni in Yamaguchi Prefecture. The Little Tokyo Historical Society helped raise more than $30,000 to bring about the lantern’s completion. The LTHS also produced the award-winning 2012 documentary Sei Fujii, which tells the story of his life and work.

The monument was dedicated on Aug. 1 at the former site of the Kaito Mainichi in Little Tokyo. The ceremony included words of appreciation from Consul General Hiroshi Furusawa, Idaho Japanese Association President Rika Torres, Honorary Consul Robert Hirai and State of Idaho Lt. Gov. Brad Little.

SNOBLL WEST’S PETITION TO NEGATE TUNA CANYON’S LANDMARK STATUS DENIED

Judge Jeanne O'Donnell on Aug. 12 denied Snowball West’s petition to negate the 2013 resolution by the Los Angeles City Council to set aside one acre of land — now the site of the Verdugo Hills Golf Course — for a memorial to the Tuna Canyon Detention Station.

Present at the decision, which was handed down at the Stanley Mosk Courthouse, were Tuna Canyon Detention Station Coalition members Lloyd Hitt, Nancy Oka, Kazui Sahara, Bill Stiles, Marc Suzuki and Nancy Takayama.

After three trips to the Stanley Mosk Courthouse with coalition members, O'Donnell recalled, “We look forward to working with the owners to make a memorial onsite. We are pleased that the city's designation was upheld as legal.”

Upon hearing O'Donnell's ruling, Snowball West lawyer Fred Gaines argued that the resolution was faulty because the land designated was a geometric shape that was drawn on a photograph, further stating that a memorial cannot be built with information that is not concise.

Snowball West Investments currently owns the golf course and it wants to build a housing subdivision on the property, which is located in Tujunga, Calif. During World War II, Tuna Canyon Detention Station held more than 2,000 people, mostly Japanese Americans. At one point, there were seven barracks, an infirmary, mess hall and office buildings. The camp closed in 1943 and buildings were torn down to make way for the golf course.

Snowball West has acknowledged the significance of the area but has maintained that formal landmark status will make development more difficult.

In the meantime, more details on the site may be necessary. If Snowball West appeals the decision, the current City Council would then review the new report. The current makeup of the City Council has changed since the 2013 council voted unanimously in favor of the resolution, introduced by then-Councilmember Richard Alarcon.

O'Donnell is the third judge on this case. She is expected to make her final ruling in the next few weeks.

CONGRATULATE THE 2015 SCHOLARSHIP WINNERS IN THE PACIFIC CITIZEN

SPACE RESERVATION DEADLINE: SEPTEMBER 4, 2015

FOR MORE INFORMATION CONTACT: Susan Yokoyama at 213.620.1767 or busmgr@pacificcitizen.org

Consul General Hiroshi Furusawa Hosts Reception for New Honorary Consul

Robert Hirai is appointed Honorary Consul of Japan in Idaho.

Consul General Hiroshi Furusawa of the Consular Office of Japan in Portland, Ore., hosted a reception recently to recognize the appointment of Robert Hirai of Boise as Honorary Consul of Japan in Idaho.

More than 100 people were in attendance, which included state and city officials, congressional staff, business executives, family and friends.

In his remarks, Consul General Furusawa expressed his goal of expanding the ties of both commercial and cultural exchanges between the nation of Japan and the state of Idaho.

He has visited with the mayors in the Treasure Valley to encourage the establishment of a Sister City relationship, which will lead to more frequent people-to-people exchanges, thus nurturing the understanding and friendship of people at the grass-roots level.

Lt. Gov. Brad Little reiterated those comments in his remarks, in which he also cited the strong ties between Idaho and Japan and the importance of maintaining and growing these relationships.

Honorary Consul Hirai is a native of Idaho and has a vast background in finance and organizational development. He was previously the president of the Boise Valley Japanese American Citizens League. The Government of Japan, in accordance with regular practice, appoints Honorary Consuls in order to maintain the interests of their country and citizens, as well as promote cultural exchanges with foreign countries. The official government offices cannot be established.
NCWNP
Fun Nikkei Dog and Cupcakes Scholarship and Youth Fundraiser
Sacramento, CA
Aug. 29; 5:30 p.m.
Buddhist Church of Florin
7239 Pritchard Road
Price: Ticket prices vary.
Support the Florin chapter’s youth with hot dogs and cupcakes at its Scholarship and Youth Fundraiser this year. Ticket orders, sponsors, donors and volunteers are all encouraged to support this year’s event. Bingo and a raffle are among the few activities anticipated this year, along with a dinner. Info: Email Cindy Kakutani at ctkakutani@frontiernet.net.

‘Fire of Freedom’ Premiere
San Francisco, CA
Sept. 10-13 and 17-20; 8 p.m.
Fort Mason Center
1 Franklin St.
Price: General admission $16 Fort Mason Center presents in association with Asian Improv aRts, API Cultural Center and the Chinese Historical Society of America the ‘Fire of Freedom,’ a new site-specific multimedia immersive dance piece by Lenora Lee Dance. Info: Email lenoraleadance@gmail.com, call (415) 345-7675 or visit www.lenoraleadance.com.

39th Japantown Kimono Day
San Francisco, CA
Sept. 14
Kionkunriya Building
1561 Webster St.
Put on a kimono and join the annual kimono celebration in Japantown. Enjoy shopping and dining with local shops and restaurants participating in the festivities. Advance registration is required, and kimono rentals are available. Special workshops will include a special dance from the San Francisco Awakko-Ren with an odori performance. Info: Register at sfkimonoday@gmail.com or visit http://sfkimonoday.blogspot.com/.

EDC
‘Samurai’ Exhibit
Worcester, MA
Sept. 6
Worcester Art Museum
55 Salisbury St.
Price: Adult $14
Editor and founder of Giant Robot Magazine Eric Nakamura will explore the history and popular culture of the samurai at this groundbreaking exhibit, which will combine historical Japanese arms and armor from the Worcester Art Museum and John Woodman Higgins collections with work by contemporary artists inspired by samurai and their enduring myth. Info: Visit www.worcesterart.org or call (617) 595-7646.

NCWNP
Fun Nikkei Dog and Cupcakes Scholarship and Youth Fundraiser
Sacramento, CA
Aug. 29; 5:30 p.m.
Buddhist Church of Florin
7239 Pritchard Road
Price: Ticket prices vary.
Support the Florin chapter’s youth with hot dogs and cupcakes at its Scholarship and Youth Fundraiser this year. Ticket orders, sponsors, donors and volunteers are all encouraged to support this year’s event. Bingo and a raffle are among the few activities anticipated this year, along with a dinner. Info: Email Cindy Kakutani at ctkakutani@frontiernet.net.

‘Fire of Freedom’ Premiere
San Francisco, CA
Sept. 10-13 and 17-20; 8 p.m.
Fort Mason Center
1 Franklin St.
Price: General admission $16 Fort Mason Center presents in association with Asian Improv aRts, API Cultural Center and the Chinese Historical Society of America the ‘Fire of Freedom,’ a new site-specific multimedia immersive dance piece by Lenora Lee Dance. Info: Email lenoraleadance@gmail.com, call (415) 345-7675 or visit www.lenoraleadance.com.

39th Japantown Kimono Day
San Francisco, CA
Sept. 14
Kionkunriya Building
1561 Webster St.
Put on a kimono and join the annual kimono celebration in Japantown. Enjoy shopping and dining with local shops and restaurants participating in the festivities. Advance registration is required, and kimono rentals are available. Special workshops will include a special dance from the San Francisco Awakko-Ren with an odori performance. Info: Register at sfkimonoday@gmail.com or visit http://sfkimonoday.blogspot.com/.

EDC
‘Samurai’ Exhibit
Worcester, MA
Sept. 6
Worcester Art Museum
55 Salisbury St.
Price: Adult $14
Editor and founder of Giant Robot Magazine Eric Nakamura will explore the history and popular culture of the samurai at this groundbreaking exhibit, which will combine historical Japanese arms and armor from the Worcester Art Museum and John Woodman Higgins collections with work by contemporary artists inspired by samurai and their enduring myth. Info: Visit www.worcesterart.org or call (617) 595-7646.

PNW
‘Growing Up Behind Barbed Wire’
Kent, WA
Sept. 15; 3 p.m.
Kent Lutheran Church
335 Second Ave. South
Price: Donation $10
Following a showing of “The Legacy of Heart Mountain” by David Ono, Amy and Lilly Kato will share their personal recollections of being forced to move from Kent to Heart Mountain. These two sisters were teenagers at the time of E.O. 9066. The event will be moderated by Puylup Valley Chapter VP Eileen Yamada Lampere and is sponsored by the Greater Kent Historical Society. Info: Visit www.gkhfs.org or call (254) 854-4330.

20th Annual Japanese American New Year Celebrations
Mochitsuki
Portland, WA
Jan. 31
Portland State University
1026 S.W. Broadway
Portland’s annual Japanese New Year celebration has been going on since 1996. The goal of Mochitsuki is to celebrate tradition by sharing Japanese and American culture. Portland welcomes all to join the celebration while enjoying great food, performances and activities. Info: Visit www.mochitupdx.org.
In Memoriam

TOSHIKO SHIMOURA

Toshiko K. Shimoura, age 94, Feb. 8, 2015. Beloved wife of the late James N. Shimoura; dearest mother of James, Linda, and Tom H. Shimoura; sister of the late Kiyoshi (Iwona) Katsumoto and Minoru (Ichiko) Katsumoto; and beloved grandmother of Clare, Jamie, and Nicole Shimoura. She was also survived by her lifelong friends, especially the late Fred Miyamoto, Mary T. Miyamoto, and Daniel Kato.

Kei enjoyed spending time with her friends and relatives, especially her nieces and nephews. She was a member of the United Church of Christ and was instrumental in the formation of the United Church Women's Auxiliary. She was also a member of the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. She was an avid reader and enjoyed listening to classical music.

Kei passed away at her home in Castroville, CA, on July 26, 2015. She was predeceased by her husband, Rev. H. John Yamashita; brother, James Katsumoto; and sister, Hideo Katsumoto. She is survived by her children, Steven and Susan (Gerald) Hane; daughter, Karen Tei Yamashita; and granddaughters, Shira and Shyloe. She was also survived by many nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

Takahashi, Masao, 91, Modesto, CA; July 25; he was a 100th and 442nd veteran; he was predeceased by his brother, Hideo (Festo) and Yoshie (Marden) Takahashi; sisters, Mito Takeshita and Toshi Nakahira; he is survived by his wife, Eimi; children, Larry (Susan Markee), Donna (Dwayne McMullen), and Gail Finney; brother-in-law, Ron (Geri) Talby; nieces, nephews and other relatives; gc: 2.

Takase, Toshi, 83, Los Angeles, CA; July 20; he was a 442nd veteran; he was predeceased by his wife, Suzanne Mayumi Toshi; children, Marcus Muneo Toshi, Jared and Kirik Nichikawa; siblings, Dean (Giselle) Toshi, Suzanne (Michael) Tobin and Gill Finney; sister-in-law, Julie (Tim) Harmon; brother-in-law, Ron (Geri) Talby; he is also survived by other relatives and friends; gc: 2.

TRIBUTE

YUKIKO YUGE

Yukiko Yuge (9) passed away on May 8, 2015, in Gardena, CA. She is predeceased by her husband, Kenji Yuge, and son, Steven Yuge; survived by her son, Kenneth (Dora) Yuge; grandson, Keith Yuge; sister, Mikio (Ryo) Sakamoto; brother-in-law, Mario Sakamoto; also survived by many nieces, nephews and other relatives.

A private funeral service was held on Thursday, May 21, 2015, at I.A. Horton-Honpa Nikkomi Buddhist Temple. (213) 749-1449 www.kubotanikkeimorial.com

TOSHIYE OHIGASHI

Toshiye Ohigashi (92) passed away on June 28, 2015, in Santa Monica, CA. She is survived by her husband, Yosiofuki Ohigashi; son, Steven Ohigashi; grandchildren, Kiley Ohigashi; children-in-law, Ryo Sakamoto and Ryo Sakamoto; also survived by many nieces, nephews and other relatives in the U.S. and Japan.

A memorial service was held on Friday, July 31, 2015, at West LA Buddhist Temple. (213) 749-1449 www.kubotanikkeimorial.com

TRIBUTE

KEIJI JOHN HIRAGA

Keiji (Ki) Hiraga was born on Oct. 31, 1920, in Bohol, Mindanao Islands, Philippines. He was predeceased by his parents, Arikawa Saeko and Arikawa Toshiyuki. He is survived by his wife, Reiko; children, John Hiroshi Hiraga, John Ken Miyamoto, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; grandchildren, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; and great-grandchildren, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga. He was also survived by his siblings, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; and nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

Kei enjoyed spending time with his friends and relatives, especially his nieces and nephews. He was a member of the United Church of Christ and was instrumental in the formation of the United Church Women's Auxiliary. He was also a member of the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. He was an avid reader and enjoyed listening to classical music.

Kei passed away at his home in Castroville, CA, on July 26, 2015. He was predeceased by his husband, Rev. H. John Yamashita; brother, James Katsumoto; and sister, Hideo Katsumoto. He is survived by his children, Steven and Susan (Gerald) Hane; daughter, Karen Tei Yamashita; and granddaughters, Shira and Shyloe. He was also survived by many nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

KEIJI JOHN HIRAGA

Keiji (Ki) Hiraga was born on Oct. 31, 1920, in Bohol, Mindanao Islands, Philippines. He was predeceased by his parents, Arikawa Saeko and Arikawa Toshiyuki. He is survived by his wife, Reiko; children, John Hiroshi Hiraga, John Ken Miyamoto, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; grandchildren, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; and great-grandchildren, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga. He was also survived by his siblings, John Ken Miyamoto, John Hiroshi Hiraga, and John Hiroshi Hiraga; and nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

Kei enjoyed spending time with his friends and relatives, especially his nieces and nephews. He was a member of the United Church of Christ and was instrumental in the formation of the United Church Women's Auxiliary. He was also a member of the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. He was an avid reader and enjoyed listening to classical music.

Kei passed away at his home in Castroville, CA, on July 26, 2015. He was predeceased by his husband, Rev. H. John Yamashita; brother, James Katsumoto; and sister, Hideo Katsumoto. He is survived by his children, Steven and Susan (Gerald) Hane; daughter, Karen Tei Yamashita; and granddaughters, Shira and Shyloe. He was also survived by many nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

TRIBUTE

ASAKO SAKAI YAMASHITA

Asako Sakai Yamashita died at the age of 98 in Santa Cruz, CA. Born in San Francisco, she was the fifth child in a family of nine children. Her Japanese immigrant parents, Toshi and Kikako Sakai, opened the Uoji Sakai Fish Market, operated by the family for 138 years in Japan.

Asako was predeceased by her husband, Rev. H. John Yamashita; brother, James Katsumoto; and sister, Hideo Katsumoto. She is survived by her children, Steven and Susan (Gerald) Hane; daughter, Karen Tei Yamashita; and granddaughters, Shira and Shyloe. She was also survived by many nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

Asako enjoyed spending time with her friends and relatives, especially her nieces and nephews. She was a member of the United Church of Christ and was instrumental in the formation of the United Church Women's Auxiliary. She was also a member of the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. She was an avid reader and enjoyed listening to classical music.

Asako passed away at her home in Castroville, CA, on July 26, 2015. She was predeceased by her husband, Rev. H. John Yamashita; brother, James Katsumoto; and sister, Hideo Katsumoto. She is survived by her children, Steven and Susan (Gerald) Hane; daughter, Karen Tei Yamashita; and granddaughters, Shira and Shyloe. She was also survived by many nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

TRIBUTE

TOSHIYASU OHIGASHI

Toshiyasu Ohigashi, 96, Fremont, CA; July 7; he was a veteran of World War II and the Korean War; he was predeceased by his wife, Yone; children, Kiyoko, Kenji, and Kenji; grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi; and great-grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi. He is survived by his children, Kiyoko, Kenji, and Kenji; grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi; and great-grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi. He was also survived by his siblings, Toshi and Toshi; and nieces, nephews, and other relatives.

Toshiyasu enjoyed spending time with his friends and relatives, especially his nieces and nephews. He was a member of the United Church of Christ and was instrumental in the formation of the United Church Women's Auxiliary. He was also a member of the American Association of University Women and the League of Women Voters. He was an avid reader and enjoyed listening to classical music.

Toshiyasu passed away at his home in Castroville, CA, on July 26, 2015. He was predeceased by his wife, Yone; children, Kiyoko, Kenji, and Kenji; grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi; and great-grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi. He is survived by his children, Kiyoko, Kenji, and Kenji; grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi; and great-grandchildren, Toshi, Toshi, and Toshi. He was also survived by his siblings, Toshi and Toshi; and nieces, nephews, and other relatives.
CELEBRATION >>
continued from page 3

Also, the way we speak — some of us know a lot, some hardly any at all — marks us as sort of Japanese. That’s because most JA families arrived in the U.S. between the 1880s and 1924, when immigration from Japan was sealed off. So, some of our culture, including some of our words, are old fashioned and little-used today.

My favorite distinctly JA word is one I like to use to describe my book: “Being Japanese American” is a perfect “benjo book.”

Benjo, or “O-benjo,” means “bathroom” to JAs, and to Japanese way back in the day. But Japanese people today use more refined words. The most polite term is oni-sui, or “place to wash hands.” But most common today is toi-toi, which is how Japanese pronounce “toilet.” But JAs still use the old word. At the end of every big holiday feast as people are leaving with the natori or “leftovers,” you’ll hear someone yell out, “Wait a minute, I have to go benjo first.”

I tell audiences that my book is a perfect benjo book. Japanese Americans guffaw and everyone else gives me a quizzical look Japaneses today use more refined words. The most polite term is oni-sui, or “place to wash hands.” But most common today is toi-toi, which is how Japanese pronounce “toilet.” But JAs still use the old word. At the end of every big holiday feast as people are leaving with the natori or “leftovers,” you’ll hear someone yell out, “Wait a minute, I have to go benjo first.”

I tell audiences that my book is a perfect benjo book. Japanese Americans guffaw and everyone else gives me a quizzical look. Japanese use more refined words. The most polite term is oni-sui, or “place to wash hands.” But most common today is toi-toi, which is how Japanese pronounce “toilet.” But JAs still use the old word. At the end of every big holiday feast as people are leaving with the natori or “leftovers,” you’ll hear someone yell out, “Wait a minute, I have to go benjo first.”

I often sign my books with the phrase, “To celebrate JA culture is to celebrate American culture!” But I’m going to add a new phrase next to my signature: “Be JA!”

EXPERIENCE >>
continued from page 3

During the convention, I learned more about social justice, racial equality and current political issues. It really surprised me that JACL was so involved in so many current civil rights activities. I always thought from growing up that the organization was now more for maintaining our civil liberties and the group was most active during the time of internment and terrible segregation. That turned out to definitely not be the case.

It also surprised me that the JACL not only tackled political and social problems regarding Japanese Americans but also has recently expanded its influence to other minority groups such as African Americans and the LGBTQQIAAP community. It was extremely thought-provoking and valuable to hear first-hand stories from LGBT members about their hardships and struggles growing up.

Now that I’m of voting age, learning about political issues such as these is becoming more important for my development as a Japanese American citizen. I now see the JACL as an invaluable organization for me to be a part of. There, I can build up my political awareness and views in hopes to contribute to the JACL and the world.

All in all, I really enjoyed my experience as a youth representative in the 2015 National Convention, and I wish to spread awareness of our existence to many more people. I have learned so much about the goals of the JACL as well as its legacy from the past. Seeing how the JACL functions first-hand, I am certain that I would like to become a more active member and participate in fighting whatever social or political issue that may arise.

From what I saw during the convention, the JACL will only grow larger and widen its powerful, positive influence to minority groups around the globe. We are living in a rapidly evolving world, and the issues of today can only be solved through the dedicated, strategic approach of experienced, informed civil rights advocates.

I have high hopes that the JACL will continue its strong influence and aim to make the world a better place.

Brandon Yee is the JACL Philadelphia Chapter Youth Representative.

Having Trouble Hearing?

We have a solution! Introducing Ultra Hearing Aids, exclusively from HearUSA, the first and only hearing aid clinically proven* by two separate studies to provide better than normal hearing in demanding listening situations, such as:

- Noisy restaurants
- Movie theaters and shopping malls
- Family get-togethers

FREE Demonstration of the new Ultra Hearing Aids! Call for details.

CALL TOLL FREE: 855.804.5652
Over 30 California Locations • www.hearusa.com

*Studies conducted at University of Northern Colorado (Dr. Myron Goldberg Research Center 2011) and molds containing 34.8% silicone for the Ultra hearing aid and a 34% silicone mold for mono ear hearing aids. The results are statistically significant as determined by an independent group. Results may vary. This product is not intended to prevent, treat, cure or relieve hearing loss.

Julie Fixelson, JACI, CEO & Southern Division Manager

Providing Total Hearing Care in many Southern California locations and serving the Japanese American Community.